

Paul McCartney's tribute concert to Linda

page 20

Marathon

INSIDE
16 page supplement special

Great weekend of Sport

Scott wins it for the Scots
pages 27,34

Shearer takes Newcastle into FA Cup final pages 28,29

HALF PRICE BODEN SUMMER SHIRTS TAKEN 2 PAGE 46 SAVE £21.00

30p
EVERY WEEKDAY

Allies strengthen forces on all fronts

Nato puts 600 planes into air war

By MICHAEL EVANS, IAN BRODIE AND TOM WALKER

NATO reinforcements, adding another 90 aircraft and an extra carrier for the attacks on Yugoslavia, were unveiled yesterday as the latest evidence of the alliance governments' resolve to maintain a long-haul air campaign.

Although the number of troops deployed to Albania and the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia could also more than double in the next few weeks, Robin Cook, the Foreign Secretary, reaffirmed that there would be no U-turn in NATO's policy to pursue the air campaign in preference to a ground offensive.

Sending in ground forces, he said, would cause casualties on both sides. However, he said Britain had troops on short notice to move to Macedonia to reinforce the 4,300 already there, and their possible deployment was "under daily review". He was referring to the 4,000-man Irish Guards battle group in Germany.

Underlining the growing concern about the fate of ethnic Albanians inside Kosovo, Mr Cook said he had been told that 400,000 people were now living in the woods and mountains, hiding from the Yugoslav forces.

He added that Hashim Thaci, the leading Kosovo Liberation Army figure who headed the Albanian delegation at the Rambouillet peace talks, had phoned him from Kosovo to back the air campaign. Mr Thaci had also described how people were hiding in terror in Kosovo, with little food and in bleak conditions. Snow had fallen that morning in the hills, Mr Cook said.

The extensive reinforcements, consisting of 82 more US aircraft and the Royal Navy aircraft carrier HMS Invincible, with seven Sea Harriers, accompanied by the destroyer HMS Newcastle and the Royal Fleet Auxiliary Fort Austin, were a "visible demonstration of our commitment to complete the job of forcing President Milosevic to reverse the ethnic cleansing of Kosovo", Mr Cook said.

The additional aircraft will bring NATO's air armada total to more than 600 planes.

Despite the continuing focus on air power, American officials confirmed that there were "standby" plans for the use of ground troops in Kosovo, but insisted an intensified air campaign would be sufficient to meet NATO's military objectives.

David Leavy, for the US National Security Council, said NATO had done an assessment for ground forces in a hostile environment which could be updated quickly. He added: "There has not been a request for ground troops from the NATO commanders and President Clinton has no intention of introducing them, but that planning remains on the shelf if necessary."

The same message came from William Cohen, the US Defence Secretary, who said that the idea of ground troops remained hypothetical, but the plans could be updated fairly quickly.

General Hugh Shelton,

While we keep all options under review at all times, that is not our plan.

He added: "A land invasion would be a massive undertaking and would take time to assemble. The casualties would potentially be large. And the civilian population would be at Milosevic's mercy."

However, Paskal Milo, the Albanian Foreign Minister, made it clear yesterday in a televised link-up to a press conference at the Ministry of Defence in London that his government would support NATO using the country's territory and airspace for any action against the Yugoslav forces in Kosovo.

He said: "The Albanian Government is ready to accept other ground troops from NATO. We now have decided to give NATO the rights to control all our airspace, ports and any other kind of military infrastructure in Albania."

Slavko Curuvija, a newspaper editor and one of Mr Milosevic's most outspoken critics, was shot dead yesterday, reviving speculation that he was a central figure in a planned coup against the Yugoslav President.

On a day when an air of tension spread over Belgrade, the embattled authorities diverted attention from the first chilling signs of desperation in the regime by showing the confession on state television of an Australian aid worker, who admitted to performing undercover intelligence tasks in Kosovo.

The spy charges against Steve Pratt, who faces up to 20 years in jail under Yugoslavia's martial law rules, provided a welcome flip for Serbs on their Easter Sunday, the most important day in the Orthodox calendar.

NATO said that bombing was restrained yesterday partly in deference to the Orthodox Easter, but poor weather also played a part.

Yesterday the Pope expressed his fellow feeling for "our Orthodox brothers" in Yugoslavia.

In a special address, he said that a yearning for real peace was "pervading the world as this millennium draws to a close".

Cate Blanchett arriving for the Bafta awards where she was named best actress for her performance in the period piece Elizabeth. The film took five awards. Report, page 3

Tories poised to back elected Lords

By JAMES LANDALE
POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT

TORY chiefs will this week give the clearest signal yet that the party is on the brink of backing radical proposals for a directly elected House of Lords.

A commission set up by William Hague will conclude that a future second chamber must be at the very least predominantly elected. That is in stark contrast to the Government's apparent favoured option of a largely nominated second chamber with a small indirectly elected element.

The commission, chaired by the former Lord Chancellor Lord Mackay of Clashfern, is also expected to rule out any reduction of the upper house's powers to act as a check on the executive.

The Government gave a strong hint in its recent White Paper on the Lords that a reformed chamber should have its powers trimmed to avoid encroaching on the Commons' constitutional superiority.

Ministers fear that a second chamber with too much democratic legitimacy will repeatedly challenge the Commons and cause legislative gridlock.

According to senior Tory sources, the Mackay report, to be published on Friday, will put forward two broad options for a reformed House of Lords: either a predominantly or wholly elected upper chamber.

Although the Commission is technically non-prescriptive and does not tie Mr Hague's hands, it paves the way for the Tory leader to back a democratic upper house.

"[The new policy] may include 100 per cent of Mackay, or just part of it," one Shadow Cabinet member said. "But it would be very unlikely not to include any Mackay at all."

SPORT: THE WEEKEND'S BIG RESULTS

Rugby Union:

Scotland took the Five Nations' Championship after an injury-time try gave Wales a 32-31 victory over England. Scotland had beaten France 36-22 on Saturday.

Football:

Newcastle United booked their ticket to FA Cup Final, beating Tottenham Hotspur 2-0 in extra time. They must wait to learn who they will meet at Wembley on May 22. Manchester United and Arsenal drew their semi-final 0-0 after extra time and will replay on Wednesday. The Old Firm will meet again in the Scottish Cup Final after Rangers beat St Johnstone 2-0. Celtic beat Dundee United by a similar margin on Saturday.

Motor-racing:

Mika Hakkinen repeated his success of last year to win the Brazilian Grand Prix for McLaren. Michael Schumacher was second and Heinz-Harald Frentzen third.

Cricket:

England lost by nine runs in the one-day international against India at Sharjah, to be eliminated from the Coca Cola Cup.

Boxing:

Prince Naseem Hamed retained his WBO featherweight title when his fight against Paul Ingle was stopped in the eleventh round.

Horse-racing:

Bobbyjo, ridden by Paul Carberry, won the Grand National at 10-1, followed by Blue Charm (25-1). Call It A Day (7-1) and Addington Boy (10-1)

Princess Margaret recovers after scalding feet in bath

By ALAN HAMILTON

PRINCESS MARGARET is bedridden and receiving regular medical attention at Windsor Castle a month after burning her feet in a scalding bath while on holiday in the Caribbean. Buckingham Palace confirmed yesterday.

Fears for the health of the Queen's 68-year-old sister were renewed after the accident in the Princess's holiday home on the island of Mustique last month, but Palace officials stressed last night that there was no question of her life being in danger.

The Palace said that the Princess was "in good spirits", and had been told by her doctors to rest. "She is getting some nursing care, helping her change her dressings, and the burns are responding to treatment. She was seen by a local doctor in Mustique and came back to London a week after the accident. She is now recuperating at Windsor, but these things

'Any serious burn to the feet, hands or face is considered of great medical importance and usually treated in hospital'

— Dr Thomas Stamford, page 2

do take some time to heal," the Palace said.

Officials could not say whether the Princess would be well enough to attend the wedding of her nephew Prince Edward to Sophie Rhys-Jones at Windsor on June 19, but she is thought certain to cancel a planned appearance this week at the christening in London of a grandson of King Constantine of Greece, at which Prince William will become a godfather for the first time. The Princess has undertaken no official duties since February.

In February 1998 the Princess suffered a mild stroke while holidaying on Mustique and on her return to Britain spent longer than expected under observation in the King Edward VII Hospital for Officers in Central London.

Lady Glenconner, a close friend, who travelled with the Princess from Mustique last month, said the accident had happened when the Princess sat on the edge of a bath in her holiday home, Les Jolies Eaux. She had swivelled her legs into the bath, not realising it was full of scalding water.

The Princess's cries for help had at first gone unheeded, but she was eventually rescued by staff and examined by a local doctor. She felt well enough to remain on Mustique for another week.

"The Princess has been in bed for the past month following the accident; burns like that do not heal easily, especially as one gets older. However, she is well in herself," Lady Glenconner said. "I have spoken to her several times since, she is fine."

The Princess returned initially to her apartments at Kensington Palace, and felt well enough to join the Queen and other members of the Royal Family for their Easter break at Windsor. But she apparently underestimated the severity of her injuries, was unable to join in family gatherings and meals, and has remained in bed at the castle.

Doctors believe that the Princess's burns may be slow to heal because of her age and long addition to cigarettes, which she is now said to have given up but which are likely to have caused permanent damage to her circulation.

"Would you mind swapping blankets?"

Maxwells strike it rich

Robert Maxwell's twin daughters are among newcomers to the list of Britain's richest people. They are ranked 27th. The list is topped by Hans Rausing Pak with a fortune of £3.4 billion...15

Sophie dithers

Sophie Rhys-Jones is still trying to decide whether to promise to "obey" Prince Edward when they marry... Page 11

An offer that's out of this world.

Half-price lines offer on BT Highway, ISDN and 2nd Lines

Freefone 0800 800 803 or visit www.bt.com/halfprice

BT Stay in touch

TV & RADIO	50, 51
WEATHER	26
CROSSWORDS	26, 52
LETTERS	23
OBITUARIES	25
PETER RIDDELL	22
ARTS	20-21
CHESS & BRIDGE	40
COURT & SOCIAL	24
EQUITY PRICES	45
FASHION	18-19
BUSINESS	47-50, 52

Buying The Times overseas
Australia $30, Belgium B Frs 110, Canada $35, Denmark Dkr 400, Cyprus C£1.25, Denmark Dkr 22.00, Finland Fmk 30.50, France FRF 17.00, Germany DM 5.50, Gibraltar Gp, Greece Dr 750, Netherlands Fl 6.50, Italy L 5,000, Luxembourg Lfr 110, Madeira Esc 200, Malta Mls 800, Morocco Dir 30.00, Norway Kr 25.00, Portugal Esc 200, Spain Ptas 400, Sweden Skr 25.00, Switzerland S Frs 6.00, Tunisia Din 3,200, USA $35.00.
Periodicals Postage Paid at Rahway, NJ. Postmaster: Send address corrections to The Times c/o Mercury International, 365 Blair Road, Avenel, NJ 07001.

9 770140 046213

Business moves in favour of euro in new poll

By JAMES LANDALE, POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT

TWO THIRDS of medium-sized businesses are in favour of joining the euro, according to a new survey. The findings will give a lift to Tony Blair's campaign to win support for the single currency.

Sixty-five per cent of 300 managing directors representing firms with turnovers of between £1 million and £100 million said that Britain should join. The survey, carried out by Lloyds TSB bank, also showed that 86 per cent of the firms questioned believed that Britain would eventually do so.

The polling was conducted in February, most of it after the Government's announcement of a national changeover plan to prepare business for potential membership. The results, published today, are in stark contrast to a recent poll by Business for Sterling, the anti-euro lobby group, which suggested that two thirds of businesses were opposed to the single currency.

However, it later emerged that the poll overestimated the traditionally anti-euro views of smaller business owners.

In reality, business is effectively split on the euro, with broadly more against than in favour. Michael Portillo, the former Conservative Cabinet minister, told GMTV yesterday: "All parties and all business are torn asunder on this issue." However, he added that most businesses in Britain were small firms and were "very clearly against it".

Mr Portillo gave a warning that continental politicians backed the euro as "the foundation of a new European state". He added: "There are clearly huge political and constitutional implications in this."

The Lloyds TSB survey showed that businesses now feel more informed about the euro. Some 52 per cent said they no longer required any further information, an increase from 35 per cent last November.

The research also showed that 20 per cent of the firms that trade with Europe were being invoiced in euros by overseas suppliers. Some 12 per cent were being paid in euros by foreign buyers.

Michael Ridding, managing director of Lloyds Bank commercial service, said: "It is very encouraging that despite the relatively small number of firms actually using the euro, businesses across the board now feel better informed than this time four months ago."

He said the fear felt by many firms towards the euro was disappearing. "The work done by banks and government to educate businesses means many firms are now displaying a sound understanding of the issues presented by the euro. This means industry will be able to make a more informed decision about the UK entering EMU when the Government holds its referendum."

The results are published as both sides in the euro debate step up their campaigning. The Britain in Europe lobby group launched a new publicity offensive to warn that consumers would be hit by higher mortgages and prices if Britain stayed out of the euro.

Lord Marshall, the British Airways chief who heads the group, said: "The facts are that the single currency has now been successfully launched and Britain is losing out because we are staying out."

Euro-sceptics such as Lord Shore of Stepney, the former Labour Cabinet Minister, hit back. At a conference for the Campaign for an Independent Britain, he insisted that joining the euro would lead to higher taxes and unemployment.

Princess Margaret: even a fit woman half her age would have found that serious burns to the feet take a long time to heal

Age and health against Princess

IT IS NO surprise that Princess Margaret's foot burns may not have healed in time for Prince Edward's marriage to Sophie Rhys-Jones, even if she was half her age they would have been unlikely to have recovered in time.

If Princess Margaret was in the best of health, had an excellent medical history, hadn't smoked excessively, and was under 60, the damage done by placing her feet in scalding water would constitute a serious burn. The average patient, without the Princess's access to first-class home medical care, would have been admitted to hospital.

Because of the history of a stroke and extensive burn to her face, she would have been taken more seriously than it would have been in an otherwise fit person. Healthy patients who burn more than 10 per cent of their skin area are routinely admitted to hospital. Burns to the whole of both feet would constitute more than 4 per cent of the body's skin area, but if she placed her feet in a bath of hot water it is likely that some of the lower legs were also involved, a burn of half of both the lower legs adds another 6½ per cent. Life is not usually threatened until 40 per cent of the body area is damaged, but this rule cannot always be applied to those over 60, in whom other factors have to be taken into consideration.

MEDICAL BRIEFING

Any serious burn to the feet, hands, face or genitalia is considered of great medical importance and usually treated in hospital, as the consequences of any infection and the sensitivity of the area cause much greater disability than a similar area burn on, for instance, the back.

Princess Margaret's case presents problems that are frequently encountered. After a stroke many patients experience changes in mobility, loss of joint co-ordination, skin sensitivity and, frequently, a lowered reaction time, all of which may predispose to household accidents, including burns. Unfortunately, recovery from an injury is less good in these patients. Regrettably, too, there is no part of the human body that recovers more slowly to injuries than the lower leg which has a comparatively poor blood supply. Even a fit rugby international notices that injuries to the lower leg take an age to heal.

Another disadvantage that Princess Margaret has to overcome is that she has been a heavy smoker, and one of the complications of heavy smoking is that the peripheral arteries are narrowed and clogged, which restricts the blood supply to the skin and further retards its recovery.

Although the Princess is inevitably relatively immobile every effort will be made by her doctors and physiotherapists to encourage exercises which will stimulate her circulation. After a burn, and immobilisation, there's always a risk of a thrombus forming in the deep veins of the leg with a subsequent hazard of pulmonary emboli.

The initial treatment of burns is usually intravenous infusion to prevent constriction of the blood vessels of the skin and correction of any chemical imbalance. This is followed by dressings, antibiotics to prevent infection, and painkillers and anti-inflammatory drugs to treat discomfort. As soon as the Princess's burns allow it, walking will be recommended.

DR THOMAS STUTTAFFORD

NEWS IN BRIEF

Team of sceptics to judge gene crops

A dramatic shake-up in the committee that approves releases of genetically engineered crops into the countryside was announced by the Government yesterday. It follows criticism by green groups, food organisations and some academics that the committee, the Advisory Committee on Releases to the Environment, is biased in favour of the biotechnology industry and has been nodding through applications without sufficient sceptical scrutiny.

Michael Meacher, the Environment Minister, said yesterday that a new committee composed of a more sceptical membership would be up and running by June. He said: "Scientific opinion on genetically modified organisms is split and the new committee will reflect this." The committee was also to be given wide-ranging responsibilities.

Critics have claimed that the way the committee has approved gene-modified crops has been on a basis that is too narrow. It is hoped this new remit will allay fears among government wildlife advisers and environmentalists.

Yard seeks TV tapes

Scotland Yard, invoking the Police and Criminal Evidence Act, will ask a judge at the Old Bailey to order Granada TV to hand over material from interviews with the five suspects in the Stephen Lawrence murder case. Weeks ago the Yard had begun an application for the material and then agreed to suspend the application until after the interview by Martin Bashir was shown. Police are expected to seek both used and unused footage.

Church ad criticised

A church advertisement that claimed a disabled man racked with pain had been cured within two hours by the power of Jesus has fallen foul of the Advertising Standards Authority. The advert for Peniel Pentecostal Church in Brentwood, Essex, which was placed in regional newspapers, breached the authority's guidelines because the church could not substantiate its claim that the man's miraculous recovery could be attributed to spiritual healing.

Lorry drivers' protest

Thousands of lorry drivers are expected to cause traffic jams in cities throughout the country today in a campaign to force the Government to reconsider tax rises that they claim will cost thousands of jobs. The protests, which follow similar action in London last month, will be held in Edinburgh, Manchester, Newcastle upon Tyne, Middlesbrough, Exeter and Plymouth, as well as in the capital. Manchester is expected to be the worst affected.

Pipe-bomb victim

A man was injured in a pipe-bomb attack on a bar in Northern Ireland. The blast happened shortly after 10am at the Barley Corn pub in Nutts Corner, Co Antrim. The man, in his 30s, was taken to hospital with leg and chest injuries but his condition was not believed to be life-threatening. Suspicion fell immediately on dissident loyalists, who have carried out a series of similar attacks on homes and businesses during the past few months.

Pink, 35, and still cool

The Pink Panther, the cartoon world's ultimate symbol of wit and nonchalance — and occasional wild panic — celebrated his 35th birthday at the weekend. To mark the occasion MGM is to "redefine" the character, but a spokesman said: "He will remain the definition of cool. We have given the Pink Panther a new look. We have searched through the history of the character and have merged his original cool with resurging trends from various eras." The Pink Panther's first short, The Pink Phink, won an Academy Award in 1964.

Small lottery winners

A scheme that will make it easier for small community groups to apply for National Lottery grants was launched by Chris Smith, the Heritage Secretary. The Awards for All will provide up to £5,000 to small non-profit-making groups and, during its first year, will help groups planning millennium celebration projects with £35 million going towards small-scale art, charitable, sporting, and heritage activities. Applicants will not have to raise matching funds.

Police killing inquiry

The man shot dead by police in Falmouth, Cornwall, was an ex-soldier who had previously been jailed for firing an imitation weapon at police in a similar incident. Antony Kites, 20, was sentenced to youth custody for two years in 1997 for the shooting and an attack on his stepfather. At the time the trial judge at Truro Crown Court questioned why he had been recruited by the Army and said he could be very dangerous. An investigation into his death has begun.

Ramblers' plea on law

The Ramblers' Association has welcomed the Government's proposed new laws granting the "right to roam" and urged Parliament to introduce them as quickly as possible. Delegates at the association's national conference in Nottingham voted unanimously for the policy to be included in the Queen's Speech at the start of the next parliamentary session in November. The chairman, David Grosz, said the Government had shown that it listened to people.

Frame and fortune

Tracey Simpkin has won double glazing worth £4,000 by forcing a company to honour a bet made by its salesman that she could not remove the heading from one of his demonstration windows. Mrs Simpkin, 33, from Derby, was given the challenge after the salesman rejected her claim that burglars could break in by prising off the external plastic. The salesman, for Coldeale, said she could have her doors and windows free if she could do it.

Quality health insurance

At Prime Health, we have health insurance plans to suit every need. And as part of the Standard Life Group, we aim to deliver the best value too. How much could you be saving?

Call 0800 7799 55 Prime Health to find out more. Ref: M17003NG. A member of the Standard Life Group.

THE MOST TERRIFYING CONFLICT IN HISTORY

THE RUSSIAN FRONT

In this unique four video boxed set, Professor John Erickson, a award-winning author of the 'Road to Stalingrad' and 'Road to Berlin', re-assesses the brutal conflict on the Eastern Front. Powerful and authoritative, the four films feature rare archive footage from Russian and German sources, combined with highly informative maps and graphics.

The titles in the set are:
• Barbarossa - Hitler Turns East
• Turning Point Stalingrad
• From Stalingrad to Kursk
• The Battles for Berlin

4 VIDEO SET ONLY £39.95 (Post & Packing free)

Please tick requirements:
☐ The Russian Front Box Set £39.95
Individual titles are also available at £12.95 each ☐ Barbarossa - Hitler Turns East
☐ Turning Point Stalingrad
☐ From Stalingrad to Kursk
☐ The Battles for Berlin

Please send to: Casswell Productions, 11 Central Chambers, Cuckfield, Sussex BN20 9JN
Warwickshire CV37 4QX, or fax your order to (01799) 415216. Please allow 28 days for delivery. *Post and packing is free in the UK only; for overseas postage please call 01799 252779 for more details.

NAME _____
ADDRESS _____
CITY _____
POSTCODE _____
TEL _____
E-MAIL _____
DATE _____
SIGNATURE _____

CALL NOW ON THE MAIL ORDER HOTLINE - TEL: (01799) 292779

Bush backs Pinochet freedom campaign

By JAMES LANDALE

GEORGE BUSH, the former US President, has joined the growing number of international figures calling for General Augusto Pinochet to be allowed to return to Chile.

He described the case against the former Chilean dictator as a "travesty of justice" and demanded a "quick resolution" to the proceedings.

Mr Bush's remarks came in a letter to Lord Lamont of Lerwick, the former Tory Chancellor, who is campaigning for General Pinochet's release. In the letter, dated April 8, Mr Bush said: "General Pinochet should be returned to Chile as soon as possible."

Mr Bush joins Henry Kissinger, Baroness Thatcher and the Vatican in calling for the general's release. Also backing him is the Solidarity movement in Poland.

General Pinochet is held under house arrest in Wentworth, Surrey. He was arrested last October after a Spanish judge issued an extradition warrant relating to crimes allegedly committed during his 1973-1990 regime in Chile.

The law lords ruled recently that he had no immunity from prosecution. They also said he could face only those charges relating to alleged crimes after December 1988. This cut the number of draft charges from 33 to three.

Jack Straw, the Home Secretary, is expected to rule shortly whether or not the 63-year-old general should be extradited to Spain to face those remaining charges of torture and conspiracy to torture.

Hague gets an image polish for local votes

By JAMES LANDALE, POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT

TORY strategists will launch a campaign this week to revamp William Hague's image as a down-to-earth man of the people, as the party gears up for next month's local elections.

Party officials said it was vital the public saw more of the Tory leader so they could see he was a "regular guy with a human side". The move — which will involve Mr Hague spending more time campaigning out of London — is intended to dispel the more common image of him as a "one-dimensional political hack".

Conservative sources denied it represented yet another re-launch for the party leader. It was just a "reprojection" of his image so voters could see "the real William Hague". The move is part of the Tories' strategy for the May 6 council elections to position themselves as the champions of local people and issues against the heavy hand of the state.

Michael Ancram, the Tory chairman, said it was always difficult for an opposition leader to get himself seen or heard and he admitted that Mr Hague had not been noticed enough. He told BBC Radio 4's The World This Weekend: "We want to get him out and around and use the elections... in a way which is more visible than the way he has been doing since becoming leader, but in the absence of elections, perhaps not being noticed as widely as he should be."

The plan, masterminded by Amanda Platell, the party's new director of communications, will see Mr Hague give more interviews with glossy magazines rather than just with Westminster-based journalists. He will cooperate with a fly-on-the-wall documentary being made by Michael Cockrell.

He will visit more schools, wear more casual clothes, emphasising his working class background and the fact that he attended a comprehensive school. The plan fits with the so-called "kitchen table" strategy of relating to ordinary people and the issues which matter to them.

One Tory source said: "It is not a re-launch. It is a development of ways of bringing him to a different audience and portraying the warm, human side to him. He has this reputation as a political boffin, perhaps as a result of his speech to conference as a teenager. But that is not what he is like. We have got to get the message across that he is not like that, and that he is a regular guy."

The local elections on May 6 will be a vital first test of the new Tory strategy. The party is to contest a record 8,411 council seats — 78 per cent of the 10,801 seats in the election.

Tory officials are already playing down expectations and suggest that Labour will do better as a result of Tony Blair's leadership during the Kosovo war. They now expect to gain fewer than 400 seats.

Labour sources dismissed the new Tory approach. They said that the Tories were learning the wrong lessons from Labour's renaissance under Mr Blair.

سكة من الاصل

Bafta loves Bess more than Will

Elizabethan film rivalry is rekindled at British awards, reports Carol Midgley

IN A display of the revenge that was such a popular feature of the Elizabethan theatre, the Australian actress Cate Blanchett beat Gwyneth Paltrow to the Best Actress award at the 51st British Academy Awards last night.

Miss Blanchett won the award for her portrayal of Elizabeth I in the British movie Elizabeth, while Miss Paltrow, who wept as she accepted her Oscar award for Best Actress for her role in Shakespeare in Love last month, went home empty-handed. Elizabeth I emerged as the main winner at the awards as the film world continued its love affair with 16th century England.

Dame Judi Dench compounded her Oscars triumph by winning the Best Supporting Actress award for her eight-minute performance of the older Queen Elizabeth in Shakespeare in Love.

The two films dominated the awards ceremony. Shakespeare in Love won four awards, including Best Film, while Elizabeth won five, including Most Outstanding British Film of the Year.

Another Elizabeth, Elizabeth Taylor, was given the top award of the evening, the Academy Fellowship for her lifetime's achievement in cinema.

There was more celebration for Roberto Benigni, who won the Best Actor award for his performance in the Holocaust film La Vita e Bella. Last month, when he won an Oscar for the role, he kissed the feet of Martin Scorsese. The Best Supporting Actor award went to Geoffrey Rush, who played an Elizabethan producer in Shakespeare in Love.

There was further disappointment for Michael Caine, who had been ignored in the Oscar nominations. Although he was nominated for Best Actor for his portrayal of a sleazy showbusiness agent in Little Voice, he missed out again.

Peter Weir was named Best Director for The Truman Show, the American film which also won Best Original Screenplay. Primary Colors, regarded as based on President Clinton and his wife Hillary, won Best Adapted Screenplay.

Elizabeth won three further awards, for Best Music, Best Cinematography and Best Makeup and Hair, while David Gamble picked up a further award for Shakespeare in Love for Best Editing.

The organisers of Bafta had made an effort to make this year's ceremony more glamorous than previous events in an attempt to raise its profile as the British Oscars. Guests walked up a red-carpeted promenade as the public watched outside the British Design Centre in Islington, North London. It was thought that the vista would be more television-friendly than the usual view at the rear of the Grosvenor House Hotel in Park Lane where the event has been held previously.

The soccer star Vinnie Jones arrived with his wife to celebrate Lock, Stock and Two Smoking Barrels, the film in which he starred, winning the Orange Audience award. Saving Private Ryan, directed by Steven Spielberg, had a disappointing evening. Despite many nominations, it won only two awards, Best Sound and Best Special Effects.

Gwyneth Paltrow waltzed off with an Oscar but missed out on personal glory at the Baftas for her starring role in Shakespeare in Love

Elizabethan drama of cinema rivals

James Christopher, the Times film critic, found last night's awards were not so much a competition as a blood bath

THE moment Shekhar Kapur's film Elizabeth and John Madden's Shakespeare in Love were nominated for this year's top movie awards, there was never going to be anything but an unhealthy sense of rivalry between them.

At the Oscars last month, one of the most vivid side-shows was betting on which of the two ostensibly British films, featuring the character of Elizabeth I, would pick up the more glamorous statuettes. Or whether they would contrive to cancel each other out. In the event, it wasn't so much a competition as a blood-bath. Madden's Shakespeare in Love slaughtered all comers, and comprehensively humiliated the awardless Elizabeth (a Make-Up award hardly counts).

There was some compensation for poor Shekhar Kapur and his cohorts at the Baftas last night when Elizabeth dramatically picked off five awards against Shakespeare in Love's four. But Kapur's sense of vindication must be tempered by the fact that the top award — Best Film — went to his rival, while Elizabeth has had to make do with the significantly lesser award for Outstanding British Film. The sweetest moment was almost certainly enjoyed by Cate Blanchett, who played the title role in Elizabeth. She won the Best Actress award when the massed ranks of celebrities were putting their umbrellas up in expectation of yet another watery acceptance speech by red hot favourite Gwyneth Paltrow.

Both Elizabeth and Shakespeare in Love clearly deserved their awards. The rivalry has been something of a farce. They work on such entirely different levels that comparisons are at best unhelpful, at worst, damaging.

What the Baftas have implicitly acknowledged last night is the art-house ambitions of Kapur's vertiginous conspiracy movie. Full of baroque angles and festering melodrama, the film is a fascinating exploration of the psychological power-play in Elizabeth I's court.

The Oscars favoured Shakespeare in Love simply because it is a cracking commercial comedy with one of the wittiest scripts of the decade. You expect nothing less from a combination such as Marc Norman and Tom Stoppard.

Academy chief to sue for unfair dismissal

By RAYMOND SNOODY
MEDIA EDITOR

AS THE Bafta awards were being handed out last night, the former chief executive of the British Academy of Film and Television Arts was planning a case of unfair dismissal and breach of contract against it. Jane Clarke is expected to allege cronyism and failure to maximise money from sponsorship.

Miss Clarke joined the academy last year, on a salary of £70,000, from her job as deputy director of the British Film Institute. Her brief was to modernise an organisation accused of being an "old boy network", providing perks for senior members alongside its job of promoting excellence in British film and television.

At the end of the year, Miss Clarke, 47, was dismissed

Clarke dismissed "by a unanimous decision" from re-entering the Bafta building. A statement was issued saying that her contract had been terminated by "a unanimous decision of the board". Miss Clarke has instigated employment tribunal proceedings. She will tell the tribunal that it was made to look as if she had been guilty of gross misconduct. She will allege that after her departure her personal mail was opened.

She has told friends that she believes one factor involved in her dismissal was the unpopularity caused by her discovery that quantities of wine were disappearing from Bafta's headquarters in Piccadilly.

Miss Clarke alleges that her dismissal came soon after she drew to the attention of the chairman, the film and television consumer Tim Angel, her belief that the organisation had not been maximising the money it could have raised from sponsorship of awards such as last night's.

Mr Angel declined to comment, other than to say that Miss Clarke's action would be vigorously defended.

AND THE WINNERS ARE...

Best Film — Shakespeare in Love
The David Lean Award for best achievement in direction — Peter Weir (The Truman Show)
Best Screenplay (original) — The Truman Show (Andrew Niccol)
Best Screenplay (adapted) — Primary Colors (Elaine May) Best Actress — Cate Blanchett (Elizabeth)
Best Actor — Roberto Benigni (La Vita e Bella)
Best Supporting Actress — Dame Judi Dench (Shakespeare in Love)
Best Supporting Actor — Geoffrey Rush (Shakespeare in Love)
Best Film not in English — Central Do Brasil
The Anthony Asquith Award for achievement in film music — Elizabeth (David Hirschfelder)
The Carl Foreman Award for newcomer in British film — Richard Kretlowald
Best Cinematography — Elizabeth (Roni Adofarasin)
Best Production Design — The Truman Show (Donna Gassner)
Best Costume Design — Volvet Goldmine (Sandy Powell)
Best Editing — Shakespeare in Love (David Gamble) Best Sound — Saving Private Ryan
Best Special Effects — Saving Private Ryan
Best Make-up/Hair — Elizabeth (Jonny Shireore) Best Short Film — Home
Best Short Animated Film — The Canterbury Tales
The Orange Audience Award — Lock, Stock and Two Smoking Barrels
The Academy Fellowship — Elizabeth Taylor
The Michael Balcon Award for outstanding British contribution to cinema — Michael Kahn
The Alexander Korda Award for outstanding British film — Elizabeth

COLOUR PRINTING TECHNOLOGY HAS FINALLY CAUGHT UP WITH THE BIRO.

Just like a Biro, HP's new Inkjet printers automatically alert you when your ink level's running low. They flash up an icon on your PC's screen. They're the first colour printers to do this because we've put smart chips in their ink cartridges. Yellow, red, blue, black? You'll even know the level of every colour.

because HP printers have separate cartridges for each one. (And since you only replace the colour you need, this also cuts costs.) With HP, you have the widest choice of business colour printers. Delivering up to 6 colour pages a minute, they'll all keep your work flowing by helping you keep the colour flowing.

For more information on HP's range of colour printers for business, call us now on:
0990 474747

hp HEWLETT PACKARD
Expanding Possibilities

BALKANS WAR: NATO UNITY

Blair sees new world order in Kosovo conflict

By James Landale
Political Correspondent

TONY BLAIR today calls for a "new internationalism" in which the world community never again tolerates the brutal repression of an ethnic group by a dictator struggling to remain in power.

In an article for Newsweek magazine, the Prime Minister suggests that Nato's action in Kosovo could be a model for future international relations.

Mr Blair says: "This is a conflict we are fighting not for territory but for values, for a new internationalism where the brutal repression of whole ethnic groups will no longer be tolerated, for a world where those responsible for such crimes have nowhere to hide."

He adds: "We are fighting for a world where dictators are

PAPAL PLEA

Rome: Amid growing anti-war feeling in Italy, the Pope yesterday used an address marking the Orthodox Easter to express fellow feeling for "our Orthodox brothers" in Yugoslavia (Richard Owen writes). "Let the guns fall silent, let dialogue resume," he said.

no longer able to visit horrific punishments on their own people in order to stay in power."

Establishing the principle that outside countries can intervene in a sovereign state to halt "ethnic cleansing" would mark a radical shift in the basic norms of international relations and Mr Blair's remarks will provoke unease among many countries. Some Western diplomats are privately concerned at the consequences of Nato's pro-active stance and emphasise that the aggressive action in Kosovo is a unique situation.

Mr Blair also uses the article to mount a strong defence of Nato's airstrikes against Kosovo. He acknowledged there would be "the usual barrage of criticism" for the action. But the West had learned from "bitter experience" 60 years ago not to appease dictators such as President Milosevic.

Defending the airstrikes, Mr Blair insists the Government was right to be "cautious" about a ground offensive. "Of course ground forces will be necessary in Kosovo to give the refugees the confidence to return to their homes

Tony Benn at the Trafalgar Square rally yesterday organised by the Committee for Peace in the Balkans to oppose the Nato bombing campaign in safety," he says. "But that is very different from fighting our way in. While we keep all options under review... that is not our plan. A land invasion would be a massive undertaking and would take time to assemble. The casualties would potentially be large. And the civilian population would be at Milosevic's mercy. Mr Blair, who is expected to address MPs tomorrow when the Commons returns from its Easter break, said Nato would continue attacking until it succeeded, and insisted the airstrikes were "taking their toll" on the Yugoslav Army. More than 2,000 anti-bombing protesters gathered in Trafalgar Square in central London yesterday to demonstrate against the Nato airstrikes. Several left-wing Labour MPs including Tony Benn, joined the protest which was organised by the Committee for Peace in the Balkans. Mr Benn said: "We are saying, stop the bombing now.

And we are saying that all money and effort now devoted to war should be diverted to the enormous humanitarian problems that not only concern the people of Yugoslavia, but the people of Yugoslavia who are being bombed."

Germans fear Schröder is America's tool

How much longer will the Germans put up with the war? The easy answer is that Gerhard Schröder, the German Chancellor, is in the war, for better or for worse, and is determined to show himself as good an ally as Britain.

Public opinion is still on his side — 57 per cent of Germans support a continuation of the airstrikes until President Milosevic stops all military action in Kosovo.

Yet alliances are dynamic and in war — despite the obligatory pretence of unity — the terms are being constantly renegotiated. Both France and Germany are unhappy about America's control of intelligence collected by satellites.

Nato quickly denied reports from Washington that France was being cut out of an information loop for fear that intelligence would get back to the Serbs. Not unnaturally, the French were deeply offended at the suggestion.

The nervousness over US intelligence policy is also felt by the Germans. Certainly the Chancellor's office was upset that it had no idea about the fate of 30,000 ly by the resignation of Oskar Lafontaine, his former Finance Minister.

As far as Germany is concerned, it is now very much Oskar Who? But the Social Democratic Party conference still aches for him, for his left-wing certainties and his rhetorical passion. The party does not love or even much like Herr Schröder. They will vote for him today, but in the manner of dutiful children taking tea with a maiden aunt: it is something that they have to do.

First, however, they will give him an earful on Kosovo, which the party regards as an illegal war. Such is the strength of feeling that some 30 per cent of the delegates are threatening to abstain from the vote for Herr Schröder. Party delegates want guarantees of parliamentary approval before any fresh military steps are taken: they will demand (and receive) a pledge that ground troops will not be used before a peace treaty is in place and they will want reassurances that there is a way of ending the war on sensible terms.

The pacifists in the party do not have a strong champion now that Herr Lafontaine has taken early retirement and they are in no position to dictate terms. But if Herr Schröder really wants to be party leader as well as Chancellor than he will have to incorporate some of the party's scepticism about the war into his politics; that is the price of their support.

The premise that war consolidates the power of domestic leaders is shaky. Naturally, war boosts the profile of defence ministers — Herr Scharping has become, in effect, the second-most important figure in the Government and in the party — and of foreign ministers.

But the Chancellor's approval rating has slipped 11 per cent since the beginning of this month. Only 50 per cent of Germans believe that he is doing a good job. The Chancellor looks as if he is in command but increasingly Germans think that he is taking orders from Washington.

When Helmut Kohl, his predecessor, was in power he always created the illusion that he was consulting with US Presidents on an equal basis. War reveals the true distribution of power within an alliance and it has already become plain that Herr Schröder is not high on the list of President Clinton's priority calls. This could prove dangerous.

The deepest anxiety of Germans is that the United States will lead them, against their will, into a conflict with Russia. That was the trigger for the anti-American protests of the 1980s.

If the Kosovo war continues without result — that is if Mr Milosevic sits firm, if his police units continue to terrorise and slice up Kosovo — then something similar could happen again.

INSIDE GERMANY

BY ROGER BOYES

refugees who disappeared after arriving at the border even though US satellites could have kept them in the picture.

"There is a degree of dissatisfaction," admits Walter Stütze, the junior Defence Minister. His boss, Rudolf Scharping, emphasises that Nato should be "more open and more offensive", meaning that the United States should not keep secrets from its allies.

The Germans are going to deploy a second battery of unmanned drones which could provide some tactical information but they are no substitute for the panorama provided by satellites. An old, expensive idea, for a joint Franco-German satellite system, may be revived but it will come too late for this war.

The underlying fear is that America is beginning to fight a separate war. There is probably nothing in it but the mere whisper of abandonment is enough to sap the authority of the Chancellor who has yet to earn his spurs as an international statesman.

Today he faces his first open challenge on Kosovo when he stands for election as chairman of the Social Democratic Party. He is supposed to fill the gap left so strangely and so sudden-

HELP PROTECT YOUR FAMILY'S FINANCIAL FUTURE

Could your family get by without you?

It's the question that no parent wants to ask themselves. Yet it is probably the single most important question you should be asking — how would your family cope financially if anything happened to you or your partner?

Bereavement in itself is hard to cope with, so the last thing you'd want your family to experience at such a difficult time is financial hardship. After all, bills will still need to be paid. School expenses will still need to be met. Holidays, Christmas and birthday presents will still need to be bought.

THE PRACTICAL ANSWER

The easiest and most affordable way to help protect your family's future is with term assurance — a type of life insurance that covers you for the period of your choice. Legal & General's Family Protection Plan is just such a policy. It pays out the lump sum you select at the start of the term should you die whilst covered. What's more, one or both parents can be covered and you choose exactly how long you want cover to last — until your children grow up and become independent, for example. And, as the table opposite shows, policies can be arranged from as little as $5 a month — that's less than you spend on your daily newspaper.

Of course, you could rely on state benefit — which in the current tax year is $83.55 a week for a widow and two children. Hardly sufficient when you consider that it could cost over $300 a week to pay someone to do all the jobs a parent at home does — childcare, cleaning, cooking and so on.

HOW MUCH COVER DO YOU NEED?

Research shows that, on average, it costs $90,000 over 18 years to bring up your children*. So as a guide, the Life Insurance Market Research Association estimates you should aim for life cover of around 15 times your household income to provide financial security if one partner were to die. The table opposite gives you an idea of the cost of various levels of cover. And if your circumstances change (if you have another child, for example), it's easy to alter the amount of cover you have.

Naturally, the older you get, the more expensive life assurance becomes. So it's well worth taking out cover as soon as you can. Especially as your Family Protection Plan premiums are guaranteed never to rise over the entire term (unless the Indexation option is selected or you choose to increase the level of cover).

CHOOSE THE OPTIONS THAT SUIT YOU

Another great advantage of Legal & General's plan is its flexibility. For example you can choose from a range of optional extras for even greater peace of mind:

Critical Illness Cover — the sum assured is paid on diagnosis of a pre-defined serious illness, such as a heart attack or stroke.

Terminal Illness Cover — the sum assured is paid on diagnosis of a pre-defined terminal illness where your life expectancy is less than 12 months, but no later than 18 months before the policy expires.

Waiver of premium — Your premiums are paid if you can't work due to ill-health.

Indexation — Allows you to maintain the value of your sum insured by increasing it, along with your premiums, in line with inflation.

(Further details available on request.)

For further details of the Family Protection Plan, and an instant quotation, call Legal & General today on 0500 33 66 66. They may even be able to cover you instantly over the phone.

*Legal & General 'Value of a Mum' Survey 1996.

The easiest way for a breadwinner to protect dependants is with term assurance

THE BENEFITS AT A GLANCE

- Life assurance available for as little as $5 a month
- You choose the amount of cover and the term required
- Premiums guaranteed not to rise (unless the Indexation option is selected or you choose to increase the level of cover)
- Joint cover available for extra protection
- You can increase your cover at any time, subject to limits
- FREE kid's umbrella when your application is accepted and first premium paid
- Legal & General is one of the UK's leading financial service companies

SEE HOW YOUR FAMILY COULD BENEFIT

Amount paid on death	Period of cover	Cover basis	Monthly premium
$90,000	15 years	Male	$9.18
$40,755	15 years	Male	$5.00
$90,000	15 years	Female	$6.48
$62,589	15 years	Female	$5.00
$90,000	15 years	Joint lives ¹	$12.18
$120,000	15 years	Joint lives ¹	$15.75

¹Paid out on first death. Examples based on a male non-smoker aged 30 and a female non-smoker aged 30. Acceptance subject to individual details.

Please send me a no-obligation quotation and information pack on the Legal & General Family Protection Plan
Post to: Legal & General, FREEPOST (SW1) 04673, Cardiff CF1 1YW

Surname (please print) _____
First name(s) _____
Address _____
Postcode _____

Tel No Home _____ Tel No Work _____
Date of Birth ____/____/19 ____ I am a smoker ☐ Non-smoker ☐

Cover required £ _____ Term required _____ years
(minimum 1 year)

Visit our Website at www.LandG.com
We may telephone you to make sure information has arrived safely. Now and then we may tell you about other products or services offered by the Legal & General Group of companies that we believe may be of interest to you.

If you would prefer not to receive this carefully selected information please tick here ☐

Ref: D45/DL01

trust us to deliver

FIND OUT HOW AFFORDABLE PEACE OF MIND CAN BE FOR AN INSTANT QUOTE CALL FREEPHONE

0500 33 66 66

QUOTING REFERENCE NUMBER D45/DL01

Up to £300,000 free
Accidental Death Cover

Call for further details

Minimum premium of $5 per month equates to 17p a day. Premiums payable monthly. Now and then we may tell you about other products or services offered by the Legal & General Group of companies that we believe may be of interest to you. If you would prefer not to receive this carefully selected information, please contact us at the address on the coupon. Life Assurance is provided by the Legal & General Assurance Society Limited. Legal & General Direct Limited is a representative only of the Legal & General marketing group, members of which are regulated by the Personal Investment Authority and (IHRP) for the purposes of recommending, advising on and selling life assurance and investment products bearing Legal & General's name. Legal & General Direct Limited, Registered in England No. 2720249. Registered Office: Temple Court, 11 Queen Victoria Street, London EC4N 4TP.

صحة من الامن

HOW CAN SMALL BE SPACIOUS?

THE NEW TOYOTA YARIS
IT DEFIES LOGIC

Small cars are small. Inside. Outside. With a short sighted view of the world, you can see a small car as a small space. Placing the wheels at the four corners of the car has created a small space. But the Yaris gives you a room within a room, without sacrificing roominess. The Yaris is a room in which you can move in and out, and all this space clearly. Outside there are the real things we compare cars by: the engine, the gearbox, the suspension and there are a range of payments to choose from to suit your needs. The Yaris is a room in which you can move in and out, and all this space clearly. Outside there are the real things we compare cars by: the engine, the gearbox, the suspension and there are a range of payments to choose from to suit your needs.

the car room. TOYOTA

MODEL SHOWN VANCE 5 DOOR AT £10,999 (FINANCE £229 PER MONTH FOR 24 MONTHS). FINANCE PRICE NOT FIRMED. TOYOTA FINANCE PLC, THE QUADRANT, REDHILL, SURREY RH1 1PS. INDENTITIES MAY BE REQUIRED. ALL FINANCE SUBJECT TO STATUS TO OVER 185 ONLY. STYLING BY GUY ARIAS.

YARIS

Small cars are small. Inside, Outside. With a sport sighted view, the 1997 Chevrolet Cavalier is short, flat, and a little bit different. The 1997 Cavalier is a small car with a big personality. Placing the wheels at the four corners of the car, Chevrolet's engineers have created a roomy interior with 30 cubic feet of storage space. And with 10 tie-downs, you can hold everything in place. The 1997 Cavalier is a small car with a big personality. And this space plan is just one of the ways the 1997 Cavalier is different. With 10 tie-downs, you can hold everything in place. And there are a range of payment schemes to make ownership easier. With 10 tie-downs, you can hold everything in place.

MODEL SHOWN. VARIOUS SIZES FOR AT LEAST 100 DIFFERENT TYPES OF MACHINERY ARE AVAILABLE. ON DEMAND, A SURPRISE PRIZE DRAWING WILL BE HELD. PRIZES WILL BE AWARDED TO THE WINNERS. THE QUADRANGLE, REDHILL, SURREY RA1 1PC. INDENTITIES MAY BE REQUIRED. ALL FINANCE SUBJECT TO STATUS OVER 18 YEARS OLD. CREDIT RATES VARY. CREDIT RATES VARY. CREDIT RATES VARY.

the car from Asia

TOYOTA

YARIS

Tom Walker

Exiled Prince in peace plea

...message highlighting civilian
...ing, writes Eve-Ann Prentice

BALKANS WAR: MURDER IN BELGRADE

Gunmen kill leading Milosevic critic

Editor is shot dead on day that aid worker 'confesses' to spying charge, reports Tom Walker in Belgrade

ONE of President Milosevic's most outspoken critics, Slayko Curujica, a prominent newspaper editor, was shot dead yesterday, reviving speculation that he was a central figure in a planned coup.

On a day when an air of tension spread over Belgrade, the embattled authorities diverted attention from the first chilling signs of desperation in the region by showing the confession on state television of an Albanian aid worker, who apparently admitted performing undercover intelligence tasks in Kosovo.

The spy charges against Steve Pratt, who faces up to 20 years in jail under Yugoslavia's martial law, provided a welcome fillip for Serbs on their Easter Day, the most important day in the Orthodox calendar.

A sense of national injustice was heightened by state media reports that six civilians, including a one-year-old girl and her father, had been killed by a Nato missile in northern Kosovo.

The cold-blooded murder of Mr Curuvija, however, sent fear racing through the dwindling numbers of independent journalists left in Belgrade.

Witnesses said that at least two gunmen shot Mr Curuvija in the back of the head as he walked through a secluded courtyard towards his block of flats in the late afternoon. His partner, Branka Prpa, was struck over the head but recovered and raised the alarm.

His newspaper, Dnevni Telegram, was banned briefly last October after it was accused of raising panic during the first threatened air raids against Belgrade. He was then heavily fined for an article in a sister publication, The European, that was critical of Mr Milosevic's decade in power. He faced a prison sentence of five months, but was freed pending appeal.

Mr Curuvija was once a close associate of Mr Milosevic's wife, Mira Markovic, and also had good connections within the secret police network. The rumours of his involvement in a coup plot stemmed from his friendship with Mr Milosevic's former head of security, Jovica Stanišić, who was dismissed by Mr Milosevic in late October.

Various human rights groups, including the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, were concerned for Mr Curuvija's safety. The European article appeared a week before Mr Stanisić's departure. It was regarded as the most virulent and detailed attack yet made on Mr Milosevic, and many commentators at the time said Mr Curuvija would not have dared publish it without backers in high places. His prison sentence stemmed from another story, concerning the murder of a doctor and the activities of Milovan Bojic, the Deputy Prime Minister, that was published this year by Dnevni Telegram.

For his part, Mr Pratt, who delivered his televised confession in a dull monotone, bore no obvious signs of beatings, but he was slumped in his chair and looked tired and drained of emotion.

He sat by a high table, on which a small placard described him as "Major Steve Pratt", his former title in the Australian Army.

He had been arrested while trying to cross into Croatia 11 days ago with a younger colleague, Peter Wallace. Both men worked for CARE Australia, one of the most established non-governmental organisations in Yugoslavia and one that has built up a relatively good relationship with the authorities thanks to its work with Serbian refugees from Croatia and Bosnia.

The men had been based in Kosovo. With the permission of the Ministry for Refugees they were on their way to Montenegro. Chris Lamb, the Australian Ambassador to Belgrade, had spent two days camped on the Croatian border attempting to get back into Yugoslavia in a frantic search for his subjects, but when he finally crossed on Friday he could find no trace of them.

Alexander Downer, Australia's Foreign Affairs Minister, last week made a formal complaint to the Yugoslav authorities, who eventually admitted that they were holding the men but refused to say why or where.

"When I came to Yugoslavia I performed some intelligence tasks in this country by using the cover of CARE Australia. My concentration was on Kosovo and some effects of the bombing," said Mr Pratt in the confession.

"I misused my Yugoslav citizen staff in the acquisition of information. I realised that damage was done to this country by these actions for which I am greatly sorry. I also did, and I still do, condemn the bombing of this country."

He did not elaborate further and state television then cut to another story.

Samira, Mr Pratt's pregnant Yemeni wife, has been waiting in the Hungarian capital, Budapest, for news of her husband. Yesterday she was understood to be too distressed to comment.

Prince Alexander and Princess Katherine yesterday

Exiled Prince in peace plea

Easter message highlights civilian suffering, writes Eve-Ann Prentice

THE exiled head of the Yugoslav Royal Family vowed yesterday never to return to his country while "that bastard" Slobodan Milosevic remained in power.

Speaking amid hundreds of applauding Serbs as they marked Orthodox Easter Day in London yesterday, Crown Prince Alexander Karadjordjevic called on Nato to halt its bombing campaign in Serbia, saying that the air raids were merely cementing President Milosevic's hold on power.

The Prince, born at Claridge's in a room declared Yugoslav for a day, is the eldest son of King Peter II, who fled from the Nazis in 1941 and has spent his life in exile.

He and his wife, Crown Princess Katherine, were welcomed as they entered the Serbian Community Centre in Ladbroke Grove, beside St Sava's Serbian Orthodox Church. The Prince said: "I am against the bombing because it is hurting my people which practises ethnic cleansing. To be a big nation, we must respect all nations. Easter is very special and to be true Christians you must recognise everyone."

Prince Alexander has written to Tony Blair, President Clinton and President Chirac of France calling for an end to Nato's airstrikes. He said that the action had "turned into a real nightmare for the lives of ordinary Yugoslav citizens, the people who are not guilty of anything. Civilian casualties are mounting and the scars will take generations to heal."

He repeated in his letter a common accusation among Serbs that Nato has double standards: "You will recall that when, in 1995, the Serbs were ethnically cleansed from Croatia and Western Bosnia, no one came to their rescue."

Earlier, at least 1,000 people at St Sava's heard a message from the Serbian Orthodox Patriarch, Pavle. He called for peaceful co-existence in Kosovo and condemned the Nato

Russian-Cossacks look on as Patriarch Pavle, leader of the Serbian Orthodox Church, prepares to conduct an Easter Day service in a central Belgrade church yesterday. Nato aircraft continued their offensive over the weekend, with airstrikes on Yugoslav targets despite Serbian calls for a lull in hostilities to mark the Orthodox Easter celebrations

It's not only
NatWest
business customers who say we understand the needs of small business.

- Free banking for up to 18 months then 2 years discounted banking.
- Free help and guidance from a Small Business Adviser.
- Free Start-Up Guide and planner disk.
- Free 24-hour telephone banking.
- Free details of local and national assistance.

For more details talk to a Small Business Adviser at your high street branch or call us on 0800 777 888 (www.natwest.co.uk).

NatWest
More than just a bank

BALKANS WAR: RUSSIA

Cossacks ride in to join Serb 'brothers'

Russian media dismiss President's anti-Nato rhetoric as ploy to avert impeachment, Anna Blundy writes RUSSIAN Cossacks joined Serbian resistance to the Nato bombardments at the weekend, gathering on Belgrade's bridges to form a human shield. The Cossacks are the first Russians actively to support Yugoslavia in defiance of President Yeltsin's assurances that Russia will not be drawn into the Balkans conflict.

"Russian love and Russian power are with you," one Cossack was reported as saying to a group of Serbs, who chanted Russian Russia! Russia! in return.

Last month Cossack leaders, known as atamans, ominously pledged to mobilise 5,000 volunteers to defend the Serbs against Nato raids.

With their distinctive dress, tall lambskin hats, tsarist tunics and cavalry sabres, the Orthodox Cossacks are a fitting symbol of Russia's ancient links with their Slav brothers.

Almost annihilated under Communism, Russia's three million Cossacks were officially rehabilitated as a people by Mikhail Gorbachev and their revival has been a source of pride and concern ever since.

The militarist and nationalist Union of Cossacks was reformed in 1990 and is taken seriously enough for all Russian presidential candidates to have felt compelled visit Novocherkassk, the southern Cossack capital before the 1996 election.

The Cossacks were Russia's southern border guards for two centuries before the communist revolution. Although they are often romanticised, their glorious past is largely mythical, a nationalistic superiority complex developed in the 19th Century when they felt their influence waning.

In the meantime, the Rus-

As Russian anger grows against the build-up of Nato forces, a gunner in a Lynx helicopter of the 659 Squadron, Army Air Corps, keeps vigil on the Macedonian border

sian media agree that Mr Yeltsin's sabre-ranting against Nato has proved successful in staving off imminent impeachment proceedings against him. While his threats of world war and promises of an alliance with Serbia have worried the West, they were meant for domestic consumption.

Referring to the announcement on Friday, later retracted, that Russian nuclear missiles had been aimed at Nato countries, Kommersant daily's headline read: "The Rocket Trick — Yeltsin strikes a blow at impeachment." The front-page photograph showed Mr Yeltsin throwing his arms out like a successful magician.

Mr Yeltsin appealed to the pro-Serb feelings of the majority of his countrymen in an effort to endear himself to the communists and nationalists who want to get rid of him, and it seems to have worked.

Commentators concur that the impeachment vote against the President, on charges including the use of force in Chechnya and the illegal disintegration of the Soviet Union, is likely to be postponed indefinitely.

Few Russians take Mr Yeltsin's threats against Nato seriously at face value. Komsomolskaya Pravda asks: "Eleven minutes to nuclear war or was the chief just joking again?" About 76 per cent of people polled by Segodnya newspaper do not think aiming missiles at the West is a good idea in any case. But nobody believes that his comments were the ramblings of an ailing old man.

The President was up to something. Though the missile "misunderstanding" and Mr Yeltsin's threat of possible Russian military involvement in the Kosovo crisis were eventually explained away by frantic Kremlin aides, the delay was long enough to change the President's image in the eyes of his people. "Even though the rockets were not redirected, the fact is that this high-level leak took place and was not quickly retracted. This means it was intended to put pressure on Nato to improve Mr Yeltsin's popularity before the impeachment vote," says Yevgeny Zhuravayev, Obshchaya Gazeta's international affairs editor. "I am sure it was a bluff, but there is a lot of pressure on Yeltsin to take a tougher stance." Mr Yeltsin's demands that Yevgeny Primakov, the Prime Minister, avert the threat of impeachment or face the sack also appear to have had the desired effect.

Mr Primakov appeared on television over the weekend and wholeheartedly backed the President, warning of national instability should impeachment go ahead. Analysts agree that the Duma vote seems unlikely as Mr Yeltsin's brilliant political manoeuvring pays off yet again.

West unnerved as erratic Yeltsin beats the Slavic drum

WHEN Madeleine Albright meets Igor Ivanov, the Russian Foreign Minister, tomorrow, the US Secretary of State will first want to know whether President Yeltsin's warnings of a wider war presage a return to East-West confrontation. Or are they merely the symptoms of a power struggle in Moscow?

The questions will be urgently discussed today at Nato foreign ministers' meetings. Mr Yeltsin's warning of a third world war was swiftly played down by Kremlin officials. But it has underlined the sensitivity in Moscow at being marginalised in the Balkan conflict. Threat of a return to the Cold War would swiftly turn Western opinion against the Nato war.

The escalating rhetoric by

Nato's soothing words have little impact on the Kremlin, Michael Binyon writes

Duma and Kremlin officials provoked a flurry of telephone calls over the weekend, with Robin Cook, the Foreign Secretary, and other leaders attempting to assess Russia's mood and reassure Moscow that Nato airstrikes do not threaten Russian security.

Mr Ivanov told Mr Cook that Moscow did not intend to be drawn into the Yugoslav conflict. He gave similar promises to Kofi Annan, the United Nations Secretary-General, and Massimo D'Alema, the Italian Prime Minister. They, in turn, insisted that Russia will be included in the search for a solution. Officials from the Group of Eight industrial nations met in Dresden to discuss a possible foreign ministers' meeting on Kosovo — the first full conference between senior Russian and Western officials since bombing began. Gregori Mamedov, the Russian Deputy Foreign Minister, emerged saying it had been easier to find a common language within G8 than within a Nato context.

But for all the reassurance given to Moscow, the war has become linked to the Kremlin power struggle. The West's difficulty is to know how much weight to place on Mr Yeltsin's erratic statements. Privately, diplomats say he is concerned with stopping his powers ebbing away to Yevgeny Primakov, the Russian Prime Minister, and feels obliged to bang the drum of Slav solidarity. But publicly the West cannot dismiss his warnings, nor shrug them off as politics. That would exacerbate the anti-Nato mood.

SPEED AND POWER HAVE ALWAYS BEEN DESIRABLE, BUT RARELY THIS CONTROLLABLE.

Start with a powerful three litre engine and 240 bhp. Add independent double wishbone front and rear suspension. Ventilated brakes and four-channel ABS. Dynamic Stability Control* for rock solid cornering. And variable ratio, speed proportional power steering. Now everything's under control. Except your pulse.

For information call 0800 70 80 60.

www.jaguar.com

THE NEW JAGUAR S-TYPE.

JAGUAR

DON'T DREAM IT. DRIVE IT.

Car illustrated is a 3.0 V6 fitted with sports alloy wheels, available at extra cost. *Dynamic Stability Control is available at extra cost on all vehicles fitted with automatic transmission.

سكندر من الاصل

BALKANS WAR: THE REFUGEES

'Lost children' wall reunites families

Stephen Farrell
in Brazde finds a tragic symbol of the Kosovo diaspora

It is the first thing you see as you enter Brazde refugee camp. A nondescript, peeling whitewashed wall before which scores of Kosovans remain to press themselves in supplication at all hours of the day.

It is the "Lost Children" wall. No one knows how many people have been separated from their families in the mass movement of refugees across the borders into Albania and Macedonia, only that every row of tents in every temporary camp throws up countless examples of a missing child, wife or husband. Their relatives leave to others the fears surrounding the expected handover by Nato of the camps to the Macedonian authorities, whose police have been accused of beating and abusing the people they are soon to protect.

For those milling around the wall all that matters is finding their loved ones. Elderly women stand on tiptoe to read the curling, scrawled notices pinned on the 50ft by 8ft wall high above their reach. Fathers scan notices typed on the backs of United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees' stationery and printed on scraps of cardboard boxes.

One former Republic of Yugoslavia passport is there, bearing the details of 45-year-old Mrs Kadriu Salih from Lipjan. Another photocopied sheet bears, in colour, pictures of Egzona Kasabagi — aged four, "brown hair, brown eyes" — and her father Nexhat, 45, from Pristina.

Entrusted with the task of finding which other camps and countries have taken the people, herded on to different trains and buses, is the International Committee of the Red Cross, and its registration scheme. New arrivals drop their messages in a cardboard box marked "Messages" pinned to the centre of the wall, and next to it is the ICRC's Lost Children list giving details of family name, father's name, child's name, age, town and camp.

The 'Lost Children' wall at Brazde camp in Macedonia draws refugees in search of information of missing families. A poster, below, of Jehona Aliu seeks news of her parents

Top of the list is five-year-old Jehona Aliu, the five-year-old girl from Ferizaj, whose plight was reported by The Times last Friday. She became separated from her mother, brothers and sisters when she went to the toilet at the Blace border crossing two weeks ago. Jehona is still the only long-standing occupant of the Lost Children tent run by Captain Bill Soper of the Royal Engineers.

She still sits, combing a doll's hair, inside the tent where she comforts other children who arrive, stay until their tearful mothers are found among the 20,000 plus camp population and depart, leaving her behind. The British Army has now issued a poster of Jehona to be circulated around Macedonia, Albania and anywhere they hope to find her father, Sherif, and mother, Sadije. The black and white posters bear the message: "Jehona Aliu, aged five. She was found at Blace and is from Ferizaj. We are looking for her mother Sadije and father Sherif. Anyone who knows Jehona or her parents please contact Captain Bill Soper (English) at the Brazde refugee camp, telephone 070 226 370."

Captain Soper, 48, of 28 Engineer Regiment, is now desperate to find them because many of his local refugee helpers are moving on, having themselves found places to go. "I am getting anxious. We have had no sightings whatsoever," he said last night. "We think her parents went straight off to Albania. She had a crying session last night because she had a bad dream that she had lost her sister, but we are still hoping." Other missing children come from the Brazde, Bojane, Stankovic and Noprostino camps, but older ones are also being sought. Mejdil Malici, 52, yesterday posted details of his children Bejnik, 20, and Edita, 24. "They are somewhere in Tetovo but I do not know where. We were separated a week ago, two days after we left Pristina. I hope I can find them. I do not know if this will work, but there is nothing else I can try," he said.

Beside the ICRC "Lost Children" list is the Missing Families section, where any journalist or aid worker with a mobile telephone is liable to be asked if it can be borrowed to inform friends and families of people's whereabouts. Outside the gates of Brazde, Macedonian guards continue to patrol the fences as buses arrive and depart bringing refugees to and from other sites. Nato will not say when it is due to hand over the running of camps but it is expected within the next few days. The Royal Engineers took the lead in setting up drainage, water supplies and food distribution in the rush to set up the camps after the discovery of the squalid conditions in which 65,000 refugees were kept at the Blace border crossing nearby, but the number of British forces at Brazde has dropped from 250 at its peak to around 80, out of a total of 300 Nato personnel. The Macedonians have promised not to blockade refugees in camps after worldwide protests over the conditions at Blace and the forcible late night movement of 30,000 people from the camp without the knowledge of aid agencies.

Further down the line of cars was Arben, an engineer who had been studying in Salomika. With the city's large Serb diaspora population, he felt a particular target. "They threw me out of the university dormitory. And the police blame Albanians for everything."

On the Greek side of the argument, Albanian crime is a big problem. Popular feeling in Greece over the war is overwhelmingly pro-Yugoslav, and a football match last week between Partizan of Belgrade and a Greek team turned into a wild anti-Nato political demonstration. The continuation of bombing over Orthodox Easter has brought popular feeling to a head.

Greek threats spark exodus

FROM JAMES PETTIFER
IN KAKAVIA

HIGH up here in the Buret mountains on the Greek-Albanian border, hundreds of Albanian workers are fleeing Greece with their families after death threats from Orthodox extremists.

Usually people leave Albania to go to Greece but the war has reversed the flight. A queue of cars miles long stretches down the hillside. Many come from northern Greek towns with strong nationalist and Orthodox traditions.

Miranda and Ilir Gjika stand by the family Fiat, loaded with all their belongings after three years' work in the town of Arta. "We had our flat windows broken. Then our boy here was hit in the street. Last week they painted 'Orthodox or Death' and a Cross on the flat door," they said.

The Greek nationalist Right has a strong clerical flavour, ranging from the lunatic fringe that wants to take 666 off the telephone directory because it is the devil's number, to young skinheads who have adapted Orthodox vocabulary, however much the church rejects them.

Further down the line of cars was Arben, an engineer who had been studying in Salomika. With the city's large Serb diaspora population, he felt a particular target. "They threw me out of the university dormitory. And the police blame Albanians for everything."

On the Greek side of the argument, Albanian crime is a big problem. Popular feeling in Greece over the war is overwhelmingly pro-Yugoslav, and a football match last week between Partizan of Belgrade and a Greek team turned into a wild anti-Nato political demonstration. The continuation of bombing over Orthodox Easter has brought popular feeling to a head.

Save on your international calls.
Add Swiftcall to your BT phone.

COST PER MINUTE	BT	SWIFTCALL	SAVING	COST PER MINUTE	BT	SWIFTCALL	SAVING
USA	19p	9p	53%	GERMANY	21p	14p	33%
JAPAN	49p	16p	67%	FRANCE	21p	14p	33%
INDIA	89p	50p	44%	IRELAND	16p	10p	38%
AUSTRALIA	35p	16p	54%	TAIWAN	86p	42p	51%
SOUTH AFRICA	61p	36p	41%	CANADA	19p	12p	37%

All prices are per minute, include VAT and are correct as of 20.3.99.

*Signifies BT weekend and Friends & Family rate.

Open a Swiftcall account today and make immediate savings on calls to anywhere in the world.

• No need to change your existing number or phone line. • No hidden charges. • Quality Customer Service and clear lines. • Open an account for as little as £25.

TO OPEN YOUR SWIFTCALL ACCOUNT:

CALL FREE 0800 769 0022 TODAY

SWIFTCALL

THE AFFORDABLE
BUSINESS PC,
YOU CAN'T AFFORD TO BE WITHOUT.

At an amazing price of only £599, you can't afford to miss out on the Dell Dimension™ V400c network-ready business PC. Featuring a fast Intel® Celeron™ Processor 400MHz, it can handle all your business needs and even comes with a fully comprehensive 3 year service and support package. So call or get online to Dell the world's largest direct PC manufacturer now, because no office should be without one.

- DELL DIMENSION™ V400c
- Intel® Celeron™ Processor 400MHz
 - Intel® 440BX AGPset
 - 32MB 100MHz SDRAM
 - 128KB Full Speed Cache
 - 4.3GB ATA-33 Hard Drive
 - 15" Colour TC095 SVGA Monitor (13.7" Viewable Area, 0.28 dot pitch)
 - Integrated ATI Rage Pro Turbo 2x AGP 8MB Video Card
 - 14/32 x CD-ROM Drive
 - Integrated 3Com Ethernet TX Network Controller or Integrated Yamaha XG 64 Voice Sound (Speakers Optional)
 - 2 PCI, 1 ISA, 1PC/ISA shared Expansion Slots
 - 2 USB Ports
 - Microsoft® Windows® 98
 - Microsoft Works Suite 98
- £599 (£750.83 inc VAT)
- DELL 3 YEAR BUSINESS LEASE RENTALS £22.50/PM

0870 1524663

3 YEAR COMPREHENSIVE DELL DIMENSION SERVICE In the unlikely event of a problem, our three-year service brings complete peace-of-mind. YEAR ONE: If a problem cannot be resolved by our award winning telephone diagnostics support team, we will dispatch an engineer to you to repair or rectify it. (Over 90% of all customer queries are solved quickly over the phone). YEARS TWO AND THREE: Dell will collect the system, repair it and return it to you — covering all transport, parts and labour. Dell's collect and return service, unlike some other manufacturers', is truly comprehensive even covering mouse, keyboard and monitor. Owning a Dell Dimension is now as hassle-free as buying one.

BE DIRECT™ DELL
www.dell.co.uk

For your security!

Only...

...a swimsuit, a pair of sun glasses, a large beach towel, and a camera will be required.
Before going to Turkey... Leave your doubts at home!

66.937.229 tourists have visited Turkey since 1990.
5.281.184 of those were from Great Britain.
If you still haven't made your decision for a holiday...

...ask your friends about Turkey.

•TOBB Union of Chambers of Commerce, Industry, Maritime Commerce and Commodity Exchanges of Turkey •TÜRSAB Association of Turkish Travel Agencies •TÜROB Turkish Hotel Association

حکومت الامم المتحدة

Sophie m
How to 'C
Prince E

Pries to dera
le Royal Train

Good News for NatWest Customers

NatWest

Sophie may not vow to 'obey' Prince Edward

REPORTS that Sophie Rhys-Jones will promise to obey Prince Edward when they marry on June 19 are distinctly premature, Buckingham Palace said yesterday.

Officials claimed yesterday that details of the wedding had still to be finalised, and that they would be released "in due course". The Prince played his courtship close to his chest, and even managed to keep his engagement secret until he was ready to announce it in his own time.

But speculation, inevitably, is already rife on the details of the ceremony, which is to be conducted in St George's Chapel, Windsor, by the Bishop of Norwich, in front of 500 invited guests and with 2,000 members of the public admitted to the castle courtyard outside to watch the arrivals and departures.

The ceremony is expected to be along traditional lines, but the bride's promise to obey her husband is heard less and less in these days of presumed sexual equality.

Diana, Princess of Wales, declined to obey at her marriage ceremony in St Paul's Cathedral in 1981, as did Ffion

Royal couple are playing wedding plans
close to chest, writes Alan
Hamilton

Jenkins when she married William Hague in the Commons crypt in 1997.

The Prince and Miss Rhys-Jones will start marriage on an equal footing in as much as both run their own businesses — he a television production company and she a public relations consultancy. But both are thought to be in favour of tradition, as is the bishop who will marry them.

Most marriages in the Church of England are conducted according to the 1980 Alternative Service Book, which allows a choice. Couples may "love, cherish and obey" or, rather, simply "love and cherish."

But Church leaders have been surprised at reaction to their new Millennium Prayer Book, designed for use in the next century and quietly launched last summer for test-marketing in 400 parishes. Initial versions completely omitted the word "obey" because the liturgical committee which drew up the book believed it to be old-fashioned and that no modern woman would want it.

Parishes, however, were quick to insist that a woman should at least have the choice, and "obey" was quietly slotted back in.

The Millennium Prayer Book also proposes that it be optional for a bride to walk up the aisle with her father, because it gives the impression that a woman is the property of a man. Instead, in a feminist twist, a couple can arrive at the church together and walk up the aisle together.

It is highly unlikely that the Prince and Miss Rhys-Jones will choose that option; the bride is almost certain to be accompanied up the aisle by her father, Christopher.

Instead of having a single best man, however, the Prince is believed to be considering having both his brothers, the Prince of Wales and the Duke of York, as "supporters" for the ceremony.

The Prince is expected to use the marriage service from the 1928 Book of Common Prayer, which follows closely Thomas Cranmer's ringing and poetic text from the 1662 Anglican prayer book. The 1980 Alternative Service Book is regarded by many as having killed off the poetry.

Life after Spice: Geri Halliwell appears on Canadian television during a world tour to promote her first record since leaving the Spice Girls

Rhys-Jones: believed to be a traditionalist

MP tries to derail the Royal Train

By ALAN HAMILTON

A LABOUR MP will try to shunt the Royal Train into the scrapyard this week, despite strenuous attempts by Buckingham Palace to cut its running costs.

Alan Williams, a member of the Commons Public Accounts Committee, said yesterday he would ask Sir John Bourn, Comptroller and Auditor-General and the Government's financial watchdog, to review the Palace's £17 million annual travel budget.

The MP for Swansea West admitted that his principal target was the train, which during the past financial year was used only 19 times but still cost £1.1 million. Its most notorious journey was to take the Queen from Victoria station to the 1997 Derby, a 20-mile run that cost £11,800.

If Sir John agrees to a review, he will order the National Audit Office to examine funding of all royal travel, including the train and the RAF Royal Squadron. The report could go before the Public Accounts Committee for scrutiny by MPs.

Two years ago, in a re-organisation of royal finances, the Palace assumed direct control of the travel budget. Last year Sir Michael Peat, Keeper of the Privy Purse and the Queen's senior financial adviser, announced savings of £2 million on the royal travel budget.

Costs of running the Royal Train were cut in the first year from a budgeted £1.8 million to £1.1 million. Sir Michael said at the time that the cost for the current financial year should be less than £1 million.

Recently the Palace announced that it would further cut costs by leasing the train to ministers for official duties but there have been no takers. The train has been cut from 14 coaches to eight and its two locomotives now work on normal duties when not required for royal travel.

Mr Williams said: "I want the whole system looked at, to see if we are getting value for money under the new arrangements. I spent years chasing the waste on the Royal Yacht. The train is very similar — both are royal toys."

"It is hard to see why government departments would want to use the train at all, as ministers have been happily travelling about their business on ordinary trains for years."

A Saxo at £6,995.
Something to sing about.

Plus 2 Years' Free Insurance With Elect 3 Finance.

£6,995 notes? For a spectacular Citroën Saxo Spree? Music to your ears. The orchestra now gets into its stride. Driver's Artybat Engine Immobiliser. RDS radio cassette!...the crescendo subsides. To be replaced by a gentle hush. Thanks to a specially engineered floor pan. Which filters out vibration and road noise. Making the auditorium an idyll.

tranquil place to be. But hark! What is this sound? A dial tone? Surely this is a driver phoning 0800 262 262 to arrange a test drive? Or perhaps just for more information? (For example, any Saxo purchased on Elect 3 Finance comes with two years' free insurance.) The audience rises to its feet. Flowers are thrown. Tears are shed. Etc.

CITROËN SAXO

Good News for NatWest Customers

NatWest announces the following reduction in interest rates.

Effective from (and including) 4 May 1999

Old Annual Variable Rate	Old EAR (overdraft only)	Personal Lending	New Annual Variable Rate	New EAR (overdraft only)
8.25%	8.56%	Advantage Premier Overdraft	8.00%	8.29%
8.00%	N/A	Advantage Premier Loan	7.75%	N/A 10.25%	10.74%	Gold Plus	10.00%	10.47%

Hurry up.

Composing innovative solutions for insurance, financial protection and asset management. Global strength. Local commitment. Your aspirations. Our passion.

Social security.

No security.

Short term.

Long term.

Conservative.

Adventurous.

Invest.

Disinvest.

Time for a rest.

ZURICH
FINANCIAL SERVICES

*Allied Dunbar • Eagle Star
Scudder Investments Threadneedle • Zurich*

www.zurich.com

LSE (London Stock Exchange): ADZ Allied Zurich
SWX (Swiss Exchange): ZUAN Zurich Allied

In the UK, Zurich Life, Eagle Star Life and Allied Dunbar & Threadneedle form three separate marketing groups, which can only advise on and sell their own products.

يمكننا ان نقدم لك people ex

no joke f

wife ups up Week end to Gaming - the Game

Just Simple Savings on your phone bill.

Call free on 0800

Pupils' exam blunders are no joke for school chiefs

Education department is less than amused by shocking ignorance, reports Diana Blamires

A MYTH is a female moth and Joan of Arc was burnt to a stake, according to GCSE candidates who have come top of the class in misunderstanding and inspired guesswork.

A list of the top 20 clangers in recent examination answers has been compiled by examiners throughout Britain.

Howlers may bring light relief to examiners but the Department of Education and Employment was yesterday not amused by the shocking ignorance displayed by some candidates.

A spokeswoman said: "The Government views improving literacy as very important. It has introduced a new literacy strategy to help pupils improve their reading, writing and spelling. Primary school children now have to spend an hour reading every day as part of the strategy."

"We are trying to ensure that children have the basic skills once they reach secondary schools so that hopefully these kind of mistakes will be made less often in the future," she said.

"The Government is aware of claims that GCSE standards are slipping. The Qualifications and Curriculum Agency carried out research to see whether GCSE standards had fallen over the years and concluded that they are being maintained."

"The Government has set up an independent panel to Raleigh: did not invent cigarettes and smoking

Socrates: did not die from an overdose of wedlock

Drake: did not circumcise the world with a clipper monitor GCSE and A level standards."

Nick Seaton, chairman of the Campaign for Real Education, which is pressing for higher standards in state schools, said: "These howlers suggest that there are serious deficiencies in pupils' learning of the basics. They are making a lot of spelling mistakes and misusing commonly used words."

"There is a considerable amount of research showing that GCSE standards have got worse. If you look at grade A GCSE exam papers now compared with those ten years ago there are more spelling mistakes in the later papers. It is something that should be addressed as a matter of urgency. These mistakes are occurring too frequently for it to be by chance."

Theresa May, the Conservative education spokesman, added: "It is a concern when we see people who have come through the system making these howlers."

"The Government needs to make sure that everyone learns the basics. It is very important to make sure that standards don't fall."

"There are also fears that boys are not doing as well as girls at GCSE because there is more coursework involved," she added. "Boys often tend to leave all the work until the end and do last-minute revision for exams."

The examiners who marked recent history, music, religion and classical studies GCSE examination papers found that some pupils would have benefited from more revision.

History has been rewritten for some of our nation's greatest heroes. According to one pupil: "Sir Walter Raleigh is a historical figure — he invented cigarettes and started smoking."

Another candidate wrote: "Sir Francis Drake circumcised the world with a 100ft clipper."

The further back into history that pupils delved, the more their memories failed them. "Ancient Egypt was inhabited by mummies and they wrote in hydraulics," wrote one confused candidate. "Julius Caesar extinguished himself on the battlefields of Gaul," wrote another.

Pupils who had no answers resorted to hypothesising. "Beethoven wrote music even though he was deaf — he was so deaf he wrote loud music," claimed one candidate, while another suggested: "The sun never set on the British Empire because the British Empire is in the East and the sun sets in the West."

The Classics also produced some classics. "In the Olympic Games, Greeks ran races, jumped, hurled the biscuits and threw the java," according to one candidate. "Socrates died from an overdose of wedlock — after his death his career suffered a dramatic decline," was also not the right answer.

Some pupils chose to invent their own religion when Biblical questions proved too taxing. "Moses went up on Mount Cyanide to get the ten commandments," one mistaken pupil answered. A new theory of Creation was offered by another candidate who declared: "Adam and Eve were created from an apple tree."

Contrary to the belief of one GCSE pupil, Joan of Arc was not burnt to a steak

Ex-wife steps up pressure on Woodhead to resign

By HANNAH BETTS

PRESSURE was increasing on the Chief Inspector of Schools, Chris Woodhead, yesterday as the Government announced it was examining documents sent by his ex-wife that she claims prove he lied about an affair with a former pupil.

Cathy Woodhead, joined calls for an inquiry into the episode, adding that she may sue her former husband if the Government refuses to take action. Department for Education and Employment officials said they had received information and documents from her. But they would not reveal the nature of the information, nor whether it could threaten Mr Woodhead's career.

David Blunkett, the Education and Employment Secretary, said yesterday that, so far, he had been made aware of no evidence that would affect Mr Woodhead's position. "Angry and distraught recollections or notes made by a solicitor in the autumn of 1976 do not constitute a case for action or anything that could threaten Chris Woodhead's job," he added.

Cathy Woodhead on her wedding day

Mr Woodhead said: "I have no comment to make on what my former wife wants to do. She must make up her own mind to do what she wants to do for herself."

Cathy Woodhead accuses her ex-husband of trying to conceal the fact that his affair with Amanda Johnston began while he was a teacher and she a pupil at the Gordano School in Bristol in the mid-Seventies — an allegation that Mr Woodhead and Ms Johnston have denied.

Mrs Woodhead also claims that her ex-husband tried to persuade her to collude in the denial, to protect his £115,000-a-year job. She has argued that solicitors' notes from their divorce proceedings make it clear that the affair pre-dated Ms Johnston leaving school.

Within the last month, former Gordano School teachers have supported her allegations. The Labour MP Alice Mahon tabled a Commons motion calling on Mr Woodhead to resign — a call backed by several delegates to the National Union of Teachers' Easter conference. Other unions have argued in favour of a government inquiry.

CATCH THE WAVE

If you're looking to catch the Internet wave then NetDirect are just what you've been waiting for. Friendly and easy to understand technical help coupled with fast, reliable and consistent Internet access have made NetDirect one of the UK's top performing Internet service providers. Investment in technology and the right people ensure that you get the most out of the Internet, whether it's for business or pleasure. Our range of products have been designed for every level of user. From corporate businesses to single site operations, we can provide a tailored solution to suit your needs. So, if you're looking for full, unlimited and uncomplicated Internet access — talk to NetDirect.

CALL FREE FOR MORE INFORMATION 0800 731 3311

NetDirect

No Gimmicks, No Games,

Just simple savings on your phone bill.

- Pay monthly by Direct Debit or Pre-Pay
- No need to change your phone or phone number

What would you expect from the fastest growing telecoms carrier in the world?

Communications Week International

PRIMUS Telecommunications

GLOBAL network GLOBAL savings GLOBAL sense

0800 036 0007

NATIONAL RATES	5p
AUSTRIA	10p
CHINA	35p
HONG KONG	12p
INDIA	48p
ISRAEL	15p
JAPAN	16p
MALAYSIA	20p
MAURITIUS	40p
NZ / OZ	13p
RUSSIA	30p
SINGAPORE	18p
SOUTH AFRICA	31p
THAILAND	40p
UAE	38p
USA	7p

TOM FINNE

Early bird: a newly arrived puffin finds a roost on Sumburgh Head, the most southerly point on Shetland. The birds, which spend most of their lives at sea, returning to land only to breed, have arrived nearly a month early this year because of a plentiful supply of inshore food

Bishop pleads for solution to arms deadlock

SINN FEIN and the Ulster Unionists will go to Stormont tomorrow to try to salvage the Northern Ireland peace process from collapse. The two sides are as polarised as ever over the decommissioning of IRA arms.

Sean Brady, the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Armagh, pleaded yesterday with both sides to find a solution and avoid a return to the "mayhem, murder and misery" that has dominated life in the Province for more than 30 years.

The chances of a solution, however, are slim. Sinn Fein refuses to recognise the Hillsborough Declaration, drawn up by the British and Irish Governments before Easter in an attempt to break the deadlock. The republicans describe it as "unacceptable".

The declaration proposes that the political parties in Northern Ireland nominate an executive and, within a month, hold a day of reconciliation when terrorists will prove that their weapons are "beyond use". Tony Blair and Bertie Ahern, to give Sinn Fein some leeway, said decommissioning was not a precondition to entry to the executive, but "an obligation".

One republican source, a former IRA prisoner, described the declaration as "a waste of paper": no amount of semantics would make the IRA hand over their arms, particularly when loyalist violence was on the increase.

The republican movement's continued defiance leaves the two Governments in a difficult position. David Trimble, leader of the Ulster Unionists, wants tangible proof of IRA disarmament before his party sits on the executive with Sinn Fein. He also needs it to win back the half of his assembly party opposed to the peace process.

One Unionist source said: "There is no room for manoeuvre. The UUP leadership has gone as far as it can go. We are looking to the republicans for movement. And it has to be real movement. Showing a sealed bunker as supposed proof of 'beyond use' is not enough."

Decommissioning has been an issue in the peace process since the start, but the two Governments have repeatedly skirted around it, hoping that a way out would emerge as the peace process rolled on. While Unionists continued to insist on the handover of IRA weapons, despite Sinn Fein's insistence that it could not deliver, Sinn Fein hoped the matter would be dropped.

Republicans view any handover of weapons as a surrender. If a way is to be found round the deadlock, the two Governments must come up with a way of satisfying the Unionists without securing an IRA surrender. Such a move could result in a split in Sinn Fein and major defections to the republican dissidents.

To date, a successful formula has been elusive. However, the Governments remain optimistic that one will be found and are encouraged by both sides' willingness to try to find a political solution. "Sinn Fein hasn't thrown the whole process out of the window and said they're not coming back, so there is hope yet," one Dublin source said.

The talks will be led tomorrow by Mo Mowlam, the Northern Ireland Secretary, and David Andrews, the Irish Foreign Minister. Mr Blair and Mr Ahern are on standby if there are signs of movement.

Leading article, page 23

Mortgages

If you can't choose between a fixed rate and a variable rate, why not have both?

Preferential Rate

Fixed Rates

Buy-to-Let

100% Mortgage

Personal Choice™ is already one of the most flexible mortgages around. But now it's even more flexible with an option to fix part of the loan until the end of April 2002 at just 5.99%, while paying the rest at the variable rate, currently 8.94% (typical APR 7.1% variable). Subject to a minimum amount of £30,000 at each rate. This means you can benefit from having a fixed rate on some of your loan. But you still have the flexibility to pay more each month when you can and less when you can't. You can even take payment holidays of up to six months. Particularly useful if you are self-employed with a fluctuating income. You can pay in lump sums without penalty to reduce the amount of borrowing you have at the variable rate. A redemption charge to the fixed rate borrowing will apply during the fixed rate period. If you are transferring your mortgage, you can take advantage of our free remortgage package. You can even raise additional capital. Call our helpline on 0800 810 810, any time between 8am to 10pm, and we'll be delighted to help you.

5.99%

8.94%

8.94%

8.94%

8.94%

8.94%

BANK OF SCOTLAND MORTGAGES DIRECT
call us free
8am - 10pm, 7 days a week

0800 810 810

Always worth talking to.

All lending is subject to approval by the Bank of the applicant's status and valuation of property. Full details and a written consumer credit quotation are available from Bank of Scotland Mortgages Direct, PO Box 12304, Edinburgh EH12 9DA. The Bank of Scotland represents only BANK OF SCOTLAND MORTGAGING GROUP, members of which are regulated by the Personal Investment Authority, for advising on and selling life assurance, pension and collective investment products. Typical example: A £60,000 interest only mortgage over 25 years on a property valued at £100,000 of which £30,000 would have an annual interest rate of 5.99% until 30th April 2002 and will then revert to Mortgages Direct Personal Choice Rate (Variable), currently 6.94% and £30,000 would have an annual interest rate of 8.94%. Net monthly payments of £328.55. Net monthly payments show the benefit of tax relief at 10% under the MRRAS Scheme. MRRAS is calculated under current tax legislation and may alter. It is available on the first £30,000 of the mortgage only. At the end of 25 years £60,000 is payable. The total amount payable is £163,005. This includes £160 for Valuation Fees and £500 Legal Fees for the taking of security. The example assumes no charge to Mortgages Direct release equity from your property are all available within pre-set conditions. *Additional borrowing will be at the variable rate. Telephone calls may be recorded for security purposes and may be monitored under the Bank's quality control procedures. The Bank of Scotland and Bank of Scotland Mortgages Direct are registered trademarks and Personal Choice is a trademark of The Governor and Company of the Bank of Scotland. Bank of Scotland subscribes to The Banking Code and adheres to The Mortgage Code.

YOUR HOME IS AT RISK IF YOU DO NOT KEEP UP REPAYMENTS ON A MORTGAGE OR OTHER LOAN SECURED ON IT.

Darts research scores bull's eye

By NIGEL HAWKES
SCIENCE EDITOR

AMATEUR darts players do themselves no favours by trying to copy the champions seen on television.

David Percy, a mathematician at Salford University, has proved that for poor players, aiming at the treble 20 is not the best strategy. Rank amateurs do better to risk derision and aim at the bull's eye, he says. Slightly better players should go for the treble 14.

Dr Percy has applied Bayesian decision theory to the game, using data provided by three Salford students. The method is a way of drawing sound conclusions from limited data.

He asked the students to aim 50 darts at a cross on a sheet of graph paper. From this he could work out the scatter in each student's throwing.

He used the data to simulate the results of throwing 10,000 darts, and calculated an average score per dart for different target points on the board.

Top players aim at the treble 20 because it is worth 60, ten more than the bull's eye. But the 20 sector is flanked by one and five, and he calculated that poor players are liable to end up scoring a paltry 26.

Play to win: amateurs should forget treble 20

In Mathematics Today, Dr Percy concludes that the two worst players he tested would score more by going for the bull. The difference is not enormous — rather less than an average one point per dart thrown.

However, even for the third and most competent player, the best results would come from going for the bull rather than his next best option, treble 14.

CAN A CAREFULLY POSITIONED FISH HELP YOUR LOVE LIFE?

COLLINS GEMS
ALL THE FACTS FOR UNDER A FIVER

COLLINS understand more

سكينة الناصري

Self-made fortune propels twins into wealth league, reports Robin Young Isabel Maxwell started business on a shoestring . . .

sold it in 1995 they received about £4.4 million worth of Excite shares in part payment. By mid-1998 those shares were worth about £50 million, but when Excite was sold in January their shares were worth £100 million."

BRITAIN'S RICHEST TOP 10

Hans Rausing (food packaging, Tetra Pak)	£3,400m
Lord Sainsbury and family (retailing, J.Sainsbury)	£3,300m
George Soros (finance, Soros Fund Management)	£2,000m
Joseph Lewis (finance, living in Bahamas)	£2,750m
Duke of Westminster (land and property, Grosvenor Estate)	£1,750m
Lady Grevillestar and the Maboates family (Littewood woods, motor cars and football clubs)
Garfield Weston and family (Associated British Foods)	£1,500m
Sri and Gopal Hinduja (trading and finance, Hinduja Group)	£1,500m
Bruno Schroeder and family (training, Schroders)	£1,300m
Richard Branson (travel, retailing and entertainment, Virgin)	£1,200m
Lakshmi Mittal (steel, Spat International)	£1,200m

Their twin sisters are ranked 27th equal in the rich list as a result of their shares windfall, but have still not done quite as well as the offspring of another famous father who is also new to the list. Paloma Picasso, daughter

Other debutantes in the list include Slavica Ecclestone, the Croatian-born wife of Bernie Ecclestone, who is reckoned to share a fortune of £900 million in his Formula One motor-racing empire, and Josie Rowland, widow of the businessman Tiny, reckoned to have inherited £26 million in British assets but per-

The ten quickest-made fortunes are calculated to be those of David Bromtlow, who started in publishing and sports goods in 1991 and is now worth £800 million, Terry Matthews, whose average annual growth rate for his electronics business has exceeded £84 million since 1986, and James Dyson, whose vacuum cleaners launched in 1993 have sucked up £500 million in net worth.

... with twin Christine. Now they are worth £100 million

Leading article, page 23

BY AUDREY MAGEE

She told the British Psychological Society's annual conference in Belfast that visitors stayed longer at the changed cages because they were "a more complex environment". The research is being used by shelters across the UK. The RSPCA rehoused about 28,000 dogs last year. It put down 12,365 for medical reasons and 800 for behavioural problems.

By DOMINIC KENNEDY

Yorkshire Water is paying a £500 bonus to all staff on call over the millennium weekend.

The Royal College of Nursing has asked for £500 for its millennium-night nurses, while Unison is seeking a similar deal for everyone from street sweepers to live-in social workers.

BY PHILIP HOWARD passed the issue of animal pas-

Year	Percentage of Population Aged 65 and Over
1950	7
1960	8
1970	10
1980	12
1990	14
2000	16
2010	17
2020	18

Are animals like us because they have passions, or superior to us because they do not have passions? And what can animal passions tell us about the workings of human passions? In the words of the old music hall song, "Do Shrimps Make Good Mothers? Yes They Do".

After solving the puzzle, the Classical Association dined on

COMPLETE SYSTEM. TOTALLY AMAZING PRICE

SALE STILL ON! CALL NOW FOR DETAILS

Home Premium™ System 400

INTEL® CELERON™ PROCESSOR 400MHz

FREE SCANNER

USB Colour Scanner worth £82.24 inc VAT

PLUS PRINTER

Epson Color Printer worth
£63.99 inc VAT

FREE 17" MONITOR UPGRADE FOR A LIMITED PERIOD ONLY

PICK UP YOUR FREE TINY ONLINE CD AT ANY TINY SHOWROOM NOW!

INCLUDES

Over £299 worth of Microsoft® and other software

DVD ROM Drive compatible with CD

UP TO £275 PLUS FREE OF EXTRA SOFTWARE

FREE

17" Monitor Upgrade worth £82.24 inc VAT

SPECIAL OFFER

£799 ex VAT £938.83 inc VAT

PRICES EXCLUDE DELIVERY

VISIT YOUR LOCAL TINY SHOWROOM OR CALL FREEPHONE FOR MORE INFORMATION

tiny

0800

731 9372

Tiny Online FREE internet access on all Tiny systems

NOW

think big about your PC...think tiny

TINY COMPUTERS LIMITED, REDHILL BUSINESS PARK, BONEHURST ROAD, SALFORDS, REDHILL, SURREY RH1 5YB. FAX 01293 822 514. www.tiny.com

NOTHING TO PAY UNTIL APRIL 2000 On All Systems

97 SHOWROOMS NATIONWIDE OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK*

MOST OPEN Sat To Sun MON-SAT Bedford & Aylesbury NOW OPEN

AIRBORNE	LIVERPOOL
ALTRINCHAM	LONDON W1*
AYLESBURY	LONDON EC2*
BEDFORD	LUTON
BELFAST	LONDONDERRY
BEXLEYHEATH	MAIDSTONE
BIRMINGHAM	MANCHESTER
BOLTON	MEADOWNFIELD
BOURNEMOUTH	- SHEFFIELD
BRANDVALL	WIGAN
BRADFORD	MILTON KEYNES
BRIGHTON	NEWCASTLE
BRIGHTON	NEWPORT
BROMLEY	NORTHAMPTON*
CANTERBURY	NOVENA
CARDIFF	NOTTINGHAM
CHELTENHAM	OXFORD
CHESTER	PETERBOROUGH
COLCHESTER	PIMLICO
COVENTRY	POREMOUTH
CRAWLEY	PRESTON
CRYSTAL PALACE	READING
DERBY	SHREWSBURY
DERBY	SLough
DUNDEE	SOUTHAMPTON
DURHAM	SOUTHWICH
EArl'S COURT	STEVENAGE
EAST LINDSEY	STONE-ON-TRENT
EDINBURGH	SUNDERLAND
FARNHAM	SUTTON
GLOUCESTER	SWANSEA
GUILDFORD	SWINDON
HARLOW	TAINTON
HARRISON	TUNBRIDGE WELLS
HARTFORD	WALTHAMSTOW
HEDDERSFIELD	WARRINGTON
HULL	WATFORD
KENT	WIGAN
KIPPERTON	WOOD GREEN
KIPPERTON	WOOD GREEN

LA takes cold comfort from El Niño's sister

FROM GILES WHITTALL IN LOS ANGELES

THE coldest spring in 100 years left the bewildered citizens of Los Angeles shivering at the weekend — if they were not skiing in the local mountains or gazing inland from the beach at scenes that might have been from Switzerland.

In what is officially the third week of spring, up to a foot and a half of snow blanketed the mountains that form the city's eastern edge, while temperatures on the fringes of Los Angeles County plunged lower than those in parts of Alaska. Late last week there were even reports of snow in suburbs as low as 1,000 feet above sea level.

A series of cold fronts generated in the Gulf of Alaska blew ashore last Wednesday, and failed to warm up over the weekend as predicted. The results included hail in Malibu and Hollywood, and temperatures of 18F atop Mount Wilson, a short drive from Pasadena. In Fairbanks, which is just south of the Arctic Circle, the corresponding temperature was 19F.

The freak conditions in and around one of the most climatically spoilt cities on earth have been blamed by some on a split jetstream carrying weather normally destined for Washington State further south than usual. Others blame the cold snap on La Niña, El Niño's chilly sister.

Both weather phenomena are driven by changing surface temperatures in the Pacific Ocean, but unlike the warm downpours dumped on Southern California last year by El Niño, La Niña has proved cold and relatively dry. Despite three winter storms since Easter, Los Angeles' total precipitation so far this year has been less than half last year's equivalent.

South of the city, the snow has brought tragedy. Last week, nine Mexicans died in blizzards in rugged mountains east of San Diego, where illegal immigrants increasingly cross the US border at night on foot because of clampdowns at official crossing points.

But in middle-class Los Angeles the effect of the freeze has been mainly sartorial.

Seldom-used sweaters have been pulled from bottom drawers and half-term family outings, complete with woolly hats and scarves, have resembled scenes from a New England winter.

From Santa Monica to Hermosa Beach, the groomed sands that by this time of year are usually welcoming their first plane loads of European sun worshippers were largely deserted over the weekend. Joggers ran in full tracksuits, surfers were few and far between, and the Los Angeles Times asked in a baffled reference to Alaska's famous dog-sled race: "What next for shivering LA? The Iditarod?"

Coastal communities north of San Francisco received their first snow since records began, while ski resorts in the Lake Tahoe region looked forward to a long season thanks to up to two feet of fresh powder snow in the past few days.

Mammoth Mountain, the closest major ski resort to Los Angeles, now has a 12 to 14-ft base.

There was some relief from the cold in Palm Springs — but not much. Yesterday's temperature of 75F was tepid for this time of year.

The forecasters, meanwhile, predict that things will warm up this week. But we've heard that sort of thing before.

Dismay as India starts missile tests

BY MICHAEL BINYON AND ZAHID HUSSAIN IN KARACHI

George Fernandes at the announcement yesterday

INDIA yesterday test-fired its Agni II ballistic missile, breaking a five-year period of restraint and drawing global expressions of concern.

Britain and the United States voiced worry and regret, giving a warning that the test of the intermediate-range missile would provoke Pakistan into a similar military response.

Sartaj Aziz, the Pakistani Foreign Minister, swiftly confirmed their fears, saying his country would give a "befitting response". He said: "We had decided on restraint. But now Pakistan will have to examine its options how to respond to the Indian tests."

He gave a warning that the missile test could propel the South Asian region into a full-blown arms race. A Foreign Ministry spokesman said Pakistan was obliged to maintain a deterrent to guarantee peace and stability in the region, and officials expect a Pakistani test of its medium-range Ghauri missile soon.

The Indian test came 11 months after its controversial nuclear test. The Government called it an "historic feat" and Atal Behari Vajpayee, the Prime Minister, congratulated the scientists responsible for this "great achievement".

It was said to be a perfect textbook launch, made from the eastern coastal state of Orissa. The missile is officially said to have a range of 1,250 miles, but defence experts say it can reach over 1,500 miles, putting all of Pakistan within its range. George Fernandes, the Indian Defence Minister, said the test had made the Agni II an operational weapon system and no one could dare to threaten India now.

The Foreign Office expressed regret at the test. "We continue to believe that restraint in developing missiles and nuclear weapons is in India's long-term interest," a spokesman said. America also urged India to show restraint in keeping with its declared intention of avoiding a nuclear race with its neighbours.

Mr Fernandes was defiant, however. "This concerns our national security. No one can put pressure on us. We don't need to be told by anybody about restraint."

China, which also comes within range of the Agni II, made no immediate comment on the test.

India said that it had given Pakistan a day's advance warning of the missile test, in keeping with a declaration signed by Mr Vajpayee during his visit to Lahore in February. But Pakistan complained that it was informed only in response to an inquiry by its High Commissioner in Delhi.

Gopalaswami Parthasarathy, India's High Commissioner to Pakistan, said India's missile tests were not a threat to any country. "We have pledged no first use of these weapons — and India is committed to its talks with Pakistan," he said.

Pakistan last year tested the Ghauri, with a range of more than 930 miles. And during a military parade last month it also displayed its untested Shaheen missile. Pakistan conducted a series of nuclear tests in response to the Indian explosions last May, but since then both countries have declared a unilateral moratorium. Most defence experts believe that they may conduct more nuclear tests before signing the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty sometime this year.

Zhu Rongji, the Chinese Prime Minister, shows off the cowboy hat he was given at a state dinner in Denver

Beijing cowboy hits the trail

FROM IAN BRODIE IN WASHINGTON

SMILING broadly, Zhu Rongji, Prime Minister of China, dutifully donned a cowboy hat and listened to cowboy music when he reached the Rockies on his American tour.

In Denver, he was serenaded by the Bar D Wranglers with such tunes as Tumbling Tumbleweeds and Cool Water. Then he moved on for a glimpse of another aspect of American popular culture, with a visit to the training gym of the Denver Broncos, the Super Bowl champions of the National Football League. Once more playing the "media savvy" good sport, Mr Zhu tossed a football around for the cameras.

He showed a shaft of sly humour during a technology company tour, inquiring if the white laboratory coat he was given to wear had been made in China. Yes, he was told.

Demonstrators continued to dog Mr Zhu in Colorado, home to a large Tibetan community. Twenty-three people carrying signs that read "China out of Tibet" were detained briefly on a street that had been cleared for security.

Although Mr Zhu's tourist schedule was busy — later yesterday he moved on to Chicago — the mood was less intense than during earlier talks in Washington, where he failed to reach agreement with President Clinton on Chinese entry into the World Trade Organisation. Mr Zhu was not sure Mr Clinton's assessment of Congressional reluctance to admit China was accurate.

He claimed that one unidentified senator had whispered in his ear: "Just wait for about two months. I guarantee we will ratify that agreement."

TSB Interest Rates for Business Customers

These rates of interest apply with effect from start of business on 12th April 1999

	OLD AER %	OLD GROSS %	NEW AER %	NEW GROSS %	NEW NET %
Business Investment Account – paid monthly
30 day notice account
£250,000+	4.23	4.15	3.97	3.90	3.12
£100,000-249,999	4.18	4.10	3.92	3.85	3.08
£25,000-99,999	3.92	3.85	3.66	3.60	2.88
£10,000-24,999	3.40	3.35	3.14	3.10	2.48
£1-9,999	0.50	0.50	0.25	0.25	0.20
Premier Interest Account – paid monthly
14 day notice account
£250,000+	4.13	4.05	3.87	3.80	3.04
£100,000-249,999	3.92	3.85	3.66	3.60	2.88
£25,000-99,999	3.66	3.60	3.40	3.35	2.68
£10,000-24,999	3.25	3.20	2.99	2.95	2.36
£1-9,999	2.02	2.00	1.76	1.75	1.40
Business Call Account – paid monthly
£250,000+	2.58	2.55	2.32	2.30	1.84
£100,000-249,999	2.38	2.35	2.12	2.10	1.68
£25,000-99,999	2.02	2.00	1.76	1.75	1.40
£10,000-24,999	1.71	1.70	1.46	1.45	1.16
£1-9,999	1.46	1.45	1.21	1.20	0.96
Practice Call Account – paid quarterly
£1+	3.55	3.50	3.29	3.25	2.60
Designated Clients Account – paid quarterly
£100,000+	3.44	3.40	3.19	3.15	2.52
£50,000-99,999	3.29	3.25	2.93	2.90	2.32
£10,000-49,999	2.93	2.90	2.63	2.60	2.08
£2,000-9,999	2.17	2.15	1.91	1.90	1.52
£1-1,999	0.35	0.35	0.25	0.25	0.20
BICA for Charities* – paid quarterly
£1+	1.86	1.85	1.61	1.60	1.28
Schools Banking Account – paid quarterly
£1+	3.29	3.25	3.03	3.00	2.40
Business Interest Cheque Account† – paid quarterly
£250,000+	1.86	1.85	1.61	1.60	1.28
£100,000-249,999	1.41	1.40	1.15	1.15	0.92
£50,000-99,999	0.95	0.95	0.70	0.70	0.56
£25,000-49,999	0.50	0.50	0.25	0.25	0.20
£10,000-24,999	0.40	0.40	0.15	0.15	0.12
£1-9,999	0.25	0.25	0.10	0.10	0.08
Capital Reserve Account – paid quarterly
7 day notice account
£250,000+	4.11	4.05	3.85	3.80	3.04
£100,000-249,999	3.91	3.85	3.65	3.60	2.88
£50,000-99,999	3.65	3.60	3.39	3.35	2.68
£10,000-49,999	3.24	3.20	2.98	2.95	2.36
£1-9,999	2.63	2.60	2.27	2.25	1.80
Premium Deposit – paid annually
No longer available for new business
£1,000+	1.50	1.50	1.50	1.50	1.20
£1-999	0.50	0.50	0.50	0.50	0.40
TSB Deposit Account – paid annually
No longer available for new business
£1+	0.50	0.50	0.50	0.50	0.40
Flexible Business Loan
Standard					11.28
Special					9.12
Preferential					8.64
Business Overdraft
Managed A					10.92
Managed B					9.84
Managed C					8.76
Managed D					8.28

For more information, visit our website – www.tsb.co.uk/businessaccounts

TSB

Part of the Lloyds TSB Group

Interest rates may vary from time to time. All rates are per annum except where stated. AER stands for Annual Equivalent Rate and is the national rate which illustrates the gross or net rate as if paid and compounded on an annual basis. As every advert for a savings product will contain an AER you will be able to compare more easily what return you can expect from your savings over time. GROSS – Gross rate is the contractual rate of interest payable before the deduction of income tax at the rate specified by law. NET – The rate of interest which would be payable after allowing for the deduction of income tax at the rate specified by law. Interest is normally paid at the net rate, unless the account falls within an exempt category or the account holder qualifies to receive interest gross. *For charities with turnover above £100,000 pa. †For charities with turnover under £100,000 pa. TSB Bank Plc, 71 Lombard Street, London EC3P 3BS. TSB Bank Scotland Plc, Henry Duncan House, 120 George Street, Edinburgh EH2 4JH.

WORLD IN BRIEF

First American 'from Polynesia'

Los Angeles: Thigh bones found on an island off California could be from North America's oldest skeleton, according to scientists whose findings challenge American Indians' most cherished beliefs about the continent's population (Giles Whittall writes). The bones, stored since being found in 1959, are now said to be from a woman who died about 13,000 years ago — 1,400 years earlier than first thought. The difference is crucial, suggesting the New World's first human beings may have come not by foot from Siberia, but by boat, possibly from Polynesia.

"She may be the earliest inhabitant we have discovered," John Johnson of Santa Barbara Museum said after a paper was presented on Arlington Springs Woman, outlining retesting using the latest DNA and radiocarbon dating methods. If the date is correct, she would have lived when the mainland was roamed by woolly mammoths and largely covered by glaciers.

Timor's bishop attacked

Jakarta: Bishop Carlos Belo, the East Timorese spiritual leader and Nobel laureate, escaped injury when the convoy he was travelling in was attacked by a pro-Indonesian militia group (Patricia Nunan writes). The bishop was returning to the East Timorese capital of Dili after celebrating Mass at the site of a massacre that happened on Tuesday in Liquisa, 18 miles west of here, when about 30 militia members threw stones and steel pipes at the convoy.

Israeli troops pull out

Jerusalem: Moshe Arens, the Defence Minister, announced amid growing public pressure that Israel will reduce its military presence in southern Lebanon (Ross Dunn writes). He said that 80 per cent of Israeli army posts in southern Lebanon have been transferred to allies in the unofficial South Lebanon Army and more would be handed over this month. That would enable more Israeli troops to leave the self-declared security zone, established in 1985 to prevent cross-border attacks.

Child-killing charge

Vienna: Austria's Ministry of Justice has indicted Dr Heinrich Gross, 84, as an accessory to the murder of five children deemed to be handicapped under Hitler's euthanasia programme (Nigel Glass writes). His lawyer, Nikolaus Lehner, said that he was considering an appeal. The failure to charge Dr Gross, who headed the former Vienna Am Spiegelgrund mental hospital where 700 children were murdered, had scandalised those Austrians who say the country is unwilling to face its Nazi past.

German spared stoning in Iran

FROM ROGER BOYES IN BONN

A GERMAN engineer sentenced death by stoning has been released on bail after Bonn intervened with Iran.

Helmut Hofer, 57, of Hamburg, was arrested by the Iranian authorities in 1997 after being accused of having sexual intercourse with an Iranian medical student. He was given the toughest possible sentence for adultery — stoning — and relations between Iran and Germany plunged.

Hofer will be released on bail of £100,000, but he is obliged to stay in Iran until the sentence is formally quashed. The woman involved was sentenced to 90 lashes.

Bobo Hornbach, adviser to Gerhard Schröder, the German Chancellor, who has been conducting the negotiations with Iran, made plain in Tehran at the weekend that Hofer's release would help to end Iran's isolation: President Khatami accepted an invitation to visit Germany.

The stoning case took on several bizarre twists. Hofer denied that he did more than kiss the student. The 28-year-old woman was obliged to undergo medical tests to establish her virginity. Three gynaecologists found she was a virgin; a fourth doctor — the one believed by the clerical court — said she was not.

The Hofer investigation coincided with the trial in Germany of a group of assassins in the pay of the Iranian secret service. Their sentencing led to a European diplomatic boycott of Iran.

Back Pain? Painful Sleep?

Your sleeping posture is more important than you think.

Tension free sleep is vital to your health.

The Tempur® Mattress and Pillow mould to the body, resulting in optimum distribution of pressure.

SLEEP ON IT FOR 60 NIGHTS WITH COMPLETE MONEY BACK GUARANTEE... you can only win...

The Tempur® Mattress and Pillow are recommended by more than 20,000 medical professionals.

Ask your Physiotherapist, Chiropractor or Osteopath.

Please send me details on the Tempur® Mattress & Pillow

Name _____

Address _____

Phone _____

Send coupon to: Tempur-Pedic (UK) Ltd, FREEPOST (HA 4633) Hayes, Middlesex UB3 1BR or call 0800 616 135

How to be an urban peasant

Simple shapes in linen, cheesecloth and rosebud prints give a rustic look that you can wear in the city, says Fashion Editor Lisa Armstrong

Ruffed, sprigged and laced into the kind of perfectly buffed walking boots that Tess of the d'Urbervilles might have opted for — had she been contemplating popping into Knightsbridge for a spot of lunch in Daphne's — the personifications of the new rural idyll tramped down the catwalk by the score.

The tousled, windblown hair that would have been the norm 100 years ago has been superseded by this season's super-straight, super-glossy extensions; the freckled, weather-beaten skin replaced by a silky, Caribbean tan (it tends to make for a better picture when those delicate, barely there peasant tops slip casually off a shoulder) and the widespread air of sorely exploited misery ditched in favour of a

Harvey Nichols charge card. You get the idea. Rustic is in — which is interesting because the other big in is Urban.

For those who mourn the waning of last season's coquettish prettiness, this is good news. Rustic is simply prettiness presented in a more rugged way — think embroidered linens rather than silks; cheesecloth instead of chiffon; and tiny Tanna lawn rosebud prints as opposed to full-blown roses. For those who usually adhere strictly to Urban, it's worth considering sneaking the occasional print into the scenario: these new seedlings are delicate without being fey, and at their best worn as a crisp shirt with jeans or something equally no-nonsense.

There is something wholesome, earthy and yet (this being the late Nineties) marvelously manicured about this new heroine. She is full of contradictions, not without her absurdities — in other words, she's really very likeable.

LUCINDA CHAMBERS
Fashion director at Vogue and British stylist of the year

What is your personal style?
Eclectic — because there is so much I love that I just can't stick to one look. I love to mix things up so I suppose that I'm seen as quite a hippy, but it does make life go with a swing. I never wear black — it's just not life-enhancing, and I never could manage looking smart.

If you could go back to any century, which would it be?
I would never want to go back to another time. People really suffered for fashion, they had no choice; instead, looks were dictated. For the first time fashion is utterly liberated. You can choose to be a boho hippy or a severe minimalist — the only problem is deciding who you want to be.

What is your favourite shop?
Cath Kidston in Notting Hill, West London — because we're both rose freaks and she has a fantastic mix of fashion and furniture.

Who is your style icon?
Simon, my husband. I find his disinterest in fashion and style to be marvellously liberating.

What three people, dead or alive, would you like to have dinner with?
St Philip Neri, a 16th-century priest who was known to play incredibly funny practical jokes as well as levitating while praying; Franz Schubert because of his incredible musical talent and his friends all loved him; and Isabella Bird, the Victorian traveller — she must have some great adventure stories.

What can you not leave the house without?
At the moment it's my Comme des Garçons perfume. It smells of Christmas and I try desperately to use it sparingly because it is so incredibly expensive.

What book are you reading at the moment?
Every Man for Himself by Beryl Bainbridge. When I like an author I tend to read everything that they have written. I really enjoy Bainbridge's style — it is evocative as well as spare.

What do you take on trips to make life easier?
A good book, pictures of my family and a big throw for when it gets cold on aircraft.

What is your style motto?
Be true to yourself.

Lucinda Chambers and her son. "I'm seen as a hippy," she says

FAR LEFT: camisole, £122, by Boyd, from Harrods (0171-730 1234); skirt, £89.95, by Karen Miller nationwide (07682 684 032); mules, £24.99, River Island; bag, £45, from Fenwick, 63 New Bond Street, W1 (0171-629 9161)

SECOND LEFT: top, £55, skirt, £89, by Niba, 118 New Bond Street, W1 (0171-495 6837); flip-flops, £19.99, by River Island nationwide (0181-991 4500); bag, £75, from Fenwick, as before; headscarf, £2.75, from Liberty, 214 Regent Street, W1 (0171-734 1234)

MAIN PICTURE: skirt, £186, by Betty Jackson, 311 Brompton Road, SW3 (0171-589 7884); camisole, £25, by Warehouse nationwide (0171-278 3491); shirt, £38, from Ming Ming, 182 Battersea Park Road, SW11 (0171-498 3233); thongs, £85.50, by K Jacques for Russell & Bromley, 24/25 New Bond Street, W1 (0171-629 6903); bag, £149, by Jamin Puech, from Fenwick, as before

ABOVE: drawstring dress, £45, by Warehouse, as before; daisy flip-flops, £19.99, by Jimmy Choo, 20 Motcomb Street, SW1 (0171-235 0242); raffia bag, £65, from Fenwick, as before

Photographer: KEVIN FOORD; Stylist: Deborah Brett; Hair: Kylie Crompton at Jo Hansford using Jo Hansford products; Make-up: Alex Babsky using Estée Lauder; Model: Luisa at Select

Eric Hill SPRING CLASSICS

Eric Hill couture plus — Classic Designer Collections, at realistic prices —

Finn Karelia,
Toddy, Grazia,
Sempre, Quimo,
Lewinger
plus many others,
P&P is FREE

SIZES 12-26
Some short fittings

SEND THE COUPON BELOW OR PHONE
01483 893633
FOR YOUR FREE SPRING CATALOGUE

Post to: Eric Hill Ltd, Dept (709) High St, Bramley, Nr. Guildford, Surrey, GU5 0HQ.
Please send me my FREE Spring Catalogue.

Name _____
Address _____
Postcode _____

PIANO AUCTION 19th April

To include over 100 quality pianos by Steinway, Bechstein,
Bluthner and others.

For further information on our premier service, or to include a piano in our forthcoming sales
please contact
Sarah MacCormack on (01462) 450367.
(9am-1pm weekdays)

Philip Scott of the Musical Instruments Department,
W1 will be available
throughout Saturday 17 April to advise on the auction value of your violins, violas, and cello.
Tel: (0171) 468 8380.

COMPETITION THE TIMES

WIN A COTTAGE IN CORNWALL

Today The Times, in association with the Virgin One account, offers readers the chance to win a lovely cottage in the typical Cornish village of Perranwell Station. Smithy Cottage, with its two bedrooms and pretty garden, is the ideal holiday home. Close to Truro and an 18-hole golf course, our prize cottage will provide the lucky winner with the perfect place from which to watch the eclipse of the sun on August 11.

HOW TO ENTER Collect 19 Times tokens and two tokens from The Sunday Times and attach them to an entry form which will appear again tomorrow. Tokens will appear up to April 18 and a bonus token will be published on Friday. The winner will be chosen at random from all entries received by Friday, April 30, 1999. Normal Times Newspapers prize draw rules apply.

WIN A COTTAGE TOKEN 19

one account

CHANGING TIMES

حکومتی الاصل

The high-class matchmaker

Concetta Lanciaux has been instrumental in bringing some of fashion's biggest names to the world's attention, and has brokered many successful business 'marriages' between designers and couture houses.

Strictly in the line of duty, Concetta Lanciaux has scaled Manhattan lofts, teetered across cobbled palazzos, and shivered in disused Shoreditch warehouses waiting for endless fashion happenings to commence. In her ceaseless search for the next big thing in fashion, no nascent name has been left uninvestigated, no radical new concept unexamined, no dilapidated studio unvisited.

Not once has her melon-slice of a smile slipped or the infectious twinkle in her eyes dimmed, not even when designers have chosen to present their collections in the dark, underground, ad nauseam, and for that alone she deserves a medal. Since joining Louis Vuitton Moët Hennessy, the world's largest luxury goods conglomerate nine years ago, she has become its talent scout, reporting directly to Bernard Arnault. LVMH's somewhat and the infamous egos, it is, one might imagine, the job from hell. Yet Lanciaux is a model of serenity. Despite the occasional cosy lunch with each of her protégés, she insists that "I am not there to act as their nanny", adding mischievously that "the company directors [whom she also recruits] do that. Anyway, if you do your homework well, you minimise the risks. The most important thing is to understand the company that you are recruiting for and to get to know the designers' personalities. When I was looking at Michael Kors for Celine, I realised they were compatible in so many ways. Michael had a roughed-up, casual way of doing chic, which was exactly what Celine had stood for in its heyday. He was passionate about quality fabrics but had a modern sensibility about glamour, he made it look nonchalant which is what Celine needed."

The Marc Jacobs courtship last-for Tom, he is so much part of Gucci and it is so much part of him that I'd be surprised if he did leave."

You can see why this is the kind of job that careers officers might describe as "absorbing". Lanciaux cheerfully admits to being a workaholic, she squeezed this interview in at 11pm in a hotel bar in Paris between a business dinner and, one hopes, a few hours' synergy with her husband, who's in insurance, or her son, who's in fashion, and possibly getting 40 winks before the next round of shows and deals. Shopping trips inevitably turn into market research. She now dresses in Givenchy diffusion and is thinking of branching out into Celine, and cannot pick up a copy of Vogue without making copious notes. No wonder she reads Socrates to relax.

It was not meant to be thus. She was encouraged by her mother to aim for a serious job — an unusual ambition for a woman from Fogia, in southern Italy, 50 years ago. One sister became a High Court judge, the other a doctor. Lanciaux herself taught Latin and Greek to "rich high school kids" in her school holidays until she had saved the money to come to London, where she

Lisa Armstrong
FASHION EDITOR

ed much longer, "but when I visited his studio in SoHo in New York, I was so struck by how beautiful it was. He has very refined taste and very clear ideas about what he wants to do. At the end of the day we're looking for designers who can be autonomous."

None of the appointments has been without controversy. Among nationalists there was indignation at seeing venerable French houses fall into the creative directorships of foreigners. Elsewhere there is consternation at Arnault's apparent determination to build an internationally homogeneous empire — a fear that his current battle to gain control of Gucci and ensuing court case has done nothing to assuage. Tom Ford, the creative wizard largely responsible for the company's meteoric revival, is so unimpressed by Arnault's tactics that he has threatened to leave Gucci if Arnault wins. Lanciaux takes a predictably reassuring view. "There is nothing further from our minds than creating a bland global megabrand. The whole point is to build a strong identity for each house while providing them with a synergy [a favourite word] and an infrastructure that make them viable businesses. As stayed long enough to acquire flawless English and a taste for Ballantyne cashmere. After a stint writing film scripts and a book entitled The Art of Poetics, she became Professor of Film Studies at Pittsburgh University, then took a business degree. In 1985 she went to work for Arnault. "I love my work because it gives me the chance to be creative and use my business knowledge," she says.

To this end, all altruistic gestures are grounded in commercial reality: the courses she has helped to set up in various French fashion colleges on behalf of LVMH have become fertile recruiting ground for some of the company's 40,000 employees. The search for more designers to take LVMH into the next millennium continues, and if she has not yet signed up a woman, it is not for want of trying. "If Sander already had her own big company," she says wistfully. But she is keeping an eye on a newcomer, Sharon Waschob, as she is on Olivier Theyskens, Clements Ribeiro, Isabelle Ballieu. "I get such pleasure from seeing artists succeed," she says, "because when business and creativity get together successfully there's no limit to what you can achieve."

Concetta Lanciaux: "When business and creativity get together successfully there's no limit to what you can achieve"

That the unions are successful is clear, although inevitably there are rumours to the contrary. John Galiano, fashion's blue-eyed boy, whom Lanciaux was instrumental in bringing to Dior, is whispered by some to be in danger of losing his creative edge, and the house is thought to be struggling commercially — which, naturally, she denies. "You may not see women wearing Dior in the street, but it's not made for walking. It's for ladies who limo. Sales are up 40 per cent since John joined. We are all very happy." As indeed they should be: in column inches alone, Dior is extremely wealthy.

For someone who has been instrumental in bringing some of fashion's biggest names to the world's attention and wields the equivalent power of a Louis B. Mayer or a Sam Goldwyn when it comes to creating stars, she is remarkably unassuming and approachable. Small, with Latin curves as opposed to fashionable planes, among the tight-lipped, studiously stylised front-row personae, she passes unrecognised by all but a few industry insiders. Yet it was she who helped to sign up not just the two Brits (Alexander McQueen at Givenchy, John Galiano at Dior, who created such a publicity coup for Arnault) but the three New Yorkers — Michael Kors at Celine, Marc Jacobs at Louis Vuitton and Narciso Rodriguez at Loewe — who have helped to blow the dust off three musty established houses by importing their individual interpretations of sleek, wearable American sportswear to Paris.

When you consider the sums involved, the market fluctuations that can be triggered by a duff review

COURTED BY CONCETTA

From left: Michael Kors, Celine, Alexander McQueen, Givenchy, Marc Jacobs, Louis Vuitton, John Galiano, Dior, Narciso Rodriguez, Loewe

TOMORROW
Body and Mind — The healing power of pets

The Open University

Start learning, keep earning.

The world is changing around us. To stay ahead we need to keep learning. In many cases our careers depend on it. But who has time to take a break from work or family commitments in order to study?

Open University courses are designed with this in mind — a fact that is increasingly recognised by business and industry. The Open University has become a leading provider of learning for people who need to develop their careers. Employers (including IBM, Hewlett Packard, Abbey National and Lucas) often sponsor their staff to take OU courses.

You get a personal tutor and the chance to meet your fellow students. The OU's unique method of study — OU supported open learning — has proved successful and thoroughly enjoyable for the thousands of students who join us each year. It's real value for money, and you can pay by instalments.

Did you know?

- The OU is in the top 15% of all UK universities for teaching quality
- 25% of all British MBAs come from the OU
- Over 30,000 employers have sponsored their staff on OU courses
- 40,000 OU students are online from home
- There are 9 month courses and new diplomas as well as degrees

Send for your free prospectus now.

Send to: The Open University, PO Box 625, Milton Keynes MK7 6AA. U99JK

☐ Please send me a copy of the Courses, Diplomas and BA/BSc Degrees prospectus

☐ Please send me a copy of the postgraduate prospectus

☐ Tick here if you have contacted the OU in the past.

Title _____ Initials _____ Surname _____

Address _____

Postcode _____

Tel. _____ Date of Birth _____ / ____ / ____

LASER HAIR REMOVAL (FOR MEN AND WOMEN)

Thanks to the latest laser technology unwanted body and facial hair can now be removed gently, quickly and effectively, with long lasting results.

AREAS TREATED. The treatment works on all problem areas from facial hair, the bikini line and underarms to larger areas such as legs, arms, back and the male chest.

The laser treatment, carried out by our trained medical and nursing staff, attacks the hair follicle, thus reducing further growth. So, no more creams, waxing, electrolysis or shaving.

For a confidential consultation with a senior nurse, without charge, please call the freephone number below to get instantly connected to your nearest clinic.

Credit facilities are available.

OTHER PROCEDURES FOR MEN AND WOMEN INCLUDE: CELLULITE TREATMENT, FAT REMOVAL, BREAST, NOSE, FACE AND EAR RESHAPE, EYELID SURGERY, VARICOSE AND THREAD VEIN REMOVAL, COLLAGEN REPLACEMENT THERAPY, PENIS ENLARGEMENT, LASER TREATMENTS FOR THE REMOVAL OF LINES, WRINKLES, ACNE SCARS AND SMOKING PROBLEMS.

THE HARLEY MEDICAL GROUP

Pearls for baby girls

CHRISTENING presents are trickier than most since the pressure to give something enduring comes at a time when it's impossible to gauge what kind of personality you're aiming to please. Christianne Douglas, who has been designing all kinds of tempting new ways to wear pearls, has come up with a brilliant solution. Her Birthstone Collection comprises delicate seed-pearl necklaces decorated with the appropriate precious or semi-precious stone. And because most people are rarely happy with their designated stones (unless they are Arjens, who get diamonds), Christianne has uncovered some options during her meticulous research. Librarians can now go for lapis lazuli as well as opals. Taureans can opt for corals or emeralds; Cancerians for moonstones or rubies. Prices range from £75 to £200. The Coleman Douglas range of delicate necklaces, bracelets and earrings is sold at Liberty and Harrods. For more information ring Coleman Douglas Pearls, 0171-373 3369, or look them up on pearls@btinternet.com shows won't run an hour and a half late — but the BBC's Fashion Week Live event, which runs from April 22 to 25 at Wembley Conference Centre, should offer a taste of what catwalk shows are about. Among the designers taking their wares to Wembley are Ben di Lisi, Antoni and Alison, and Pearce Florida, as well as the winners of the 1998 British Fashion Awards, who will stage a compilation presentation. Other designers who will have stands include Georgina von Eudorf, Idol, Neisha Crosland, Oria Kieley, Violet and Favourbrook. Lowry Turner, of Looking Good fame, will dispense beauty and fashion tips, together with her make-up artist from the TV programme.

John Gustafson. There will also be free hair makeovers from the Salon Selectives stylists, live music, a modelling competition, with a first prize of a contract with Select agency. In anticipation of thousands of transformed visitors, the British Heart Foundation will be collecting old clothes. Tickets, £15 each, are available on the door or from the hotline, 0870-732 7070. The first 100 Times readers to call that

Brits chomp on the Apple

THEATRE: Broadway has never been so bustling with British talent, says Matt Wolf, and that success seems likely to translate into Tony awards

The British invasion of Broadway is as time-honoured a topic as the Great White Way itself. But by any standard, the concentration of British theatre folk this season is astonishing. No fewer than 11 British and Irish imports — from Sian Phillips in Marlene to Anna Friel and Rupert Graves, both making their Broadway debuts, in Patrick Marber's Closer — will battle it out for the Tony Awards in June.

But are there sufficient audiences to keep afloat a line-up of imports that includes — off Broadway — Lindsay Duncan in Pinter's Aspects of a Woman as well as the local premieres of Ayub Khan Din's East is East, Anthony Neilson's The Censor and Philip Ridley's The Pitchfork Disney? Obviously not, which explains why some British visitors to the Big Apple may go home in tears.

Until, of course, next season's invasion begins, starting with Peter Hall's revival of Amadeus, when the story will be repeated all over again. Broadway has long hosted a British snob hit or two per season, from recent Tony-winners Janet McTeer in A Doll's House and Pauline Collins in Shirley Valentine to last season's best play (Art) and best actor and actress in a musical (Alan Cumming and Natasha Richardson, for Sam Mendes's continuing revival of Cabaret). This, however, may be the first season in memory in which several categories could be filled more or less entirely by Britons. In a replay of the Olivier race several years back, the Best Actress prize looks set to pit Zoë Wanamaker's Electra against Judi Dench's grieving actress, Esme, in Amy's View, with Dench the odds-on favourite since Broadway truly loves a Dame.

Indeed, Richard Eyre's National Theatre production of Amy's View has eclipsed in advance sales — a staggering £3 million or thereabouts so far — a previous David Hare entry from this season, The Blue Room, with the box office taking some £60,000 a day since Dench won her Academy Award last month for Shakespeare in Love.

'But some British visitors may still go home in tears'

Nicole Kidman in the nude clearly pales next to Dame Judi Dench, with good reason: Dench's first Broadway performance in 40 years is even more transcendent in New York than it was in London. Amy's View is a bona-fide star vehicle, as is its West 47th Street neighbour, The Iceman Cometh, an Almeida Theatre transfer, once again starring Kevin Spacey, already acclaimed in London for his marathon performance as Hickey. The supporting cast couples holdovers from London such as Tim Pigott-Smith and James Hazeldine with such New York regulars as Jeff Weiss, Michael Emerson and Robert Sean Leonard, all of whom improved significantly on their London predecessors.

Hare has had four plays in New York in the past 12 months, including last season's The Judas Kiss, but it is the best of the crop, his solo show Via Dolorosa, that is doing the worst business. But then as an actor, David Hare isn't exactly Judi Dench (as the dramatist, wryly admits). Nonetheless, it was brave of Hare (and of his not-for-profit producers at Lincoln Centre) to bring to Broadway a meditation on the Middle East — and on the origins of faith — that would seem to be so resolutely uncommercial. And the presence of Via Dolorosa next door to the musical Jekyll and

Hats off to Britain: Dame Judi Dench, as Esme in David Hare's Amy's View, is Broadway's hottest box-office draw, eclipsing even the attractions of Nicole Kidman in the nude Hyde and across the street from an oddly affectless Natasha Richardson in Closer does mean that the nascent performer in Hare can now compete for the Best Actor Tony against front-runners Spacey and Brian Dennehy (in a 50th-anniversary revival of Death of a Salesman). It is a prospect the playwright himself has described as "surreal".

The ensemble entries from Britain — Corin Redgrave in Tennessee Williams's Not About Nightingales among them — face the most difficult struggle for audiences amid a star-heavy season. Even Wanamaker — New York-born but far better known in her parents' adopted London — led into profit a 2,400-year-old play, Sophocles's Electra, that might have been assumed (in a less galvanic staging than David Leveaux's) to put Broadway's tired businessman brigade to sleep. Something similar could end up hampering The Weir, Conor McPherson's Olivier Award-winner newly transplanted to a Broadway theatre that is too big for the script's subtle exercise in healing. Reviews — a rave from The New York Times notwithstanding — have been distinctly cool for what is exactly the sort of reflective and melancholic play that Broadway tends to reject. The instructive comparison here is with Martin McDonagh's The Beauty Queen of Leenane, a far more lurid Anglo-Irish offering trafficking in the very sensationalism and melodrama which The Weir is too gentle to indulge. In the dubious belief that New York wants more of the same, a later (and inferior) McDonagh play, The Lonesome West, opens on Broadway late this month in a last-minute bid for Tony attention, although it is unlikely to get it. At about the same time, yet another English actor will be added to the mix: Toby Stephens makes his Broadway debut at the end of the season in a local revival of Jean Anouilh's Ring Round the Moon.

One must mention, too, Britain's Judy Parfitt, by all accounts stealing the show from Matthew Broderick in a revival of Emlyn Williams's Night

Must Fall, and Ruthie Henshall, who is poised to make her Broadway debut on May 25 opposite Sandy Duncan in that quintessentially American musical, Chicago. In the separate sphere of cabaret, the sounds are no less English: Imelda Staunton is in town with her "big band". "You saw her on screen as Gwyneth Paltrow's nurse," trumpets the advertisement in The New York Times. "Now see her LIVE."

Where does all this leave American talent? Struggling to be heard, one might assume, were it not for the presence — mostly off-Broadway — of such first-rate American plays as Wit, Snakebit and Betty's Summer Vacation, with the world premiere of John Guare's newest, Lake Hollywood, due on April 29. On Broadway, the Dennehy Death of a Salesman is more than holding its own, even as Stockard Channing and Laurence Fishburne make a pair of combustible, highly watchable Plantagenets in a new revival of The Lion In Winter. And after dominating the Broadway musical for more than a decade, Britain did not export a single one this season, with the exception of the Matthew Bourne Swan Lake (since departed). "Attention must be paid," Linda Loman demands at the end of Death of a Salesman, and so it is this season to the British, even if, like Willy Loman himself, the indigenous American theatre will not surrender without a fight.

White out of black

When this two-hander appeared in Johannesburg in 1961, it caused consternation. A bold young dramatist called Athol Fugard was breaking the existing taboos, not just because he was presenting a politically suggestive play about two "Coloured" brothers, but because he himself was playing the light-skinned one and Zakes Motahe the decidedly darker one. It was the first time in the apartheid era that a white had shared a stage with a black — and it was an omen of excellence to come, for within a year The Blood Knot was in London and New York and had won Fugard an international reputation.

Deservedly so, as Wilfred Judd's beautifully acted revival proceeds to prove. Barry Wallman's Morris — pernickety, uneasy, physically apologetic — has clearly wearied of the stress of passing for white. Gordon Case's Zachariah — a big Falstaffian figure whose trademark chuckles express as much frustration and anger as relish for life — never had that opportunity. Now they share the jumble of corrugated iron and driftwood that is home in Port Elizabeth. Black Zach earns the money, guarding the gates of a local factory, while white Morris does the cooking, tending and foot-washing: an inversion of roles that would doubtless have struck the play's original audiences as provocative.

The plot involves Morris's attempt to cope with Zach's restlessness by finding him a pen-pal and, since his brother is illiterate, by himself penning the letters. But pretty little Ethel turns out to be white, and to be deluded enough to invite herself to Port Elizabeth. For the first time in a play in which he always prefers to observe than preach, Fugard lets a few generalisations surface. "When they get their hands on a dark-brown boy playing with a white idea, you think they don't find out what he's been dreaming at night?" warns Morris. "They can live with his hate. All they need for evidence is his dreams."

And so to some nice dramatic surprises and to a denouement which, though stylised, feels fully earned. Suddenly the brothers are playing games, and the games they play are painful. Suddenly they are pretending to hurl stones at the poor dead mother who Zach feels rejected him because he was black and Morris thinks let him down by herself failing to be white. Suddenly one brother is white South Africa, confident and contemptuous of its slave population, and the other is black South Africa, obsequious but resentful and very dangerous indeed.

The play is of course dreadfully dated at a time when, as events from Eltham to Kosovo to mid-Africa have been confirming, all our ethnic, tribal and fratricidal problems are happily resolved. But even if it had no resonances at all, it would still fascinate, still grip.

Will one of our more enterprising impresarios please make a field-trip down to the Riverside? If ever a modest production deserved wider viewing, this is it.

BENEDICT NIGHTINGALE

Carolyn Backhouse (left) and Kate O'Mara in Colombus

Into mature bloom

In all probability unseen in this country since Peter Brook's London production nearly 50 years ago, Anouilh's first "theatre" play has been enjoyably revived by Jonathan Church as his closing production here before becoming assistant artistic director at Hampstead.

Anouilh's fleet of plays are somewhat becalmed these days, with only Antigone breasting every wind of fashion. But the Straydogs production of Eurydice at BAC last autumn showed how palatable his sweet pessimism can be, and many another rediscovery awaits, though most of his plays call for large casts and grand sets, often with gilding.

Colombe is a flower girl who has married the puritan elder son of a theatrical monster, rivaling Sarah Bernhardt in her arrogant extravagance and contemptuous of her son's romantic idealism. There is more than a touch of Antigone to this troubled Julien, whose inflexible moral principles oblige him to perform military duties he could easily avoid, thus causing him to entrust Colombe to his mother's care.

When he returns a few months later, she has happily shed the dour morality he imposed upon her and is perfectly willing to sleep with him though now enjoying an affair with his worldly-wise brother. An epilogue returns us to the doomed couple's first meeting, contrasting their youthful rapture with our knowledge of what lies in their future.

We are clearly intended to see Julien as a young prig: what Damien Goodwin also gives us, in the passions that contort his face, is the sense that he is as much an egotist as his ruthless mother. At the same time he is the only character whose childhood, rejection and neglect, is given a mention, and by doing so Anouilh relates Julien's male chauvinism to the terror of abandonment in a past of real pain.

Jeremy Sams provides a witty translation, incorporating equivalents of the French vulgarities that frightened Lilyered English censors back in 1951. These are chiefly mouthed by Kate O'Mara's raging tragedienne, whose curses perform the same function of deflating the mystery as the homely burlings of her dresser (Jan Waters) who judges a play's worth by its economy of costume changes.

O'Mara displays a fine sulk and a range of the lovelies popularly linked to actress divas, plus a moment of poignancy — her face transformed — following her defence of pleasure-seeking as less selfish than idealism.

Church's strong company give good performances all down the line, with Carolyn Backhouse outstanding in the crucial role of Colombe. She displays an air of experience from the start, a puzzle the epilogue helps to explain, and here her voice has a bewitching timbre and vibrato. She does not overplay the superficiality in later scenes, and the position of her hands, carefully not touching her distraught husband, make their own comment upon her protests of sympathy.

JEREMY KINGSTON

Yanking our chains

COMEDY

Swansea
Jongleurs NW1

Pity the hapless American girl sitting near the stage. To admit to coming from New York is careless enough, to declare that you are studying literature and rhetoric amounts to a death-wish. Yank-baiting is one of the few blood-sports left now that mothers-in-law are out of bounds, and compere Mark Billingham set about his victim with unabashed glee. Fortunately she seemed to take the pummelling in good part even as other comics joined in.

If the banter was familiar enough, the rest of this Swan-sponsored touring programme stayed at a dauntingly high level. The line-up will be rotated at other Jongleurs venues across the country this month. This particular bill struck a clever balance between the doleful monologues of Ricky Grover, the manic Tommy Cooper-ish routine of Steve Rawlings and the laconic Sean Meo.

Politics crept briefly into view on the subject of the British Museum. If the Parthenon exhibits are known as the Elgin Marbles, should the Louvre re-

Town they think you're overdressed if you've got two ears. His ludicrous but irresistible tale of U and non-U, and the hunt for the polite word for "bathroom" in a country home ended with a full Rab-elaisian flourish. Suppressed menace oozes from Grover's ample, string-vest-covered frame.

In the case of the breathlessly inspired Rawlings, the danger lies in the knives, plates and assorted missiles hurtling in all directions. No wonder he compliments his audience on their ability to finch. He induces all sorts of indignities on himself. Babbling away, he appears to saw off his hand, strikes himself on the head with a crown bowl, and makes heavy weather of balancing a tray of wine glasses above his chin, all the while hectoring the woman summoned from the audience to help him.

The chaos is thoughtfully contrived, however. Rawlings goes to the very brink before pulling back, revelling in his role as mad bedeviling man. We laugh.

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA

by William Shakespeare

"A MILESTONE EVENT in the history of the National Theatre"
Sunday Times

"TREMENDOUS... illuminating... a virtuosic blend of intimate detail and epic sweep"
Daily Telegraph

★★★★ - Trevor Nunn's
MAGNIFICENT production
Guardian

Can someone please tell us who we are?

Britain's identity crisis sets a profound problem for politicians

Kosovo, Northern Ireland and Scotland are each trying to answer the same question: how to reconcile different loyalties and identities within a single state. The strains have broken apart Yugoslavia over the past decade, as they did the former Soviet Union in 1991. Northern Ireland lives in an uneasy balance between conflict and repeated attempts at a new constitutional structure. The choices facing Scotland, and to a lesser extent Wales, are less extreme, but the question is the same. Can you be both Scots-Welsh and British? And, equally intractable, can you be both British and European?

The Unionist-Tory answer is no. The nation state remains supreme, as a focus of loyalty and political power. Anything that detracts from that is dangerous, whether the feared break-up of the United Kingdom is as a result of devolution or rule from Brussels.

Such a one-dimensional view will no longer do. The traditional nation state is already being transformed. Historians, notably Linda Colley in her Britons, have argued that Britain was largely a late 17th and 18th-century invention, a Protestant island threatened by a mainly Catholic Continent, especially France. But in the absence of such dangers, and with the end of empire, the pressures that held Britain together have disappeared. That may lead to looser links within Britain and a resumption of the previous close involvement with the rest of Europe.

In response, Tories argue that the British identity has existed for hundreds of years — though most references are to England, not Britain. That is both true and beside the point. Britain now has a different and more complex meaning. For instance, sport is no longer defined by national or linguistic boundaries. In the part of North London where I live, I would bet that the most admired person is French, Arsène Wenger, the manager of Arsenal, whose leading goalkeepers are French and Dutch. That does not make Arsenal supporters any less patriotic.

The nation state will remain the primary political unit with which people identify, not least because of its democratic legitimacy, but it is no longer the sole one. The challenges are not just constitutional. The way we live and work is becoming much more international, through the Internet, television and everything summed up by the term globalisation. Society is also more diverse, with the two-parent family no longer almost the sole publicly acceptable option (though it is still the majority one). Moreover, as Robert Cooper, one of the cleverest British diplomats, argues in the current Prospect, a weakening of the State and national identities may bring more divided societies.

The most pressing test is devolution. The revived Scottish sense of national identity has had some crudely anti-English manifestations, in films such as Braveheart. But conflict is not inherent. It is possible to be both Scottish and British. A MORI poll last July for the Institute of Citizenship showed that more than three quarters of the public felt they belonged very or fairly strongly to their local communities: to England, Scotland or Wales; and to Great Britain.

Reconciling these different loyalties contains many traps. For the Left, there is the danger of multiculturalism, of abandoning a common history or culture and treating the experience of all ethnic and minority groups as equally significant. History is already taught in America solely from a black or feminist perspective (will British history be taught just from a Scottish standpoint?). That is not only historical nonsense but it also creates a sense of group grievance which fragments society.

The Right is torn between recognising the existence of a more diverse society and denying its implications. The Tories want to reach out to minority groups, yet are drawn to a caricature Daily Mail version of the family defined by which party offers bigger tax reliefs to couples. William Hague is instinctively pluralist, yet seems reluctant to acknowledge that this can involve a modest decentralisation of power away from London. It is all or nothing: the United Kingdom or a break-up into its constituent nations.

As Vernon Bogdanor argues in his new book Devolution in the United Kingdom, there is a profound contradiction in Unionist thinking. While regarding Britain as a deep-rooted organic entity, Unionists-Tories are worried that British identity is so fragile that it can be put at risk by the constitutional reforms of one Government. Some Tories relish the prospect of a break, with Scotland as an opportunity for an English nationalist reawakening, as Simon Heffer does in his new book (in effect a polemical tract) Nor Shall My Sword: The Reinvention of England. The official line is still Unionist but the Tory party is confused, as shown by the continuing muddle over the idea of an English parliament.

The arguments over devolution are parallel to those over Europe. Sceptics argue that it is impossible to be both British and European. According to the MORI poll quoted above, only a third of the public feel they strongly belong to Europe. This is far less than on the Continent, where the French have no problem in feeling they belong both to France and to Europe. Yet that is what will have to happen if Britain is to be a successful member of the European Union. Tony Blair writes this morning in Newsweek about a "new internationalism": a new doctrine to deal with brutal repression of the kind seen in Kosovo. Managing such multiple identities and loyalties — local, regional, national, European and international, as well as social — is now the trickiest task for our political leaders.

peter.riddell@the-times.co.uk

Peter Riddell

The man for Auntie

Andrew Neil might not want to run the BBC, but he would be an ideal candidate

The Governors of the BBC are choosing a new Director-General to succeed Sir John Birt. It is a make-or-buy decision for the future of the BBC. Unless the new Director-General, who will not take office until next April, can master a complex series of technological, production, editorial, financial, marketing and administrative problems, the BBC will probably become one of Britain's obsolete ceremonial institutions, like the hereditary peers. Even its financial basis, the licence fee, is at risk. The Governors are not looking for any ordinary Director-General; they are looking for a superman or superwoman.

It is absolutely the Governors' choice. I was BBC vice-chairman when we chose Alastair Milne in 1982. We did not consult the Government of the day, and it would have been fatal to any candidate's chances to have been regarded as Margaret Thatcher's preference. So far as I know, she did not have one: she probably disapproved equally of all the candidates. When one reads in the press that the next Director-General will have to be acceptable to Tony Blair, I'm sure that is untrue. The Governors will choose the person they believe best for the job, and the Prime Minister will have to accept their choice.

Last Friday ONdigital announced that by the end of March it had already signed up 110,000 subscribers; by February, the figure for SkyDigital was 350,000. By the time the new Director-General takes over from John Birt, the combined digital audience will be well over a million households. Current research suggests that it may be more than 12 million by the time that his first five-year term has ended. By 2005, the analogue age will be over, and the digital age will be the reality.

The BBC was established in the early 1920s as a monopoly broadcaster, dependent on monopoly funding. This broadcasting monopoly has been eroded in three stages: by the introduction of Independent Television in the 1950s, by satellite broadcasting in the late 1980s and 1990s, and now by the rapid spread of digital, funded largely on a subscription basis, and capable of providing an indefinite number of competing channels.

The BBC's response to the first competitive challenge was successful. Independent Television produced some excellent and innovative programmes, and won the high ratings advertisers called for, but the BBC always answered back. In terms of public confidence, or of the quality of output, the 30 years of limited competition between terrestrial channels was ideal for the BBC. That period, remembered by BBC producers for Hugh Carleton Greene's tenure as Director-General, was the BBC's golden age. Competition provided a spur; the limitation to four terrestrial channels provided a protection.

The BBC was much less successful in meeting the competition from satellite broadcasting, using the old analogue system. Sky was able to win a substantial share of the market, and has come to dominate terrestrial sport. The BBC tried various responses: some failed altogether and none was a real success. In some ways, the BBC's response under John Birt to the digital challenge has been more coherent. He took the unpopular course of diverting substantial sums to the creation of new channels, the 24-hour news and BBC Choice; they were bound to have a small audience to begin with, but are likely to have a growing audience as digital grows.

As a digital subscriber, I already find myself watching BBC Choice as a way of catching good programmes I had missed. John Birt has understood that the BBC's role in the digital period must be as a high-quality producer. My judgment is that he badly underestimated sport. A well-funded BBC sports channel must have been considered, and should have been created.

The digital response by the BBC makes better sense from that of Independent Television. The BBC's instinct has been to raise programme quality and seek the best available slots on digital platforms, which are as valuable to a broadcaster as landing rights at Heathrow are to an airline. Independent Television took the grotesque decision to refuse to provide its main channel to SkyDigital; it has gone downmarket, actually abolishing its anchor programme of the News at Ten. The combination may prove disastrous. In my case, ITV has fallen from about 25 per cent of my total viewing to about 5 per cent and other SkyDigital viewers say much the same.

John Birt will not, therefore, be leaving a legacy in which all the wrong decisions have already been made. He will, however, be leaving at a very early stage of the digital revolution: this is where the French Revolution was early in 1789, before the Bastille had fallen.

What will need to be done will be essentially entrepreneurial. The BBC needs to build on its strengths to dominate the top half of the new broadcasting market that is being created. It does not need to compete at the tabloid or Jerry Springer level, which would alienate its natural supporters and viewers. In newspaper terms, the core BBC audience ranges from the mid-market tabloid to the broadsheet, from the Daily Mail to The Times or the Financial Times. The new Director-General must be someone who understands that audience. There are plenty of signs in the Discovery Channel or the History Channel that the demand is there: the BBC could meet it much better.

The new Director-General will need to be much more than a good editor-in-chief. The BBC's greatest weakness is that it was too strong a monopoly for too long; that always makes it difficult to change, and almost impossible to change fast. One of the reasons Sky out-competed the BBC with satellite broadcasting was that it was a new company, with the energy and flexibility such a business can have. The next Director-General will have to teach the old elephant to dance a new tune.

There is one man who might get it right. I doubt if he wants the job, but if he did, my recommendation would do him little good. I do not believe anyone from inside the BBC will be able to handle the challenge, because the BBC's own culture, its inability to see itself from the outside, is so large a part of the problem. There are many good people inside the BBC, and they are individually capable of self-criticism, but they have inevitably been indoctrinated by the culture. They have not gone native: they are naive. The candidate I would go for, to save the BBC, would be Andrew Neil.

He was undoubtedly a great Editor of the 1980s. He is one of three past Editors of The Sunday Times — Denis Hamilton and Harold Evans were predecessors — who over 30 years made that paper the pre-eminent Sunday broadsheet. In the late 1990s, as Editor-in-Chief of The Scotsman, he has built another world-class newspaper.

Quite recently I switched from The Guardian to The Scotsman, mainly because I was interested in following the elections to the Scottish parliament. I shall stay with it, because it is the better paper of the two, with a stronger news judgment, crisper, less predictable, less self-satisfied, less sarcastic, with a wider range of interests. One must also credit the excellent Editor, Alan Ruddock.

Andrew is a bonnie fighter, as Glasgow Scots are supposed to be. He was much influenced by working for Rupert Murdoch, who runs a masterclass for ambitious media men which has other distinguished graduates. Andrew knows about quality, and believes in it. He knows about international broadcasting. He can read a balance sheet. I am not sure that Andrew could save the BBC, or that anyone could, but he provides a good measuring rod. The next Director-General has at least to match him on editorial experience, business sense, energy, leadership qualities, and in his ruthless capacity for creating change. Any Director-General who cannot meet the Neil standard will not be able to master the revolution. If he fails, the BBC itself may end on the guillotine of history.

comment@the-times.co.uk

William Rees-Mogg

Out of harmony

TOM JONES, recently honoured with an OBE, has repaid the favour by attacking the "divisive" politics of Sean Connery. The Welsh singer, below left, accuses Connery — whose support for Scottish independence scuppered plans to award him a knighthood — of jeopardising the British "identity".

"The British Isles is small enough as it is, we don't want to make it any smaller," says Jones, displaying renewed pride in Queen and country. His lifting words come as his fellow Celt, right, prepares to campaign for the SNP in the Scottish parliamentary elections.

"I'm very proud of being Welsh," Jones adds hurriedly. "But I don't want to split this island up. United we stand, divided we fall."

GLENDA JACKSON tires of the "assumption" that her Hampstead constituency teems with pampered Blairites and champagne Socialists. "It irritates me that Hampstead is continually associated with these sorts of people," barks Ms Jackson. "Deprivation does exist there."

CURRY supplies to the Dome are in jeopardy: the company hired to serve vintages on Millennium Eve is threatening to pull out after "stringent conditions" were imposed by Lord Falconer of Thoroton. The Chutney Mary group (its name is Raj-speak for a Westernised Indian woman) expects to prepare 2,000 curries a day in a 45-seat restaurant, but its owners — who featured in a recent list of the country's richest Asians — are revolting. "There is a distinct possibility we will not go ahead because of the terms," says Ranjit Mathrani.

The "outrageous" conditions, which also bind other Dome caterers, include the right for Falconer to sack the catering staff, to force operators to carry adverts for sponsors and to terminate the agreement with ten days' notice. "It is the same as for any major event," insists a Dome spokesman.

HOW delightful that the Duchess of Devonshire (above, with the Duke) should stay abreast of modern life's more bracing features. After Chatsworth House was placed on a "stately home ride" by a local train company, Her Grace — grandest of the Milford sisters — noted to friends that the railways offer of "service in your seat" makes it sound "like a lap-dancing club".

IS Marco Pierre White retrenching? The restaurateur has ditched plans to open up in his home town of Leeds to attend to his budding career with the palette (Damien Hirst's work on the walls of Quo Vadis is being replaced by MPW's own daubs). "Oh, you know what Marco's like," offers a friend. "He changes his mind all the time."

THE course of true love has not run smoothly for the RSC's A Midsummer Night's Dream in Stratford-upon-Avon: a party of Roman Catholic children was marched out by teachers alarmed at a simulated sex scene involving Bottom. Says the RSC: "It is not a fluffy fairies production."

THE architect Sir Norman Foster is having trouble with neighbours: his efforts to erect an extra floor on his Thameside penthouse have led to skirmishes in the area (which shelters Neil and Christine Hamilton, and Vivienne Westwood's studio) after one of his toilers blocked off a pavement to carry out the work. "There was an unauthorised closure," my yellow-haired chum on Wandsworth council tells me. "So we went down to read the Riot Act."

TO warn of the dangers of drink, Tessa Jowell, Minister for Public Health, will next week launch "Cheers Without Tears" — at a champagne reception.

EDWARD WELSH

'The most sensible thing would be to declare an amnesty — that way Russia's richest people would not be fleeing the country in droves'

Who is guilty? Where is the money? These are two questions which have obsessed Russians since the beginning of the perestroika era. The answers are almost everyone and mostly in Switzerland. This, obviously, is not enough to satisfy your newly information-hungry Russian, eager to blame somebody for his poverty and preferably somebody rich and powerful.

As more and more time and money are spent trying to come up with satisfactory and coherent responses to the nagging questions above, the answers become increasingly obscured in conspiracy theories and new allegations of corruption. The moment somebody launches an investigation into somebody else's guilt, then compromising information immediately emerges either implicating the investigator in the original crime or accusing them of involvement in a crime far worse.

The current witch-hunt against Boris Beresovsky (Russia's favourite billionaire villain) and other tycoons who have long been labelled "oligarchs" by people who do not understand what the word means is symptomatic of a general feeling that somebody somewhere has ruined Russia and stolen all her money. A warrant was issued last week for Beresovsky's arrest (he is now in Paris having a nice time with all his money) and he has promised to return home soon to face charges of money-laundering and illegal business activity, though few seriously expect him to show up. And why should he?

Anyone who has made vast sums of money in Russia over the past decade has done so by means which are at the very least dubious. However, at the time when Beresovsky and his like were building their empires they were the only ones building anything at all and there was nothing stopping them. The legal system of the Soviet Union had collapsed and nothing had effectively replaced it.

Bribes and threats could buy you whatever you wanted (such as the right to export oil owned by the Government and keep the profits), such that all the shady, get-rich-quick schemes employed by the new robber barons were sanctioned by bribed officials, and were, for the most part, not technically speaking illegal. Whether or not they were glaringly unethical is a different question, but what few would deny is that they would probably have done the same had they thought of it.

Lashing out at people who can so easily be used as scapegoats for Russia's ills is a cheap shot on the part of the Primakov Government, which is desperately keen to be seen fighting corruption. The likelihood of Beresovsky or Aleksandr Smolensky, of SBS-Agro, ever serving a prison sentence is infinitesimally small, and the agony of separation they will suffer as exiles in the West is doubtful. Any money that might have gone missing by their hands will never be seen again.

Constant allegations of embezzlement are stopping Russia from getting on with the job in hand, that is, recovering from the crisis of last August. Nobody is likely to provide loans for or invest in a country whose main obsession is the apportioning of blame, rather than the seeking of solutions. Did somebody steal a massive cut of the IMF and World Bank loans? Possibly, but they did not take as much money as the conspiracy theorists would like to believe, and the vast majority of IMF funds at least did go into stabilising the rouble, rightly or wrongly (well, OK, probably wrongly).

Anna Blundy

Somebody suggested to me the other day that the most sensible thing to do, since it is impossible to legislate retrospectively, would be to declare an amnesty on illegal and semi-legal business dealings that took place before the beginning of 1999. That way Russia's richest people would not be fleeing the country in droves and the powers-that-be would not feel compelled to carry out expensive, pointless and always personally motivated investigations against the businessmen who annoy them most.

Investigate anyone, Russian or Western, who has made a lot of money here and it is likely that you would find something that would soon have them sipping a café crème with Beresovsky and Anatoli Sobchak (the former Mayor of St Petersburg) on the banks of the Seine.

Who gets investigated is a fairly random decision, dependent only on who has control over the Prosecutor General at any given time. Everybody knows that Yevgeni Primakov, the Prime Minister, harbours a great deal of animosity towards Boris Beresovsky. That is not to defend Beresovsky and all his dealings, but as they say here: "If I'm the boss, you're a fool. If you're the boss, I'm a fool."

comment@the-times.co.uk

سكندرية

THUNDER IN ULSTER

London and Dublin must not weaken now

While Western eyes have turned in pity and horror towards the Balkans over the past week there has been an ominous crackle in the Ulster air. The thunder may not be far behind. Northern Ireland's parties reconvene for talks this week in a spirit of hope, but a posture of fear. Progress in the peace process has, so far, depended on a willingness among democrats to postpone the central test of good faith from those who have practised terror in the past. The requirement that parties linked to paramilitaries secure the decommissioning of weapons before they enjoy executive power over their fellow citizens has been sidelined in the search for agreement on every other issue. Now that issue can no longer be dodged. And the fearful prospect looms that those who have advanced with Armalite and ballot box are married to the former and have only been using the latter.

On the eve of the anniversary of the Good Friday agreement, the British and Irish Prime Ministers unveiled a declaration intended to give fresh impetus towards the implementation of that agreement. They sketched a clear, and speedy, route to a Northern Ireland in which all parties could play their part. All that was required from paramilitary organisations was that some arms "be placed beyond use". Such a voluntary release of weapons from the terrorist grip would be rendered more palatable by a Day of Reconciliation, which would "draw the sting from any notion of surrender". Tony Blair and Bertie Ahern had done everything reasonable leaders might, indeed more than many would, to ease the paramilitaries' path to participation in government.

The response has not been encouraging. Sinn Féin's chief negotiator, Martin McGuinness, responded to the Blair-Ahern itinerary for progress with a journey backwards into bloodstained history. He declared that "the demeanour of republicanism from time immemorial clearly shows they are not going to bend the knee to the demands of...the British military establishment". The senior IRA man, Brian Keenan, has been crisply negative, addressing a rally in Monaghan with the words: "I don't know where they get this idea of decommissioning, because it strikes me they mean it like it is surrender. There will be no surrender."

Mr Keenan's rhetoric has found an answering call in the brute intransigence of loyalist paramilitaries who have refused to consider any decommissioning of their own arms. Words may be cheap, but so, as far as the terrorists are still concerned, are lives. The Unionist leader, David Trimble, hopes that there may be some room for manoeuvre in the week ahead. His capacity to conjure hope from despair has surprised pessimists before. But the decisive turn away from violence which he has, rightly, made a precondition of full republican participation in any Ulster executive still seems beyond reach.

In their anxiety to keep the peace process alive both London and Dublin are pre-empting Sinn Féin demands. The Irish Government has released the Balcombe Street bombers; the British is to scale down troop numbers and dismantle military installations. Both moves, though worrying for Ulster's democratic majority, might be considered reasonable in the context of a new Northern Ireland where guns really were silent. But while weapons remain primed in terrorist hands, such concessions could prove premature. The urgent need now is not for indulgence of terrorist wishes, but an insistence on democratic rights, and a preparedness to defend them against those who demand flexibility without ever showing it.

THE PACE QUICKENS

Diplomacy and military operations must step up together

Nato foreign ministers meet today as the pace of diplomacy quickens in step with the pace of war. The special session has been called by Madeleine Albright, as much to reaffirm Nato's aims and take stock of the war so far as to prepare a unified Nato response to Russia's warnings. Ms Albright meets Igor Ivanov, the Russian Foreign Minister, tomorrow, and amid a flurry of diplomatic consultations will reaffirm the West's eagerness to include Russia in the diplomatic pressure on Belgrade — though not, she will insist, as an apologist for Serbian intransigence.

Nato ambassadors, meanwhile, agreed at the weekend to deploy a humanitarian mission of up to 8,000 Nato troops in Albania to cope with more than 300,000 refugees now overwhelming Europe's poorest country. Only a military force can deal with a catastrophe of such proportions. Albania has neither roads, food, stability nor law; its Government cannot possibly ensure that humanitarian aid is not looted, transport it to the refugee camps or organise proper distribution. Even a Nato force will find the going difficult.

There is a danger in the dispatch of these troops, however. Politicians, frustrated by Nato's failure to protect the fleeing refugees, may be tempted to see the force as part of an embryo invasion force for a ground war. They will look also to neighbouring Macedonia, where a further 12,000 Nato peacekeepers were deployed to implement whatever peace agreement was signed at Rambouillet. There was no deal, and for the foreseeable future they have no mission, apart from doing what they can for the Kosovans who have reached Macedonia. Could they not, some will ask, also be reassigned as the vanguard of a ground force that many insist must eventually be deployed to clear the way for the refugees' return?

Nato planners are aghast at such suggestions. The 8,000 sent to Albania will not be equipped for any interventionist role; without tanks, self-propelled artillery and armoured combat vehicles they cannot enter Kosovo. Similarly, the force in Macedonia is armed only to protect itself in the enforcement of peace. It would have the muscle to intervene in sporadic flare-ups; but this is very different from taking on the full force of the Yugoslav Army preparing to fight a last-ditch battle against an invading force.

Some Western politicians have suggested that Nato should start preparing for a ground invasion if only to convince President Milosevic that the alliance is ready to ratchet up the conflict to whatever force level is needed for victory. In this scenario, the existing troops, augmented by others brought into the region by stealth, would suddenly converge into an invasion force of more than 100,000. The difficulty here is that Nato has explicitly, and repeatedly, ruled out such a force. And Mr Milosevic has all the evidence he needs that the alliance should be taken at its word. If enough men are to be mustered on the ground for eventual combat, they and their equipment need to be boarding ships now. They are not. It is therefore inconceivable that any ground force will be deployed within the next three months.

The pace of war will instead be quickened in other ways. Intensified diplomacy must be linked to the destruction of Yugoslavia's military machine. That, Ms Albright will tell Mr Ivanov, remains the aim. And the sooner Russia joins the diplomatic push, the sooner the airstrikes will stop.

NOUVEAUX RICHES

Time for a little vulgar ostentation

The rich are getting richer, but they are also changing in more subtle ways, a list of Britain's wealthiest 1,000 people published yesterday in The Sunday Times suggests. Relatively speaking, the super-rich today are far better off than their economic counterparts of a century or two ago. The wealthiest man in the land in 1799, Earl Grosvenor, owned assets which would be worth £750 million today; Hans Rausing, whose family's Tetra Laval carton-making business has put him above Lord Sainsbury of Turville at the top of this year's list, is worth a cool £3,400 million. Despite global economic turbulence over the past year, and fears of impending recession, the continued strong performance of the stock market has kept generating wealth. The top 1,000 were worth £115 billion as recently as January, but their assets have probably grown another £10 billion since.

Importantly for the country's entrepreneurial future, too, most of the new multimillionaires are self-made. The percentage whose wealth is inherited has shrunk from nearly two thirds a decade ago to less than one third today. A corresponding power loss is implied for

But perhaps the most curious thing about the current generation of multimillionaires is how little they flaunt their wealth. They may own the odd yacht or island in the sun; occasionally, one may attempt to fly around the world in a balloon. But today's list boasts no one who comes close to the sheer in-your-face ostentation of the nouveaux riches of the past. On the whole, the rich of 1999 are a well-adjusted and sober lot. Having money does not make them think mink. Instead, they wear jeans. They avoid fatty food. They anxiously limit their alcohol intake. Many live so modestly that it is impossible to guess the extent of their wealth from their behaviour. The most unassuming of all, the computer whizz-kids, even go by the unexciting nickname of "anonaks".

Their entrepreneurial skill is to be celebrated, as is the good taste that stops them rubbing their success in the face of the poor. Yet some may look back with a hint of nostalgic affection at the flamboyance of another era's millionaires. Lady Docker, wife of a Birmingham industrialist in the 1950s, was perhaps the most excessive of her ilk. Her extraordinary wealth — solid bathhouse and taints

Balkan lessons of recent past

From Mr Robin O'Neill

Sir, To call for a protectorate in Macedonia (article, "Macedonia deserves short shrift", March 7) is arrogant neo-colonialism. What Macedonia needs is help from the rest of Europe in consolidating its position as an independent state — and that consolidation will itself solve the Macedonian question.

Macedonia's name matters here. To go on calling it the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia suggests that it still really forms part of Milosevic's Yugoslavia and should go back there. Some of Macedonia's enemies — but not its citizens — would still like that to happen.

When, in 1992, I attempted on behalf of the Presidency of the European Community (then held by the United Kingdom) to resolve the dispute between Greece and Macedonia over the latter's name, the Greeks suggested that for Macedonia to take the name Republic of Macedonia would destabilise the region. That was not true then, and the past seven years have proved it not to be true. The international community could now help Macedonia to survive in a difficult environment by calling it the Republic of Macedonia — which, incidentally, under international law it is entitled to call itself.

There is much in James Pettifer's article which, as a regular visitor to Macedonia since 1992, I do not recognise. President Gligorov, alone in the region, has exercised a consistently moderating role as a political leader over the past eight years, not least with his fellow countrymen.

He has done that in order to ensure Macedonia's survival from Serbia, as well as to preserve it from the ethnic breakdown which has afflicted its neighbours. And if Macedonia is still run by communists, in or out of the Ministry of Interior, how is it that the ex-Communist Party in power was defeated in the 1998 general election, and the present Government is led by the nationalist party, VMRO?

Macedonia has a long way to go — it had a difficult birth — but the stability of the Balkans requires that it survives, and flourishes, in independence.

Yours faithfully,
ROBIN O'NEILL,
4 Castle Street,
Saffron Walden, Essex CB10 1BP.
April 7.

From Mr Adrian Hope

Sir, In May 1991 I stood in Trafalgar Square with a small but noisy group of Croats, Bosnians, Slovenians and Kosovans. We were demonstrating for external intervention to prevent the policy of genocide which we all believed the Serbian authorities to be planning.

I remember with gratitude the contribution of a representative of Plaid Cymru but we were too marginal a group, too absurd with our demands, too paranoid in our predictions to receive either hearing or sympathy from any of the main political parties.

That day I carried a banner: "Serbia's Final Solution" (letters, April 8). It was deliberately provocative. Any declaration in favour of an independent Croatia attracted the suspicion of fascist sympathies and the banner was intended to turn the suspicion back on the accusers. Even though I wrote the banner myself, I did feel at the time that it was perhaps over the top.

How wrong I was.

Yours etc,
ADRIAN HOPE,
54 Brunswick Gardens, W8 4AN.
April 8.

German medals

From Mr Nigel Sisson

Sir, There is a straightforward solution to the problem of how to reward the new generation of Luftwaffe pilots now risking their lives in combat in the Balkans (report, April 7).

As part of a Nato combined operation, surely they are engaged in the "broader war" with which many Germans will feel more comfortable; and this should be recognised by a Nato campaign medal common to the Alliance. Wasn't this what happened with a common UN medal in Korea?

Yours faithfully,
NIGEL SISSON,
Skerryvore,
Woodside Close,
Deringham, Norfolk PE31 6QD.
April 7.

From Mrs Christine Viridi

Sir, How long must Germany carry the cross of guilt?

In the Second World War, within the ranks of the three regular services, many Germans fought for their country with the same honour as those of the Allied forces. The Iron Cross medal is synonymous with Germany and its recognition of bravery.

Therefore, their pilots should be awarded an updated version of the Iron Cross, and wear it with pride. No one can be offended by bravery.

Proposals for schoolteachers' pay

From Mr Jonathan Cox

Sir, The Government's proposals on teachers' pay (reports, April 5-7) are doubtless well intentioned but are characterised by ignorance of good teaching practice.

The whole idea of rewarding good classroom teachers is to say to them: "You are doing a good job in the classroom and we want to reward you for it so you can carry on, where you are, with the good work." Unfortunately this will not happen because, in order to break through the "performance threshold", a good classroom teacher will have to take on extra responsibilities outside the classroom: this will (as it does now) distract them from their most important responsibility and use up a disproportionate amount of their limited time on whatever additional tasks their head teacher gives them. The quality of their performance in the classroom will inevitably deteriorate.

Yours etc,
JONATHAN COX,
15 Longley Road, Harrow HA1 4TG.
joncoxc@comp.net
April 7.

From Mrs Theresa May, MP for Maidenhead (Conservative)

Sir, If the Conservatives were simply supporting those teacher unions who have threatened strikes in their opposition to the Government's proposals for performance-related pay, as your leading article ("Chalk and Cheese", April 7) implies, that indeed would be incredible. But we are not.

We condemn proposals for strike action (as your leader makes clear). Such action not only lets down children in our schools; it also lets down the teaching profession.

We support the concept of appraisal

ing teachers' performance and rewarding good teachers. We also want good teachers to be able to stay in our classrooms doing what they are good at — teaching children. We want to see flexibility at local level and schools and teachers set free to get on with the job of educating children to high standards.

What we oppose is a centrally controlled, bureaucratic, mechanistic approach which it has been calculated will cost £250 million to put into place and £130 million each year to administer, and which could take good teachers out of the classroom. That is the reality of the Government's proposals.

Yet again we see the Government talking the language of business when the reality of its policy is bureaucracy and centralisation. Yours faithfully,
THERESA MAY (Shadow Schools Minister),
House of Commons.
April 7.

From Mr E. L. Stuart

Sir, It is regrettable that your desire to buttress the case for performance-related pay for teachers should lead you to state that "One of the most elementary features of a profession is that of individual contracts."

Are those employed in the Home Civil Service or the Foreign Service not members of a profession? Are not medical practitioners and other highly qualified NHS staff, to say nothing of others paid from public funds, such as Members of Parliament?

I am, yours faithfully,
E. L. STUART,
8 Caledonian Way,
Darlington, Co Durham DL1 3RJ.
April 7.

Using VAT to maintain churches

From Miss Anne McIntosh, MEP for North Essex and South Suffolk European People's Party Parliamentary Group (Conservative)

Sir, As you say in your leading article, "Treasure in Heaven" (April 5), the Church does indeed need a tax break to help it to repair and maintain its historic buildings. You mention the Government's excuse that its "hands are tied by an EU Directive which excludes repairs to historic buildings in the list of items accepted as eligible for a lower (rate of) VAT."

This is simply not the case. The Government's hands are tied only by its unwillingness to forgo the vast VAT receipts it receives from the Church in repairs to historic buildings. The revised EU proposal announced this February can perfectly well be applied to repairs to historic buildings, unlike the previous EU proposal on this subject, and the Government should commit itself to promoting it in the Council of Ministers. To my knowledge, this is almost certainly the only occasion in which "Brussels" has offered to lower our taxes, so I would have thought that the Government would be keen to make the most of it.

In both answers to my Parliamentary Question and letters on this issue, the Government has always refused to commit itself to pushing through this VAT cut. Dawn Primarolo actually said to me in a letter in April last year that "using the VAT system to relieve the burden [on the Church] is an inefficient way of helping to preserve our national heritage". Or, in other words, the Government appears to believe it is more efficient to take money from the Church in the form of VAT on repairs, waste money on administration, and then give some (but not all) of this money back to the Church in the form of an English Heritage grant. Is it possible that the man (or woman) in Whitehall does not know best, and that parishes know better how to spend money on repairs than government officials?

The European Commission is, amazingly, offering to lower our taxes and to make the parishioners and clergy of Britain dance for joy by reducing the cost of repairs to historic buildings. Why is the Government not taking advantage of this unprecedented offer?

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,
ANNE MCINTOSH
(Conservative MP for Vale of York), European Parliament,
Rue Wiertz,
CB-1047 Brussels.
April 7.

From Mr Roger M. Hancock

Sir, I wholeheartedly support your leader. It is surely not unreasonable to ask that the minority of the population who are now active church and chapel members be offered some relief from maintaining the vitally important architectural heritage represented by our cathedrals, parish churches and chapels.

The small rural parish churches are particularly vulnerable, and parochial church councils are finding it increasingly difficult to raise their annual "quota" for ministers' stipends, as well as the cash needed every year to maintain the fabric of their churches. Many churches and chapels are in great danger of closure in the coming years. The lower VAT rate proposed in your leader would indeed seem like manna from Heaven if it materialised.

Yours faithfully,
ROGER HANCOCK,
The Malthouse,
Castle Street,
Raglan, Gwent NP23 2DS.
April 5.

Loss of contact

From Dr A. A. Surgeon-Frame

Sir, I recently wanted to contact a dental patient of mine in Malvern and dialled Directory Enquiries. The lady said he was unlisted. Since he had his own business, I thought that unlikely. She then told me that she had never heard of Malvern: she was working in Durham. She explained that the inquiry was dealt with by anyone who picked up my call.

Next time I got a singing Scots accent, emanating from Glasgow, but again no luck with my inquiry. Nevertheless, the lady was extremely pleasant.

Nothing daunted, I tried once more; this time I was on a Stoke-on-Trent lady. She said she knew Malvern well. This was not relevant, but assuming the address to be correct, she would see if any business was listed there. Contact was then made successfully.

Later that morning I tried a York number, seeking another patient with a distinctive name. A lady in Lincoln answered, called me "Sir" about six times (had omen) and I got a nil response. I tried the dreaded Directory Enquiries again and returned depressingly to Lincoln, where the lady who had previously brushed me off was again the recipient of my inquiry. For the second time I experienced a total lack of success. I decided to retire hurt.

Yours sincerely,
ALISTAIR SURGEON-FRAME,
50 Highfield Lane,
Chesterfield S41 8AY.
April 9.

British citizenship

From Mr Michael Pickett

Sir, Mr Piers Litherland (letter, April 7) asks if it is right that any child born in Britain, even the child of a refugee, illegal immigrant or a tourist, should have full British citizenship, whereas he, born in erstwhile Rhodesia, does not. The answer is that it is not right.

Mr Litherland is a British citizen by descent with the right of abode by virtue of the fact that his father was born in the United Kingdom. The hapless child born in the UK to a refugee, illegal immigrant, or a tourist spending a few weeks here takes the nationality of its parents. Prior to the Nationality Act 1981 such a child would have been a citizen of the UK and colonies whatever the status of the parents.

Yours faithfully,
MICHAEL PICKETT

Living museum to play instruments

From Mr Robert L. Barclay

Sir, Plans for the Royal Academy of Music's "living museum" (report, April 7) have been public knowledge for some time. However, what has probably not been revealed before is the daft sentimentality that underlies the motive for restoring, maintaining and playing this valuable collection of historic instruments.

The observations by Curtis Price, Principal of the Academy, that historic instruments "die" if they are not played, and that "if wood isn't exercised... it becomes rigid and stiffens up" are well worn rubbish supported by no shred of evidence. Furthermore, his observation that "if you see an instrument, you want to know what it sounds like" ignores the proven facts that the tone of the instrument comes from a) the person who is at the moment playing it and b) the instrument technician who last prepared it for playing.

There is no such thing as a "Stradivari sound", but there is most definitely a "Menuhin sound". We always know who is playing, but we never can guess what instrument is being played. This has been proven over and over again, for well over a century.

The sound one hears has no relationship to any "historical" quality that the instrument may possess; thus, to prepare an historic instrument for playing (which can be a highly invasive and irreversible process) rather than using a well-made modern copy is to be self-indulgent at the expense of the cultural heritage.

It seems to me that input from any museum advisory organisation is, so far, woefully absent. Decisions upon the disposition of such a valuable collection must be taken by a team of qualified individuals from a wide range of fields, not left to the whims of bankrupt Victorian romanticism. I would urge Curtis Price to assemble a panel of experts from the fields of musicology, organology, conservation and restoration and to charge them with producing a structured decision-making methodology so that the unique qualities of these historic instruments may be protected. With such a strategy in place it may still be possible to indulge transient, personal musical delight, but it won't happen at the expense of the material from which such sentiments are evoked.

Sincerely,
R. L. BARCLAY
(Senior Conservator,
Musical Instruments, Canadian Conservation Institute),
3609 Downpatrick Road,
Gloucester, Ontario K1V 9P4.
April 7.

From Mr Andy Lamb

Sir, I was dismayed to read of the plans to use £14 million of public funds to develop the Royal Academy of Music's private collection of instruments.

Dr Curtis Price is wrong if he thinks that his is a new concept. Institutions such as the Canadian Museum of Civilisation, the Horniman Museum, the Musical Museum, in Brendford, Middlesex, and the Paris Conservatoire all have extensive programmes of concerts, lectures and workshops. Indeed, each has wide-ranging public-access schedules for all levels of society.

As for plans for the consistent use of the instruments, there can be no excuse for what I regard as the inevitable destruction of cultural heritage. Musicians are notoriously ham-fisted and limiting the use of the instruments to a cultural elite does not make a sound argument for the use of public funds.

Yours faithfully,
ANDY LAMB
(Consultant conservator to the Horniman Museum, 1992-99), 30 Maple House,
Idonia Street, SE8 4LS.
April 7.

Wedding gifts

From Mrs C. M. McLean

Sir, My most appreciated wedding present (letters, April 2, 5, 8 etc) — in 1948 — was the small collection of clothing coupons given me by colleagues in the publishing office where I worked at the time.

Clothes rationing was still in force, but these precious extra coupons enabled me to buy the material for my wedding dress.

Yours sincerely,
MOLLY McLEAN,
Greenways, Burfield Road,
Chorleywood, Rickmansworth,
Hertfordshire WD3 5NS.
April 8.

Pepys's secrets?

From Mr Roderick L. Denyer, QC

Sir, "Samuel Pepys frequented [Bermondsey's] pleasure gardens with his children," writes Jamie Ross ("In love with Shakespeare's London", Home, April 7).

Odd that Pepys himself forgot to mention those children in his Diary. Perhaps this was something else he hid from his long-suffering wife.

OBITUARIES

THE EARL OF GUILFORD

The Earl of Guilford, landowner, died on March 26 aged 65. He was born on September 22, 1933.

THE 9th Earl of Guilford fought a long losing battle to develop and maintain Waidershare Park, his family seat in Kent since the 18th century. In a vivid illustration of the problems facing those who own historic houses but lack the funds to run them, he had recourse over the years to a catalogue of ingenious and desperate measures. These included ploughing up part of the ornamental garden to grow Christmas trees, and at one time turning half of the 90-room mansion into a henhouse, while the stables were given over to his pigs.

intended to convert it into retirement homes. But the plan fell through, and he bought the house back. He next proposed laying out a safari park in the grounds, in partnership with the zoo proprietor John Aspinall. This ran into local objections and planning obstacles, and Guilford, never very keen on the idea in any case, returned to the drawing board once more.

Edward Francis North was a descendant of the Lord North who was King George III's Prime Minister at the time of the American War of Independence. Tragedy soon overtook him. His father and his aunt were killed (his mother badly injured) in 1940 by a mine which blew up on Sandwich Bay while they were out walking their dogs on a beach which was then part of the estate.

size) had been ploughed up during the war and he began work as a "hands-on" farmer, putting up fences, driving a tractor or planting trees. Despite being tall and thin, he was wiry and deceptively strong-armed. He enjoyed becoming involved in public life. He was president of the Men of Kent and Kentish Men organisation, chaired the forestry section of the Kent Agricultural Society and did much for the school for deaf children in Margate. He was made a deputy lieutenant for Kent in 1976.

thought it wrong to treat the Upper House as a mere club. His greatest pride and joy was a vintage fire engine, a silver wedding present from his wife. He used it to put out small fires on the estate and, dressed in fireman's kit, would drive it from time to time round the local villages. Perhaps it was just as well that he had it, for he was also seriously interested in fireworks. He enjoyed laying on bonfire nights on the estate and organising displays for local schools.

PETER DUFFY

Peter Duffy, QC, lawyer, died of lung cancer on March 5 aged 44. He was born on August 8, 1954.

IN A profession noted for its individualism, Peter Duffy truly stood out. In ten short years of practice, just two of them as a silk, he imposed himself on the fields of human rights and European Community law in a way that few others have ever done.

Many of his cases were of such interest and importance that they were known to the public at large. He acted for Diane Blood when the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority refused to allow her to be impregnated with her dead husband's sperm. The Court of Appeal accepted that the authority's refusal to allow her to export the sample for treatment abroad contravened the right of free movement of goods within the European Union.

His cases were often controversial. He played a leading role in the legal campaign waged by Compassion in World Farming to improve the lot of veal calves exported to other member states of the EU. In the area of sexual equality his contribution was unmatched. He argued the cases for homosexuals in the military, Smith and Perkins, the age of consent cases, Wilde and Sutherland, and the sadomasochism case, Brown.

College and at Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge. He had a particular interest in international and public law, which he pursued both at Cambridge and at the University of Brussels. At the latter, he obtained a licence spéciale en droit européen with a rarely awarded grade, la plus grande distinction, a source of particular pride.

He was called to the Bar in 1978 and between 1979 and 1989 he taught full-time at Queen Mary and Westfield College, becoming visiting Professor of European Law at the University of Strasbourg. In 1981, with Professor Rosalyn Higgins (later Dame Rosalyn Higgins, the British judge at the International Court of Justice), he set up a masters' course in international human rights at the London School of Economics. He wrote prodigiously and became editor of the European Human Rights Reports.

An important part of Duffy's life concerned his practical commitment to human rights. He was called on by the International Executive Committee of Amnesty International and soon became the committee chairman. He was always ready to fly to some remote part of the world, at times at some personal risk, to plead a cause which he held dear.

In 1989 he decided to try out full-time practice at the Bar. He joined Four Essex Court, which later became Essex Court Chambers. Not one to wait for work to come to him, he embarked on a policy of writing widely. He had a column in the Law Society Gazette, and he was never known to turn down an invitation to speak at a conference or seminar. Duffy proved to be a fine advocate, as his elevation to silk in just eight years demonstrated. He had a complete mastery of his subject, but many lawyers have that. What made him such a successful advocate was his ability to present the argument so persuasively that it was sometimes difficult to believe that the contrary proposition was even arguable.

The rewards and prizes of a successful practice were beginning to arrive. He was chairman of the Bar European Group. He had been appointed an assistant recorder, but died just before the news was announced. Shortly before his death he was mooted in The Times as a candidate for the Lawyer of the Year award. But these are small change compared with what might have lain ahead.

He leaves a widow, Vivienne, and three young daughters; a son predeceased him.

Peter Duffy arriving at the House of Lords for the Pinochet hearing in January this year

STANLEY JONES

Stanley Jones, literary biographer, died on March 11 aged 83. He was born on March 2, 1916.

STANLEY JONES, the leading authority on the essayist William Hazlitt, was one of the great scholar-burrowers: a finder of facts and solver of puzzles, by discovery and by inference; verifier of authorship, and scourge of false attributions. Nobody in his generation did more to extend the knowledge of a major Romantic author. His scholarly character was a compound of observance in other master archivists, of industry and modesty, enthusiasm and temperate judgment.

Readers of his biography Hazlitt: From Winterslow to Frith Street (1989) had the impression that Jones could say where Hazlitt was and what he did on every day of his life, rather more confidently than Hazlitt himself could have done. The biographer came to know of missed chances the subject only guessed at, of mixed motives the subject must have doubted anyone would ever unearth.

Stanley Jones began his academic life as a scholarship boy at Swansea Grammar School, where Dylan Thomas was two years above him. He was one of the first people to review Thomas's work, contributing a critical essay about some of his poems to the school magazine. In 1933 he gained a place at Cardiff University to read for two honours degrees in succession: in English and then in French. After taking firsts in both, he went on to Cambridge, where he began work on a doctorate, continuing it on a bursary which took him to Paris in 1938-39.

bridge, where he began work on a doctorate, continuing it on a bursary which took him to Paris in 1938-39.

During the war he joined the Intelligence Corps and was stationed at Salisbury, where he first began to read Hazlitt seriously. As he did so, he realised that he was belatedly only a stone's throw from Winterslow, where Hazlitt had done much of his writing, at the cottage he had shared with Sarah Stoddart Hazlitt and at Winterslow Hut (now the Pheasant Inn).

After the war, Jones concluded his work on Proust at McGill University in Canada, where he married his Canadian wife, Dorothea, whom he had met in Paris in 1939. They returned to England in 1946, the year in which Jones was awarded his Cambridge doctorate. In 1947 he was appointed to a lectureship at Glasgow University.

Surprisingly, he never lectured in any department of English literature. During his career in Glasgow he lectured exclusively on French literature, but his friends knew that his expertise extended much further. When a visiting lecturer of a structuralist disposition gave a shoddy paper about Joyce, Jones turned readily to the passages of Ulysses that exposed the weaknesses of his argument.

range of topics. He retired from the university in 1981. Like Hazlitt he loved the theatre, food, wine, music and good company. Even during the illness of his final years, he remained convivial.

He was one of the first scholars to use all of Hazlitt's manuscripts, and he established dates for many essays and letters. His pamphlet, The Second Mrs Hazlitt: A Problem in Literary Biography (1982), was the first full discussion of the identity and family history of Hazlitt's second wife, Isabella Bridgewater, which had remained unknown for more than 150 years. Hazlitt fell out of fashion shortly after the Second World War, and for many years Jones was one of the few scholars working on him. This meant that he was the sole repository of much otherwise unavailable information. His legacy now is widespread and anonymous, in the generous way of such scholarship. It is in the large scattering of articles that trace allusions, and debts of other kinds, that award credit and praise and, sometimes, subtract blame where it was lodged unduly by less conscientious research.

He was tremendously generous with his erudition. Despite illness, he had managed in the years since publishing his biography to uncover much new information on Hazlitt, a good deal of which remains unpublished. He laid a foundation for the revival of Hazlitt that started in the 1970s, and his research underlies Duncan Wu's nine-volume Selected Writings, of which he was an advisory editor.

Cardinal Raúl Silva Henríquez, former Archbishop of Santiago, died on April 9 aged 91. He was born in Santiago on September 27, 1907.

CARDINAL Silva Henríquez was an outspoken campaigner for human rights who ensured that the Roman Catholic Church in Chile was in the forefront of opposition to the military dictatorship of General Augusto Pinochet. He once swore that he would shelter dissidents and opponents of Pinochet's regime under his bed, rather than hand them over to the secret police.

Raúl Silva Henríquez was born in the city of Talca in 1907. He gained a law degree from the Catholic University in Santiago in 1929 and was ordained priest nine years later. He became Archbishop of Santiago in April 1962, and a year later was made a cardinal. He went on to become one of the most influential and respected Church leaders in Latin America this century.

"There are more of the Gospel's values in socialism than there are in capitalism," the Cardinal once said. Such views were reflected in the modern Chilean Church as a whole, which on social questions had long taken a more progressive line than any other Latin American Church. But Silva Henríquez firmly opposed Marxism all his life, and was far from sharing the radical inclinations of some of the younger priests in Chile.

His rejection of all kinds of extremism, combined with some fairly sophisticated political skills, made him a natural mediator between the socialist Government of President Salvador Allende, elected in 1970, and the right-wing opposition. His efforts at promoting dialogue continued almost to the eve of the coup which overthrew Allende's chaotic regime in September 1973. The Marxist President and the Christian Democrat leader Patricio Aylwin were dining together at the Cardinal's house as late as August.

Two days after the armed coup, which brought General Pinochet to power, the Cardinal drafted a strong statement on behalf of the Chilean bishops condemning the violence of the takeover. In the subsequent months, as the full ruthlessness of the military junta became apparent, he seemed to take a less outspoken line, and was criticised by more radical priests for his caution. But the junta was always anxious to avoid a complete rupture with the Church if it could, and the Cardinal's measured approach at this time undoubtedly enabled the Chilean Church not only to survive comparatively unscathed, but to become the only tolerated and effective organised opposition to Pinochet's regime.

Cardinal Silva Henríquez with members of the protest group Families of the Detained and Disappeared, Santiago, 1978

Not that the Church was entirely unscathed by events. Foreign priests were expelled from the country. Chilean priests found aiding the revolutionary opposition were arrested. Some were shot. And the Chilean Committee of Co-operation for Peace, set up by the Church soon after the coup to give legal aid to political prisoners and advice to people dismissed from their jobs for political reasons, was swiftly suppressed.

The Cardinal responded by establishing the Vicaría de la Solidaridad. The vicariate, located in a huge colonial mansion in Santiago, became a refuge for victims of the dictatorship. Hundreds of widows of left-wing politicians and activists listed as "disappeared" stayed at the home and raised their children in it. It also provided rehabilitation for dozens of men and women who were released after months of torture in clandestine camps.

Cardinal Silva Henríquez was for many years the only recognised human rights campaigner to be allowed to visit torture victims in their cells. He toured Chile's police stations, prisons and military barracks to collect evidence of human rights abuses. The vicariate was subjected to considerable harassment, as attempts were made to seize its incriminating files. The Cardinal and his colleagues were subjected to a thoroughgoing campaign of vilification and worse. Silva Henríquez received regular death threats, his parents' graves were defaced and then smashed, and shots were fired at his home.

Much of the information the vicariate had compiled was later used in the official report commissioned by the democratically elected Chilean Government at the end of the dictatorship. It included a list of 3,197 people who were killed or disappeared at the hands of General Pinochet's secret police. The vicariate's work was recognised with the award of the Carter-Menil Human Rights Prize at the Carter Centre in Georgia in 1987.

That same year the Cardinal offered his services as mediator once again, this time between General Pinochet and his opponents. The Church's encouragement of dialogue undoubtedly helped to bring about Chile's eventual peaceful transition from military rule.

In a country - and a continent - accustomed to political polarisation and the violence it brings, Cardinal Silva Henríquez was esteemed as a symbol of dialogue and of peaceful change. When democracy in Chile was once again in sight, he refused to accept nomination as a compromise presidential candidate, as some opposition groups had hoped he might, but in his later years he had supporters from all sectors of Chilean society. As his health worsened over the past months, hundreds of leading Chilean figures visited him at the Salesian Order's home where he had spent the last years suffering from Alzheimer's.

President Eduardo Frei decreed five days of national mourning after his death, and thousands of Chileans, including politicians from the Left and from the Right, filed into the Catedral Metropolitana to pay their respects.

LOWELL FULSON

Lowell Fulson, blues singer and guitarist, died on March 8 in Long Beach, California, aged 77. He was born on March 31, 1921.

THERE are few bluesmen whose careers have been as enduring and as influential as that of Lowell Fulson. A performer from the American South West, he became one of the mainstays of the postwar West Coast blues scene, where he employed Ray Charles and inspired a young B. B. King.

When Elvis Presley finished his army service and returned to the studios for his Elvis Is Back album, one of the best tracks was his version of Fulson's Reconsider Baby. And when, a decade later, the soul singers Otis Redding and Carla Thomas wanted a suitable song to perform together, they chose Fulson's Tramp and enjoyed an international bestseller. Fulson himself carried on performing and recording into the 1990s, his passion and talent undiminished.

Born in the Choctaw Indian Strip in Tulsa, Oklahoma, of mixed black and native American Indian extraction, Fulson began his musical education early. "My first singing was done in churches for picnics and socials. My grandfather was a good fiddler, one of my uncles played a guitar; another played mandolin." His first professional experience came with a string band before he teamed up in 1940 with the itinerant blues singer Alger "Texas" Alexander, who had recorded widely in the 1920s and 1930s. He stayed with Alexander for a year before marrying his first wife and moving to Gainesville in Texas, from where he was drafted into the Navy in 1943.

While stationed in Oakland, California, he met the record company boss Bob Geddins, who promised to record him after the war. Geddins, one of a new breed of independent record entrepreneurs who had begun to cater for the burgeoning rhythm and blues market, recorded Fulson and his brother Martin in 1946. Those early records were in a country-blues vein, but Fulson soon put a touring rhythm and blues-slanted band together, with Ray Charles as his piano player and musical director. Hits followed with records such as Black Widow Spider Blues, Every Day I Have the Blues and a number that he later gave to B. B. King, Three O'Clock in the Morning.

In 1953, while still constantly touring, he signed for the Chicago-based Chess label and enjoyed the biggest hit of his career with the moving and heartfelt Reconsider Baby, which became a blues standard. Although he stayed with Chess for several years, his light and swinging brand of West Coast blues never fitted easily into the Chess label's repertoire of tough Chicago blues, and when Fulson moved to Los Angeles in the 1960s, he signed for the West Coast Kent label. There he recorded another big hit, the laconic Tramp, although its success in 1966 was eclipsed a year later by the cover version by Redding and Thomas.

He moved to the Southern label, Jewel, in the 1970s but found his hard to come by in the soul and disco era, even though he tried to update his sound with the progressive album In a Heavy Fog. However, like many other bluesmen of his era, he was able to find a new, enthusiastic - and white - audience in the 1980s and 1990s. A new recording contract with the Bullseye label and tours abroad further enhanced his reputation as an elder statesman of the blues.

His wife Sadie died in 1987. He leaves two sons and three daughters.

THE ERUPTION OF VESUVIUS

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT)

NAPLES, April 11 EXCEPT for a slight renewal of activity about 9 o'clock yesterday evening, Vesuvius seems to have entered upon a period of quiet. The lava flow, as far as can be judged, is assuming more ordinary proportions and is no longer a source of danger. The rain of ashes, of hot sand, and gravel (lapilli), though considerably diminished, still continues and threatens further destruction to the villages which have borne the brunt of their fall. Ottaviano and San Giuseppe Vesuviano have suffered the most heavily in the destruction of buildings. San Giuseppe, deserted by its inhabitants, is almost buried in places by mounds of ash and gravel. Many of its houses are in ruins. At Ottaviano the municipal buildings have also fallen. The appearance of both places is indescribably wretched. Everything seems buried under a smothering weight of grey dust which represents the fallen ash, and all the air is full of ash that is still falling, so imperceptibly fine that it can hardly be distinguished by the eye, and yet so dense that one cannot see a hundred yards ahead and that even breathing is sometimes difficult.

ON THIS DAY

April 12, 1906

The eruption of Vesuvius on April 7 destroyed the town of Ottaviano. More than a hundred people were killed in Naples; for miles around the volcano, villages and towns were cut off.

this morning a pathetic instance of the miserable confusion that reigns in the deserted towns. Two firemen, just landed from an American steamer, were in search of their families at Torre Greco. They found their homes abandoned and no sign of the whereabouts of the fugitives.

Naples is more deeply smothered in ash than ever. Yesterday evening it began once more to fall upon the city and continued until midday today. In view of possible disasters to the roofs the municipality have issued orders for its removal. But the work of removal will be enormous. I can only compare the effect to a heavy snowstorm in London. The same difficulty of progression, the same curious muffling of all sound save the occasional scraping of shovels...

The roads in Naples are horrible, but those towards Ottaviano or towards Torre Greco are almost impassable, a foot deep in the heavy dust and still encumbered with the carts of the unhappy refugees. It is impossible even to guess at the extent of the damage that has been done. The possibility of actual loss to property and to life may not be great, but one cannot exaggerate the suffering that has been inflicted, which is out of all proportion to either. The British Vice-Consul assures me that in all his 60 years' experience of Naples he has never known either a worse eruption of Vesuvius or more disastrous consequences...

NEWS

Nato puts 600 planes into war

Nato reinforcements, adding another 90 aircraft and an extra carrier for the attacks on Yugoslavia, were unveiled yesterday as the latest evidence of the alliance governments' resolve to maintain a long-haul air campaign.

Although the number of troops deployed to Albania and Macedonia could also more than double in the next few weeks, Robin Cook, the Foreign Secretary, reaffirmed that there would be no U-turn in Nato's policy to pursue the air campaign in preference to a ground offensive. Pages 1, 4-9

Blair calls for new world order

Tony Blair today calls for a "new internationalism" in which the world community never again tolerates the brutal repression of an ethnic group by a dictator struggling to remain in power. Page 4

Princess ill

Princess Margaret is bedridden and receiving regular medical attention at Windsor Castle a month after burning her feet in a scalding bath while on holiday in the Caribbean. Buckingham Palace confirmed. Pages 1, 2

Lords' reform

Tory chiefs will this week give the clearest signal yet that the party is on the brink of backing radical proposals for a directly elected House of Lords. A commission set up by William Hague will conclude that a future second chamber must be at the very least predominantly elected. Page 1

Euro support

Tony Blair has won a fresh boost in his campaign to win public support for the euro with a new survey showing that some two thirds of medium-sized businesses are in favour of joining. Sixty-five per cent of 200 managing directors representing firms with turnovers of between £1 million and £100 million said that the United Kingdom should join the single European currency. Page 2

Bafta revenge

In a display of the revenge that was such a popular feature of the Elizabethan theatre, the Australian actress Cate Blanchett beat Gwyneth Paltrow to the Best Actress award at the 51st British Academy Awards. Page 3

And it isn't even spring

The coldest spring in 100 years left the bewildered citizens of Los Angeles shivering at the weekend — if they were not skiing or gazing inland from the beach at scenes that might have been from Switzerland. Up to a foot and a half of snow blanketed the mountains and temperatures on the fringes of Los Angeles County plunged lower than those in parts of Alaska. Page 16

Royal obedience

Reports that Sophie Rhys-Jones will promise to obey Prince Edward at the royal wedding of the year on June 19 are premature, Buckingham Palace said. Page 11

GCSE howlers

A myth is a female moth and Joan of Arc was burned to a stake, according to GCSE candidates who have come top of the class in misunderstanding and inspired guesswork. Page 13

Ulster crisis

Sinn Féin and the Ulster Unionists will go to Stormont tomorrow to try to salvage the Northern Ireland peace process, which is on the verge of collapse. The two sides are as polarised as ever over the decommissioning of IRA arms. Page 14

Rich women

The twin daughters of the late Robert Maxwell are among a growing number of women newcomers to the list of the richest people in Britain. Page 15

Missile test anger

India test-fired its Agni II ballistic missile, breaking a five-year period of restraint and drawing global expressions of concern. Britain and the United States voiced worry and regret, giving a warning that the test would provoke Pakistan into a similar military response. Page 16

Sir Paul McCartney at the Albert Hall during a concert in memory of his wife Linda, who died a year ago. A host of pop stars performed in aid of the Animalaid charity. Review, page 20

TOMORROW

IN THE TIMES

NAZI ART

The question mark hanging over hundreds of paintings at the Tate Gallery

LAW

The public image of the JP is still that of the middle-aged, middle-class do-gooder. So is he?

Rugby union: Scotland were crowned winners of the final Five Nations Championship after Wales secured an unlikely one-point victory over England with a dramatic last-minute try at Wembley Stadium. Pages 27, 34, 35

Football: Alan Shearer scored two goals to sink Tottenham Hotspur and take Newcastle United to their second successive FA Cup Final. In the other semi-final Arsenal and Manchester United drew 0-0 and must replay. Pages 28, 29

Golf: Colin Montgomerie was carrying the hopes of British golf in what promised to be a pulsating final round of the US Masters at Augusta. Page 32

Motor racing: Mika Hakkinen, the world champion, driving a McLaren, won the Brazilian Grand Prix. Page 33

Boxing: A lack of stamina that could one day cost him dear did not prevent Naseem Hamed retaining his WBO featherweight title against Paul Ingle. Page 33

Rugby league: St Helens's leadership of the JJB Super League was consolidated. Page 39

Market fears: International markets are braced for a nervous start to the week after a shock profits warning from Compaq, the world's largest personal computer manufacturer, raised a large question mark. Page 52

Telecom Italia: The Italian phone giant is in search of a white knight following the collapse of its defence strategy over the weekend when it failed to secure a quorum at a vital shareholder meeting. Page 52

Supermarket job losses: J Sainsbury is to announce the redundancy of 650 managerial staff this week as part of a programme of drastic cost-cutting measures. Page 52

War and speech: In the battle of words political leaders rely upon winning phrases — and behind many great speeches there is an army of wordsmiths. Page 17

Urban peasant: Simple shapes in linen, cheesecloth and rosebud prints give a rustic look that you can wear in the city. Page 18

Talent scout: Conchita Lancaux has been bringing fashion's biggest names to the world's attention, and brokered many successful business 'marriages' between designers and couture houses. Page 19

Preview: Tony Marchant's adaptation of Great Expectations (BBC2, 9pm) Review: For all his drive James Goldsmith could only wound his targets. Pages 50, 51

Thunder in Ulster

The urgent need now is not for indulgence of terrorist wishes, but an insistence on democratic rights against those who demand flexibility without ever showing it. Page 23

The pace quickens

Intensified diplomacy must be linked to the destruction of Yugoslavia's military machine. And the sooner Russia joins the diplomatic push, the sooner the airstrikes will stop. Page 23

Nouveaux riches

The most curious thing about the current generation of multimillionaires is how little they flaunt their wealth. Page 23

WILLIAM REES-MOGG

The many good people inside BBC have not gone native; they are native. The candidate I would go for, to save the Corporation, would be Andrew Neil. Page 23

PETER RIDDELL

The question is this: can you be both Scots-Welsh and British? And, equally intractable, can you be both British and European? Page 23

The Earl of Gifford, landowner, Peter Duffy, lawyer, Cardinal Basil Shehan, former Archbishop of Santiago, Lowell Fulmer, bluesman, Stanley Jones, literary scholar. Page 23

Balkans war: teachers' pay; musical instruments museum. Page 23

Jones in concert: In her Dublin gig, Grace Jones proves that despite the dud films and the unrelaxed albums she remains a great performer and true star. Page 20

New York theatre: The Great White Way has been taken over by the British. Page 21

10, 18, 25, 32, 35, 36. Bonus: 2

THE TIMES CROSSWORD NO 21,075

ACROSS

- 1 Old Nick's main following group (10).
- 6 Rewards for recovery of this Turner (4).
- 10 Source of oil painter used, following Constable (5).
- 11 Intelligence network that's expected to bear fruit (9).
- 12 Lawyers getting wealthy, mostly by sound assistance in defence work (9).
- 13 Celebrated return of French heavyweight (5).
- 14 Recession showing up more on the coast (7).
- 15 Record incorporated in stone tablets in part of church (7).
- 17 Take the lead — or quietly retreat (7).
- 19 Boy in front of girl found on one knee (7).

DOWN

- 21 Feature article on Chelsea or Derby, say (5).
- 23 They make a striking pair, performing Spanish dance (9).
- 24 Reckless individual's crazy road speed (9).
- 25 Ran into a learner that's in the road (5).
- 26 An inclination to swindle (4).
- 27 Road railwayman applied to points for tender (5,5).
- 1 Grim mother having concern about baby, initially (7).
- 2 Not beyond redemption, note moral tale (9).
- 3 More serious party song included — that contributes to the atmosphere (9,5).
- 4 Effects of Silver being on board vessel not fully seen (7).
- 5 They eliminate blunders as piece finally is accepted (7).
- 7 Make an impression in race having displaced leader (5).
- 8 Trump half-mile — or move only by a foot (7).
- 9 The land near rocky island producing a remote ancestor (11,3).
- 16 Work over and drastically restyle synthetic material (9).
- 17 King fighter in film, on road working out (7).
- 18 Tendency to lose head to charm (7).
- 19 Send boat on its way using peremptory order to go (4,3).
- 20 Excuse a crack about bishop (7).
- 22 Obtain summer clothing shortly like this (2,3).

The solution of Saturday's Prize Puzzle No 21,074 will appear next Saturday. The five winners will each receive a £20 book token.

Times Two Crossword, page 52

LATEST ROAD AND WEATHER CONDITIONS

UK Weather - All regions 0236 444 910
UK Roads - All regions 0236 401 610
Inside M25 0236 401 746
M25 and Link Roads 0236 401 747
National Motorways 0236 401 748
Continental Europe 0236 401 910
Channel crossing 0236 401 388
Motorway to Heathrow & Gatwick airports 0236 407 505

Weather by Fax

Dial 0236 followed by area number from your fax
Fax Country 416 326 N. Ireland 416 341
Wales 416 325 London 416 342
Midlands 416 325 National Satellite
East Anglia 416 327 Weather 416 397
N. East 416 328 picture 416 397
Scotland 416 340
Met Office Marine 416 399
Telephone Marine Forecast 416 399

World City Weather

153 destinations world wide
5 day forecast
by Phone dial 0236 411316
by Fax (index page) 0236 410322

Motoring

Europe Country by Country 0236 401 885
European fuel costs 0236 401 886
French Motorways 0236 401 887
Support information 0236 401 882
Disneyland Paris 0236 401 409
Le Shuttle 0236 401 892

Car reports by fax

new and used car reports from the AA menu of 195 cars 0236 416 399
Dial from your fax handset
you may have to tap to poll receive mode

Automobile Association Development Ltd.

Not for Profit Charity Registered Charity No. 107
Calls are charged at 10p per minute at all times.

HOURS OF DARKNESS

Sun rises: 6.12 am Sun sets: 7.51 pm
Moon rises: 3.04 pm Moon sets: 4.49 pm
New moon April 16
London 7.51 pm to 6.10 am
Bristol 8.01 pm to 6.20 am
Edinburgh 8.12 pm to 6.14 am
Manchester 8.04 pm to 6.15 am
Penzance 8.11 pm to 6.34 am

FREE BOOKS FOR SCHOOLS

For a free copy of the book 'The Times' contact the Education Department, The Times, 1, The Quadrant, London WC2N 2JF. Tel: 020 7576 8000. Fax: 020 7576 8001.

THE TIMES

For a free copy of the book 'The Times' contact the Education Department, The Times, 1, The Quadrant, London WC2N 2JF. Tel: 020 7576 8000. Fax: 020 7576 8001.

THE TIMES

For a free copy of the book 'The Times' contact the Education Department, The Times, 1, The Quadrant, London WC2N 2JF. Tel: 020 7576 8000. Fax: 020 7576 8001.

THE TIMES

For a free copy of the book 'The Times' contact the Education Department, The Times, 1, The Quadrant, London WC2N 2JF. Tel: 020 7576 8000. Fax: 020 7576 8001.

THE TIMES

For a free copy of the book 'The Times' contact the Education Department, The Times, 1, The Quadrant, London WC2N 2JF. Tel: 020 7576 8000. Fax: 020 7576 8001.

THE TIMES

For a free copy of the book 'The Times' contact the Education Department, The Times, 1, The Quadrant, London WC2N 2JF. Tel: 020 7576 8000. Fax: 020 7576 8001.

THE TIMES

For a free copy of the book 'The Times' contact the Education Department, The Times, 1, The Quadrant, London WC2N 2JF. Tel: 020 7576 8000. Fax: 020 7576 8001.

THE TIMES

For a free copy of the book 'The Times' contact the Education Department, The Times, 1, The Quadrant, London WC2N 2JF. Tel: 020 7576 8000. Fax: 020 7576 8001.

THE TIMES

For a free copy of the book 'The Times' contact the Education Department, The Times, 1, The Quadrant, London WC2N 2JF. Tel: 020 7576 8000. Fax: 020 7576 8001.

THE TIMES

For a free copy of the book 'The Times' contact the Education Department, The Times, 1, The Quadrant, London WC2N 2JF. Tel: 020 7576 8000. Fax: 020 7576 8001.

General: cool and blustery with falling sunny spells and showers. Light W-WW wind freshening later. Max 10C (50F)

London, E Anglia, E Midlands, E England: sunny spells but showers by afternoon. Fresh W-SW wind. Max 13C (55F)
SE England, Central S & SW England: sunny spells, showers, strengthening W wind. Max 13C (55F)
W Midlands, Central N & NE England: bright start, showers developing, some heavy. Moderate to fresh W wind. Max 11C (52F)
Channel Islands: overnight rain clearing but risk of afternoon showers. Strong to near-gale W wind. Max 10C (50F)
Wales, NW England, Lake District, Jolite: windy, brief sunny spells, plenty of showers, some heavy. Fresh W-WW wind. Max 11C (52F)
Borders, Edinburgh & Dundee, Aberdeen: sunny intervals, isolated showers becoming heavier this afternoon. Light W-WW wind freshening later. Max 10C (50F)
SW Scotland, Glasgow, Central Highlands, Argyll: isolated showers turning to rain this afternoon. Strengthening N-WW wind. Max 9C (48F)
Moray Firth, NE & NW Scotland: increasingly cloudy with showers, some heavy. Strengthening N-WW wind. Max 12C (54F)
Orkney, Shetland: cloudy and wet. Strong N-WW wind. Max 7C (45F)
Northern Ireland: frequent showers, some heavy. Strong to gale NW wind. Max 12C (54F)
Irish Rep: bright spells, showers, some heavy. Strong W-WW wind. Max 11C (52F) Outlook: much colder with strong N-WW winds and showers or rain.

24 hrs to 5 pm: b=bright; c=cloud; d=drizzle; ds=dust storm; du=dust; f=fair; g=gales; h=hail; i=rain; sh=showers; sl=sleet; s=sun; t=thunder

	Sun	Rain	C	F		Sun	Rain	C	F
Aberdeen	3.8	0.04	11	52	r	Leeds	7.5	0.01	12	54
Angley	9.0	0.01	11	52	r	Lancaster	8.4	0.08	12	46
Aspinall	6.2	0.07	10	50	r	Leathers	3.3	0.01	11	52
Avonmouth	1.7	0.15	9	46	r	Liverpool	10.2	0.01	14	57
Belfast	1.3	0.09	10	50	r	Lowestoft	8.2	0.01	13	55
Birmingham	6.6		13	55	r	Manchester	7.1	0.01	12	54
Bognor R	10.7		14	57	r	Morecambe	7.8	0.01	11	52
Bournemouth	11.5		14	57	r	Newcastle	8.0	0.01	11	52
Bristol	11.1		11	52	r	Newquay	7.7	0.01	11	52
Burton	7.4	0.02	11	52	r	Northwich	7.4	0.01	13	55
Cardiff	11.3		12	54	r	Orford	8.0	0.01	11	52
Cardiff	9.7		12	54	r	Penzance	9.5	0.01	14	57
Chester	8.1		13	55	r	Plymouth	10.7		16	61
Chester	8.1		13	55	r	Portsmouth	10.1		12	54
Colwyn Bay	8.8		14	57	r	Reading	10.7		16	61
Conwy	19		0.8	12	54	Scarborough	7	11.5	12	54
Edinburgh	5.2	0.02	10	50	r	Sheffield	8.0	0.01	12	54
Edinburgh	2.8	0.12	9	46	r	Shrewsbury	8.0	0.01	12	54
Embsay	11.0		10	50	r	Slough	11.5	12	54	r
Falmouth	9.5	0.02	11	52	r	Southport	8	0.01	12	54
Glasgow	2.8	0.19	10	50	r	Southsea	10.2		16	61
Hastings	10.0		13	55	r	Stamford	11.5	12	54	r
Hayling I.	9		11.2	12	54	Swansea	10.7		16	61
Hemel Hempstead	8.2		15	59	r	Torquay	9.4	0.01	12	54
Hove	6.2		13	55	r	Truro	10.8	0.44	13	55
Ilfracombe	17		17	13	55	Weymouth	11.9		14	57
Isle of Man	7.6	0.01	11	52	r
Isle of Wight	12.0		12	54	r
Jersey	11.0	0.02	13	55	r
Kirkcaldy	2.1	0.03	10	50	r

Yesterday: highest day temp: Poole, Dorset, 16C (61F); lowest day max: Loch Glasmoor, Highland, 7C (45F); highest rainfall: Tise, Inner Hebrides, 0.44in; highest sunshine: Isle of Wight, 12 hrs

TEMPERATURES AT MIDNIGHT LOCAL TIME. X = NOT AVAILABLE

Alicante	15	59	f	Cologne	14	57	f	Madrid	16	61	f	Rome	13	55	f
Alexandria	20	68	f	Cordoba	19	66	f	Malaga	12	54	f	Saragossa	13	55	f
Alexandria	20	68	f	Corfu	18	64	f	Malaga	20	68	f	S. Francisco	9	48	f
Algiers	16	61	f	Dublin	15	59	f	Malta	18	64	f	Santiago	19	64	f
Amsterdam	11	52	c	Durham	11	52	c	Medan	19	66	f	S. Paulo	X	X	X
Amsterdam	11	52	c	Durham	11	52	c	Medan	27	81	f	S. Paulo	X	X	X
Amsterdam	11	52	c	Durham	11	52	c	Medan	27	81	f	S. Paulo	X	X	X
Amsterdam	11	52	c	Durham	11	52	c	Medan	27	81	f	S. Paulo	X	X	X
Amsterdam	11	52	c	Durham	11	52	c	Medan	27	81	f	S. Paulo	X	X	X
Amsterdam	11	52	c	Durham	11	52	c	Medan	27	81	f	S. Paulo	X	X	X
Amsterdam	11	52	c	Durham	11	52	c	Medan	27	81	f	S. Paulo	X	X	X
Amsterdam	11	52	c	Durham	11	52	c	Medan	27	81	f	S. Paulo	X	X	X
Amsterdam	11	52	c	Durham	11	52	c	Medan	27	81	f	S. Paulo	X	X	X

Tem

FROM AUGUSTA TO WEMBLEY A GREAT WEEKEND OF SPORT

FA Cup semi-finals
Pages 28, 29

Brazilian Grand Prix
Page 33

Augusta Masters
Page 32

The Grand National
Page 41

TIMES SPORT

MONDAY APRIL 12 1999

Point of no return: Gibbs caps his marvellous run by diving over the England line to score the try that decided the championship in Scotland's favour at Wembley yesterday. Photograph: Huw Evans

Wales stage grandest finale

David Hands, Rugby Correspondent, salutes Celtic triumphs on the final day of 89 years of the Five Nations Championship

SPORT does not come much better, nor embrace so many twists and turns, as the last episode of rugby union's Five Nations Championship. Next year, five become six, with the addition of Italy, and they have a mighty legacy to live up to after a Sunday upon which English hopes of a grand slam with which to conclude the millennium disappeared down a Welsh mine and Scotland were left as holders of the championship for the first time since 1990.

The drama of Wales's 32-31 England may have been denied yesterday but since 1910, when France joined, they have won the most championships - 27. Wales won 26, France 20, Ireland 14 and Scotland 13.

injury-time win over England at a tumultuous Wembley enhanced in the most brilliant light possible Scotland's 36-22 victory over France in Paris on Saturday. Their five tries in an outrageous first half - one of them, from Gregor Townsend, earning the fly half a nap hand against all four championship opponents and Italy - gave them the sniff of a title that most critics believed to be beyond them in mid-season. Yet they had to rely on their Celtic cousins from Wales to build on earlier victories over France and Italy. Indeed, Scotland had to wait until the 82nd minute of the match at Wembley before Wales took the lead, exploded theories of English omnipotence and relegated France, winners of the grand slam in 1997 and 1998, to holders of the wooden spoon in 1999.

That Scotland carried off the Five Nations trophy (first presented in 1993) for the first time only on points difference from England is neither here nor there. They have played such positive rugby this season - even against England, when they registered three tries but lost on goal kicks - and suffered such cruel luck with injuries that few could resist their claim to be the team of the season.

What a wonderful championship, sponsored by Lloyds TSB, it has been. That France have proved to be such a fading force has, certainly, detracted from the spectacle overall, but Scotland and Wales have compensated for that in full measure. New Zealand can claim some of the credit for that, through Graham Henry, the Wales coach, and a clutch of influential players - the Leslie brothers and Glenn Metcalfe for Scotland, Shane Howarth and Brett Slinkinson for Wales - but if they have brought a more rigorous, accurate approach from home-bred players, so much the better.

Tim Rodber, the England lock, sits dejected in defeat

Principality, there has been a resuscitation of native skills on the field. Henry suggested last night that England might not have taken enough respect for his team on to Wembley's wide open spaces with them. "There is nothing like earning respect out on the field, it's a huge emotion," he said. That Henry believes England still to be the strongest team in the northern hemisphere is an arguable point: they will not be the best while they continue to squander scoring chances in the way that they have throughout this championship. England did so against France and they did again yesterday. "We are shattered,"

Clive Woodward, the coach, said. "There is not a lot I can say to the players, because the tactics were right, the selections were right, but we lost the game."

Even in the moment of the Welsh victory, Jim Telfer, the Scotland coach, whose Five Nations swansong this was, remained unflustered - outwardly at least. "I rarely get emotional," Telfer said, "but when Neil Jenkins had that last kick, I was watching and saying: 'Please get one more over.'"

"It would have been better if we had won a grand slam, but this championship is almost as good as Durban [when the British Isles won the series against South Africa]. Didn't Neil Jenkins win that one as well?"

"This is one of the great days. On Saturday, we won a game; yesterday, we won a championship. It is a very good feeling. It gives us a great lift for the World Cup."

Instead of taking off for Australia in May for their World Cup camp in a cloud of euphoria, England will do so still uncertain of their true worth. Wales will tour Argentina this summer knowing that they still have a long road to travel, but believing that they have a motor in place that will drive them forward. Scotland, who visit South Africa but play no internationals, can cement their achievements in low-key circumstances for which they will be wiser when they resume in August.

As for the Five Nations itself, an 89-year-history has reached a superb conclusion. There have been many moments to savour, but few championships have matched the roller-coaster ride of this last one.

HOW THEY FINISHED

	P	W	D	L	F	Pts
Scotland	4	3	0	1	120	79
England	4	3	0	1	103	78
Wales	4	2	0	2	108	128
Ireland	4	1	0	3	86	90
France	4	1	0	3	75	100

RESULTS

Feb 6: Ireland 9 France 30,
Scotland 33 Wales 20,
Feb 20: England 24 Scotland 22,
Wales 23 Ireland 28,
Mar 6: Ireland 15 England 27,
France 33 Wales 34,
Mar 20: England 21 France 30,
Scotland 20 Ireland 13,
Apr 10: France 22 Scotland 36,
Apr 13: Wales 32 England 31.

Jenkins kicks the winning conversion deep in stoppage time

READY TO TACKLE ANYTHING?

IT'S 100% ARE YOU?

CENTRUM® CONTAINS 31 VITAMINS, MINERALS AND OTHER MICRO-NUTRIENTS. FOR A PHYSICALLY DEMANDING LIFESTYLE, THERE'S NO MORE COMPLETE MULTIMINERAL - MULTIVITAMIN.

FA Cup: Newcastle United book Wembley return as captain delivers extra-time double

Shearer elbows Tottenham aside

THERE is only one team at Wembley and, it seems, only one player in the country capable of scoring the goals to put them there. After two FA Cup semi-finals had been barren for a total of almost four hours yesterday, Alan Shearer stepped up to score a penalty and then, with a shot of sweet violence from outside the area, to put beyond doubt the case for Newcastle United to defeat Tottenham Hotspur.

The drama of the second semi-final had to be hauled through a long, sometimes tedious afternoon at Old Trafford, racked by organised tension and caution and, at times, streaked by malevolence. From early in the encounter, Shearer, with his elbow blatantly in the face of Mauricio Taricco, set the tone.

He was a man out of sorts with himself, bitter, it would appear, at his lack of decisive pace since he sustained his serious ankle injury last year. Mean of spirit, he had the Tottenham half of the 53,609 crowd chomping that he was a cheat. He had Sol Campbell complaining to the referee about his constant misdemeanours, and he even had the Newcastle players groaning that their captain, the England captain, seemed unwilling to throw himself into the fray with the same selfless, at times reckless disregard for the physical outcome that was coursing through the blustery, levered afternoon.

By the time that Shearer turned himself from villain to hero, the air had been blackened by the refusal of Paul Durkin, the referee, to give Tottenham a penalty when, in the 58th minute, Nicolas Dabizas rose to

NEWCASTLE UNITED	2
TOTTENHAM HOTSPUR	0
(after extra time)
by Rob Hughes

handle the ball from a free kick by Carr. It was — or from the stands it certainly looked — an injustice, and on such are the fortunes of the Cup won and lost. Maybe, for the first time since 1955, Newcastle are going to celebrate a victory at Wembley, whether it is over Arsenal, who denied them a year ago, or Manchester United.

Sir John Hall, now departed the inner boardroom of St James' Park, had always said that his dream was a team of Geordies. Instead, around the home boy, Shearer, who cost them £15 million, they are happy to include players from Greece, Peru, Germany and Croatia. How did they and the other foreigners, including David Ginola, Tottenham's Cup talisman, get drawn into the English passion that has Cup semi-finals running at a pace faster than the mind can control? It is a pace that takes its toll on limbs and, predictably, the first to surrender to it were those familiar injury victims, Steve Howey, for Newcastle, and Darren Anderton, for Tottenham.

Howey fell on the half-hour — a player with class stricken so often as if his tissue were made of glass. This time it appeared to be a calf injury and for Anderton, in the fifth minute, it was a hip.

With so many boots raised so high, there was also a player, Andy Sinton, kicked out of the game by a high, two-footed lunge from Andrew Griffin that should have merited more than one of the six yellow cards of this fierce combat. Indeed, cautions came more than thrills. For Tottenham, in the second minute, there had been a spectacular, dipping volley from Sherwood, fisted over the bar by Given. For Newcastle, a collection of individuals, they could claim only that Nolberto Solano should at least have hit the target when he shot low outside the near post.

So it wore on, the Tottenham supporters standing whenever Ginola was on the ball and then slumping back into their seats when, with Robert Lee detailed to augment the smothering role on the Frenchman by Griffin, the magic would not happen.

George Graham, the Tottenham manager, has instilled an Arsenal-type stubbornness into the Worthington Cup winners, but at the price of style. Ruud Gullit is on his way to Wembley not because his Newcastle team breathed more quality or more joy into the game, but because they at least managed to overrun Tottenham through the expedient of passing and moving.

Of course, Graham's wrath was vented at officialdom. "When he [Durkin] looks back at it [the handball by Dabizas] on video he will see what a bad decision he made — one of many in my opinion," Graham said. "What was he watching? If he did watch the flight of the ball, he must have seen it go to hand. And I think if we'd got that penalty we would have won the game. Trust me on that."

Gullit, the Newcastle manager, congratulates his two-goal captain after Shearer's match-winning performance at Old Trafford yesterday

The penalty that the referee did see came after 108 minutes. Shearer and then Duncan Ferguson, the substitute, who under another manager might well have replaced

Shearer himself, had each been denied by fingertip saves from Ian Walker. And then, when Speed played the ball in, when Ferguson flicked it on, it was the hand of Campbell that Durkin saw knock the ball down. Shearer sent Walker the wrong way from the penalty spot.

To crown his day, to put the final deception on this semi-final, another substitute, Silvio Maric, wonderfully turned the ball back and Shearer, yards outside the penalty box, with almost languid yet at the same time ferocious force from his right foot, guided the ball as if by radar, high and higher still, until it shot over the left shoulder of the goalkeeper and into the top corner. A Geordie, one of the few, had triumphed.

NEWCASTLE UNITED (4-2-2) S. Shearer — A. Carr, S. Howey (sub), A. Hughes, 34 (sub), N. Dabizas, W. Banton — R. Lee, D. Harrison, G. Speed, N. Solano (sub), D. Ferguson, 75 — T. Heskott (sub), S. Maric, 100, A. Shearer.

TOTTENHAM HOTSPUR (4-2-2) I. Walker — S. Carr, L. Young, S. Campbell, M. Tancos — D. Anderton (sub), A. Sinton, 52, sub A. Neilson, 58, T. Sherwood, S. Freund, D. Ginola (sub), S. Iversen, 75 — C. Armstrong, L. Ferdinand. Referee: P. Durkin.

Central figure in search of new identity

Alan Shearer repels personal questions with platitudes about collective effort but, for once, he really was indebted to the service that others provide. Newcastle United, too, owe their place in the FA Cup final to one benefactor. In a lull in the first half, Sol Campbell handed a water bottle to Shearer, but no one could have guessed just how far the Tottenham defender's generosity to an England teammate would run.

His unfathomable decision to handle the ball invited Shearer to open the scoring with a penalty. Furthermore, the thrill of the breakthrough stayed with the centre forward, his exhilaration ringing out of the fiercely sliced 20-yarder with which he removed all doubts over the outcome.

Yet Shearer has still to dispel reservations about his condition. A terrible Achilles injury cost him much of last season and, since his return, his famed power has assumed a new, less decisive character. Often, his strength is now like that of a defender and it sees him wrestling with opponents rather than bursting free of them. In this semi-final,

Tottenham fans booed him for burying challenges early in the afternoon.

Ruud Gullit, the Newcastle manager, does not subscribe to the conventional view of Shearer. He sees his captain not as a dwindling resource, but as a man who has been denied his true role. For Gullit, Shearer is miscast as a target man and should, instead, be advancing on to the ball. Therefore, the manager saw the introduction of Duncan Ferguson in the 75th minute,

Kevin McCarra says that the England striker is not the player he once was his first appearance after four months of injury, as a crucial change in context.

"Whenever Duncan got a flick," Gullit said, "Alan was nearby and he could control the game. Alan has needed that for a long time. He hasn't had it since Les Ferdinand was at Newcastle."

A year ago, also at Old Trafford, Shearer had decided an FA Cup semi-final, hitting the goal, from close range, that defeated Sheffield United. In 1999, much has changed. Yesterday, there was often a tetchiness to exchanges and, in that period, his critics could have taken Shearer for a brawler. Gullit himself has observed that the player, after so many injuries, must devise a new method of play. For that process to be completed, Shearer would need to contradict his own aggressive nature and devote more attention to scheming and play-making.

Before the game, it had been a Tottenham Hotspur player whom many expected to shape the result, but, unable to galvanise the semi-final, David Ginola had to make do with breathing life into a cliché. Here is a figure who really does bring the crowd to its feet. Of course, there is always a clatter of tip-up seats when spectators rise to watch a centre forward going through on the goalkeeper; Ginola, however, needs only to be in possession to have the same effect.

In the first half, with the ball at his feet and animation in his gait, the crowd at Old Trafford rose with an eagerness that suggested they wished to accompany him on his runs. Unfortunately for the entertainment value, others at Old Trafford had the same idea. So long as he was on the field, Ginola, who was replaced eventually, found that he could never free himself from Rob Lee and the admirable Andy Griffin.

EXCLUSIVE READER OFFER

THE TIMES

WIN TICKETS TO THE RUGBY WORLD CUP

Today The Times has teamed up with Lloyds TSB to give readers the chance to win a pair of tickets to the Rugby World Cup final on November 6 in Cardiff, or one of the semi-finals at Twickenham on October 30 or 31. There are also pairs of tickets for the pool matches to be won. Lloyds TSB is one of the main sponsors of the Rugby World Cup 99 and sponsor of the Five Nations Championship.

HOW TO ENTER Listed right are the matches to be played in England, Scotland and Wales, with their entry lines and the numbers of pairs of tickets to be won. For your chance to win a pair of tickets to one of the matches, call the appropriate number with your answer to this question: Who did South Africa beat in the final of the last Rugby World Cup? All entrants will automatically be entered for the chance to win a pair of tickets to the semi-finals and final. The winners will be chosen at random from all correct entries received. You can enter as many times as you wish. Lines are open until midnight Wednesday, April 14. Normal TNL competition rules apply.

WORLD CUP GAMES IN YOUR REGION

All entrants will automatically be entered for the chance to win a pair of tickets to the final or one of the semi-finals

ENGLAND Call 0640 678 890

England v Italy
Twickenham, October 9, 2 pairs
England v New Zealand
Twickenham, October 9, 2 pairs
Italy v Repechage 1
Leicester, October 10, 2 pairs,
New Zealand v Italy
Huddersfield, October 14, 2 pairs

SCOTLAND Call 0640 678 891

Scotland v South Africa
Murrayfield, October 3, 1 pair
Scotland v Repechage 2
Murrayfield, October 8, 2 pairs
South Africa v Spain
Murrayfield, October 10, 3 pairs
Scotland v Spain
Murrayfield, October 16, 2 pairs

WALES Call 0640 678 892

Samoa v Japan
Wrexham, October 3, 2 pairs
Wales v Japan
Cardiff, October 9, 1 pair
Argentina v Samoa
Llanelli, October 10, 3 pairs
Wales v Samoa
Cardiff, October 14, 1 pair
Argentina v Japan
Cardiff, October 16, 2 pairs

CHANGING TIMES

Poyet returns for final lap

DEVOTEES of the FA Carling Premiership have long since given up paying attention to the margin of Chelsea's victories. On paper, this match may look close but, in reality, Gianluca Vialli's team dominated it — and in the manner of champions-elect, to boot.

They started the afternoon with a gentle, economic approach, as if quietly confident that this could be the week in which they take pole position in the title race. Only last month, Vialli, the player-manager, was dismissing the possibility that Chelsea could catch Arsenal and Manchester United. Now, anything seems possible.

With their two rivals in the Premiership engaged in an FA Cup semi-final replay on Wednesday, Chelsea could, if they win away to Middlesbrough, top the table. They went top just before Christmas, but to do so in April has more of an ominous ring to it for the other contenders.

"It is a massive week for us," Ray Wilkins, the first-team coach, said, "but Boro have had a mini-revival, so we have no illusions. It will be extremely tough for us up there."

For Chelsea, the script is unravelling nicely. When Gustavo Poyet was badly injured earlier in the season, Chelsea stuttered, but the fans knew that the minute Poyet returned, their team would start to storm back to full power. "It's like having a new player at the club," Wilkins said — but, in truth, Chelsea knew exactly what they were missing. The Uruguayan midfielder possesses a rare killer instinct.

He could have scored twice yesterday before Chelsea broke the deadlock in the 23rd minute, first with an overhead kick, then from a free kick by Zola, which he tried to bundle over the line. Instead, it was Flo who scored, after a meticulous move, in which the Norway striker took hold of the ball inside the centre circle and exchanged passes with Goldback before beating Sullivan effortlessly.

Chelsea continued to create chances. Zola worked a short

WIMBLEDON	1
CHELSEA	2
by Alyson Rudd

corner with Goldback that set up Duffery for a header, which he put wide. When Petrescu picked out Zola with a cross, the Italian's blistering strike was blocked by Cunningham. Poyet put another chance wide but, by now, it looked inevitable that he would score, eventually.

He did, early in the second half, with a thundering half-volley after a cross by Zola. There was no need then for the West London side to exert themselves further: after all, the title race demands that a team paces itself and what would be the point in gloating at the extra workload facing Arsenal and Manchester United if Chelsea were to risk tiredness at Selhurst Park?

Nevertheless, Wimbledon, for all their failings yesterday, gave Chelsea a slap across the face in injury time. Gayle scoring after a cross by Ainsworth. For just a few seconds, the prospect of an unlikely draw boosted the home support; for just a few seconds, Wimbledon looked more like their old selves, rather than the petulant, stumbling side of the previous 90 minutes.

But Wimbledon have nothing much to play for now, whereas Chelsea — with a full squad possessing, according to Wilkins, astounding fitness levels — can see the summit of the mountain they have been climbing all season and snow as yet untrodden. It is indeed a massive week.

WIMBLEDON (4-4-2) N. Sullivan — K. Cunningham, D. Blackwell, C. Poyet, B. Thelchard (sub), C. Lashburn, 76 (sub) — M. Hughes (sub), G. Armstrong, 46, J. East, A. Roberts, C. Hughes — J. Harrison (sub), C. Cort, 70, M. Gayle.

CHELSEA (4-4-2) E. de Goey — B. Lambourde, M. Duffery, F. Lobotov, G. Le Saux — D. Petrescu (sub), E. Newton, 57, G. Poyet, R. D. Mitchell (sub), J. Morris, 46, B. Louchard — TA Flo, G. Zola (sub), M. Nichols, 90.

Referee: G. Wilford

Campbell lifts Everton spirits

THE scenes which greeted Everton's first win in five matches yesterday, a victory which took them out of the bottom three in the FA Carling Premiership, were frenzied indeed. Players rushed to congratulate Kevin Campbell, the scorer of Everton's two goals, while the police were quick to provide an escort for Rob Harris, the latest referee to take centre stage.

The Oxford official saw fit to book seven players and five minutes from time, with Coventry striving might and main to force an equaliser, it appeared that one contentious decision too far could prove costly for Everton.

Darren Huckerby touched the ball past Marco Materazzi before falling to ground. If Everton escaped a penalty by a matter of inches, Materazzi did not escape his second caution, which brought dismissal. The Italian looked distraught, for Huckerby's tumble appeared somewhat theatrical.

Perversely, however, this setback spurred Everton to greater things and, with less than three minutes remaining, Campbell reacted quickest to a rebound to ensure three vital points. "Our margin for error is slight," Walter Smith, the Everton manager said, "so it was important to get our recovery back on track."

The roars from the Everton supporters mingled encouragement with emotion. These fans have more experience of relegation battles than many of the players.

Discounting a narrow escape from a shot by Gary Breen in the first minute, positive thinking served the home side well in the first half. Ball and Dacourt peppered the Coventry goal and Nicky Barmby was foiled by an instinctive save from Hedman when he had the goal at his mercy. With 28 minutes gone, however, Barmby made amends. He toe-poked a pass to Campbell, who is on loan from Trabzonspor, and the striker escaped the attentions of Williams before rounding the goalkeeper to score.

The Coventry players were adamant that Campbell had fouled Williams in the process and it appeared that they had

EVERTON	2
COVENTRY CITY	0
by Stephen Wood

a good case, but if this was the stroke of luck Everton have been seeking, they singularly failed to take advantage of it.

Campbell and Francis Jeffers both wasted good openings before the second half brought a turn for the worse. Whatever Smith says to his players at half-time, it seems to have an unsettling effect. They surrendered an interval lead to lose to Sheffield Wednesday in their previous home game and it appeared something similar was about to occur as Coventry heaped pressure on an increasingly brittle defence.

Aloisi twice went close, denied on the second occasion by a heroic piece of defending by Short. Williams fired a shot straight at Myhre and Solveti ballooned another good chance over the crossbar. The ball bounced around frantically in the Everton penalty area but Coventry were unable to apply the decisive touch.

In an encounter plagued by niggling challenges, it seemed inevitable that one player, at least, was going to be sent off. Dacourt tried in vain to clear that booby prize, although the one yellow card he picked up means that another suspension is heading his way.

Instead it was Materazzi who received his marching orders. Against Sheffield Wednesday, his mistakes cost his club dear. Yesterday, the Gods were kinder and after two successive victories, Coventry were reminded that Nationwide League football still remains a possibility.

EVERTON (3-5-2) T. Myhre — G. Short, D. Worsley, M. Materazzi — D. Wier, S. Gendall, C. Dacourt, N. Barmby, M. Ball — K. Campbell, F. Jeffers (sub), A. Grant, 66 (sub).

COVENTRY CITY (3-5-2) M. Hedman — R. Shaw, P. Williams, G. Bunn — G. Brett, G. Boudier, G. McAlister, T. Solveti, P. Toller (sub), J. Aloisi, 14 — D. Huckerby, N. Whelan. Referee: R. Harris.

FA Cup: Ferguson furious as dubious offside decision subjects his team to Villa Park replay

Extended semi riles United

Odds grow longer on treble chance

Oliver Holt, football correspondent, detects worrying signs of staleness as an epic season reaches its finale

There was finesse and there was fire at Villa Park yesterday afternoon, but both were relegated to subservience. Basic virtues triumphed in this FA Cup semi-final between the nation's two best sides and acquired a nobility of their own in the process.

There was an occasional shimmer from Dennis Bergkamp, the odd piece of vision from the Dutchman that took the breath away and one run in the dying seconds of extra time that eliminated Roy Keane and Ronny Johnsen in a couple of mesmerising shuffles and seemed as if it might be about to settle the tie. There were some clever passes from Keane too, and a brace of dipping, curling free kicks from David Beckham and Ryan Giggs that commanded awe because of their precision and power. They were like flowers planted on barren ground.

This was a game of destructive beauty, a game where all creativity was lost. That extra-run by Bergkamp was stifled by a lunging tackle from Gary Neville. Giggs's free kick was deflected by David Seaman and a late break by Fredrik Ljungberg foundered on the excellence of Peter Schmeichel.

The one time that the ball did bulge the net, dispatched there by a fierce half-volley from Keane in the 39th minute, it was ruled out by a dubious offside decision that penalised Dwight Yorke, even though he was clearly not seeking to interfere with play.

Alex Ferguson, the United manager, described the decision — which provoked fury among the United players — as "absolutely ridiculous". Keane explained why it angered his side so much. "We knew how tight it was going to be," he said. "We knew there was only ever going to be one goal in it. That's why we were so disappointed."

More than anything, this was a game that relied on the apparently ageless excellence of the Arsenal defence for its inspiration. They were utterly unbreachable yesterday, neutralising Yorke and Andy Cole and reducing Beckham and Giggs to peripheral figures. At the heart of that defence,

Hand-to-mouth existence: Dixon, the Arsenal full back, gets to grips with Keane as Manchester United go on the attack at Villa Park yesterday a back four that has conceded only 13 goals in the FA Cup Premier League this season. Tony Adams and Martin Keown played as well as they have done all year. Keown, in particular, was unyielding in the challenge, impossible to beat.

On the rare occasion that United had half an opening, when they might have won one challenge in the opposing penalty area, Arsenal invariably won the second. If Adams was beaten, Keown was there to mop up, and vice versa. More often, they broke up play with a thudding tackle or a neat intervention. To make United's attacking task even harder, Patrick Vieira and Nelson Vivas worked away like demons in front of the defence, stopping their opponents from running directly at Adams and Keown. They were a formidable barrier.

Even when Vivas was sent off five minutes into the first period of extra time, earning his second yellow card for elbowing Nicky Butt in the face, Arsenal breathed hard, regrouped and returned to the task. Only two minutes from the end, when Adams collided with Nigel Winterburn, did United have a clear opportunity, and Yorke dragged his shot wide from ten yards.

That, in fact, was the game in microcosm. With Arsenal playing conservatively, looking to hit United on the break, the onus was on Ferguson's side to break them down. To do that, their forwards needed to be on top form, their finishing at its most clinical, but Cole and Yorke fell short of the performances that have made them such a feared partnership.

Indeed, it was Arsenal who forced the few half-chances there were before the interval. Schmeichel had to arch his back to tip over a fierce header from Adams in the 25th minute and, ten minutes later, the Danish goalkeeper flung himself to his right to push out Bergkamp's shot after it had flown at him through a crowd of players.

On the stroke of half-time, Yorke shot weakly and straight at Seaman after an exchange of passes with Cole. Then, after the break, Cole failed to convert an enticing cross from Gary Neville and, soon afterwards, struck a tame shot into the arms of Seaman after Giggs had released him in the centre.

Nicolas Anelka, who had a subdued game, wasted a chance to break the stalemate three minutes from the end of normal time when he wriggled past Jaap Stam for the first time, but he sliced his shot high and wide.

Both sides tired in the second period of extra time and the chances came in a flash flood as the game ebbed away. None of them were taken, leaving Ferguson, in particular, to rue his side's profligacy.

"There was not much between the two sides," he said. "I think it was a predictable result, to be honest with you. We had enough chances to kill them off. We created more than them but we did not take them and that is why we have to go to a replay."

It will take a mistake or a moment of brilliance to separate these sides on Wednesday. Yesterday, neither was forthcoming.

MANCHESTER UNITED (4-4-2): P Schmeichel — G Neville, R Johnson, J Stam, D Irwin (sub P Neville, 55min) — D Beckham, R Keane, N Butt, R Giggs (sub P Scholes, 110). ARSENAL (4-3-3): D Seaman — L Dixon, M Keown, A Adams, N Winterburn — R Parlova, P Vivas, A Vivas — M Anelka (sub: Kuru, 100), D Bergkamp, M Overmars (sub: F Ljungberg, 80). Referee: D Elia.

Keane and Yorke lead United's protests over the disallowed goal

Adams presents indestructible barricade

Matt Dickinson says the boys of the old brigade who constitute Arsenal's defence continue to amaze by their resilience

If Tony Adams is the Doctor of Defence, as his manager claims, then yesterday he allowed the rest of us a glance at his thesis. The Arsenal captain has produced some immense performances for club and country over more than a decade, but few can have equalled this colossal display. Some of his tackles would have stopped the traffic.

He must have been that good to have narrowly pipped Martin Keown to this observer's man-of-the-match award. With some justification, Keown has complained recently that he has not been recognised as a defender of international calibre. So here goes, Martin, you are a great defender but Tony, I am afraid, is still that little bit better.

In tandem, and with Nigel Winterburn, Lee Dixon and David Seaman in their own resolute mood, the safest bet yesterday was that not even the country's most prolific attack would be capable of breaching England's most steadfast defence. The reduction to ten men, when Nelson Vivas was rightly dismissed four minutes into extra time, only made Arsenal's stubbornness more certain. The resilience is in the blood.

Adams threw himself into tackles with an enthusiasm that belied his 32 years and dodgy ankles, as well as embarking on the odd rampage upfield. At one point in the first half, he charged forward with such unlikely speed that he appeared to have got on the end of his own clearances and he, more than anyone, did not deserve to lose this game.

There have been times this season when the pain in his legs has prompted talk of retirement and he will prove irreplaceable when the day eventually comes. They will clear the marble halls of Highbury for another bronze bust.

With Patrick Vieira and Roy Keane matching each other in magnificence in midfield and both attacks sporadic in their effectiveness, this was the sixth meeting in succession in which United have found themselves unable to overcome their sternest rivals. It is a run of four defeats and two draws that stretches back to February 1997 and, in the minds of the United players, the little doubts must have started to become self-fulfilling. Dwight Yorke and Andy Cole must feel as though they are banging their heads, as well as their shots, against a brick wall.

Adams, back, holds off Beckham

Arsenal will certainly have left Villa Park in the jauntier mood. Without the burden of a European campaign to distract them, they will feel that the return of Emmanuel Petit from his three-match suspension for the replay on Wednesday will give them a slight edge.

They appeared less willing than United to gamble on throwing bodies forward yesterday, but the Frenchman's versatility will allow them to do so in greater numbers. Perhaps by Wednesday, Nicolas Anelka will have been taught the rules of offside.

And, of course, there will still be that back four to protect David Seaman, provided that they have all recovered from the aches and pains that prove more reluctant to depart by the year. Winterburn, 35, was bleeding from his chest early on after a strong challenge from Beckham and finished extra time clutching his toes as cramp set in.

Meanwhile, Dixon, 35, could barely muster the energy to clear the ball past the halfway line. It was left to Keown and Adams to carry them through, a task they performed with remarkable calm as well as courage.

"They are tough, they are intelligent and they will recover for Wednesday," Arsène Wenger, the Arsenal manager, said. "They will make it. They have made it before. We had our usual resilience and organisation and we needed the brilliance at the back. We are still in the FA Cup because of our defence." He could not have put it better.

George Caullin There are certain lines one simply does not step over, never mind sniff.

but Liverpool have been guilty of questionable judgment as well as dubious taste in recent weeks. For just the third time since the 1960s, an Anfield side is unlikely to qualify for European competition and seldom has a season tailed away with such muted embarrassment as this.

Robbie Fowler's indiscretions, featuring use of buttocks and nose, have merely put those failings into sharper focus, while a lack of good grace fingers about the club like an unpleasant odour. "This season has not been good enough," Gérard Houllier, the Liverpool manager, said yesterday. "We are all playing for our futures and we can do far better."

Attempting a reversal of fortunes will not be straightforward against a Leeds United team chasing their eighth successive victory and who have David Batty and Alf Inge Haaland back to reinforce a youthful squad. LEEDS UNITED (possible 4-3-3): N Martin — A Haslam, J Woodgate, L Rasmie, I Marle — L Bowyer, D Hopkin, D Batty — H Kewell, A Smith, J F Hasselbark. LIVERPOOL (possible 4-4-2): D James — R Song, J Campbell, S Stanton, D Maitoo — S McKendry, P Ince, J Hendrick, P Berger — M Owen, R Fowler. Referee: P Jones. PREDICTION: A draw.

14 year old long jumper lands in Florida.

The British Airways Olympic Futures Programme of multi-sport training camps in Britain and America is helping 175 young British athletes achieve their Olympic dreams.

BRITISH AIRWAYS
The world's favourite airline

Blinker comes alive to clog United's path to glory

Celtic 2
Dundee United 0

By Phil Gordon

THE unlikely hero is as much a part of the fabric of cup tradition as the embarrassing suits that (dis)grace the pre-match pitch inspection before every final. So, few players are better made-to-measure for the role than Regi Blinker.

The Dutchman passed the stage of vilification with Celtic supporters long ago, slipping into something most charitably described as being patronised. The Scottish Cup semi-final, therefore, simply yearned to be his stage and Blinker cast off his clown's outfit to unravel Dundee United's dreams.

Blinker's fearsome 29th-minute shot paved the way for victory at Ibrox, but the normally-stoic Holland player then embellished his display with hitherto unknown passages of crisp passing and tackling that earned him the man-of-the-match award and, more importantly, a standing ovation from those supporters clad in green-and-white.

Blinker's day in the sun went some way to atoning for the moment of trepidation last August in the Champions' League qualifying tie with Croatia Zagreb, when he stooped in his tracks, rather than take a thump from the goalkeeper that was as certain as the goal that also beckoned. Exit from Europe seemed certain to be followed by Blinker's own from Parkhead.

When Blinker arrived from Sheffield Wednesday 21 months ago, a dazzling entertainer was promised. What Celtic supporters got was the Emperor's clothes. Will one performance alter that opinion? Craig Burley believes his colleague could be back in fashion.

"I think Regi now understands that he has to work as hard as every player," the Celtic midfielder reflected. "He did not shirk any responsibility out there today and he has come back to the team, after a spell out, a different man."

It gives the Celtic forwards, Henrik Larsson and Mark Viduka, better service, too. Tosh McKinlay, the Celtic wing back, even at 34, still leaves Blinker in the shade when it comes to quality of crossing. Viduka ought to have profited on at least two occasions from McKinlay's fine work but, eventually, the Australia forward punished some negligent marking by Siggi Jonsson, the Dundee United defender, to drive in the crucial second goal.

United, swamped in the first half, rediscovered their vigour in the second in a disappointing display that Paul Sturrock, the manager, termed "Jekyll and Hyde" but of which Billy Dodds, the striker, was more damning. "We switched off after ten minutes and I can't stomach that," the Scotland midfielder player said.

Nobody would agree more than Burley. He had to suffer the unedifying sight, as he ate his pre-match meal, of his blunder when playing for Chelsea in the 1995 FA Cup semi-final, which gifted David Beckham, of Manchester United, a goal.

Blinker is right to savour the moment. The lifespan of unlikely cup heroes is a short one. Ask Mike Trebilcock, Roger Osborne or even Joe Miller. The Dundee United winger, whose runs were thwarted all day by Blinker, attracted scarcely a glance from the same Celtic fans who celebrated his winning goal in the 1989 Scottish Cup final. What a fickle game this is.

CELTIC (3-5-2): J. Gould — E. Annoni, T. Boyd, S. Mone (sub: M. Whelan, 53min); J. Morrison, P. Limeron, R. Blinker, T. McKinlay — H. Larsson, M. Viduka (sub: S. Donnelly, 46); DUNDEE UNITED (4-4-2): S. Dodds — M. Sturrock, J. de Vos, S. Jonsson, M. Malpas — J. Miller, N. Murray, C. Easton, K. Ockendon — S. Dodds, A. Mathie (sub: S. Thomson, 69). Referee: W. Young.

Blinker screams in delight after putting Celtic ahead

FA Carling Premiership: Villa take advantage of depleted opponents

Ten-man Southampton cave in

ASTON VILLA 3
SOUTHAMPTON 0

by Alyson Rudd

Lundekvam starts his lonely walk to the dressing-room after his controversial dismissal by referee Barry. Photograph: Shaun Botterill/Allsport

THE grouse is shot, it lies still, waiting for the danger to pass, stunned but not hurt. The man with the rifle then sees the flag indicating that the grouse season is at an end. He pauses, sidles up to the flag-bearer, thinks and then strolls up to the bird and shoots it dead.

It is an emotive analogy but then these are emotional times. The referee at Villa Park, Neale Barry, saw Claus Lundekvam pull back Ian Taylor and took his cards out of his pocket. The Southampton defender had already been cautioned, so his team-mates gathered round and pointed to the assistant referee, who had raised his flag for offside. Barry duly consulted with his assistant and awarded Southampton a free kick. The danger seemed to have passed, the Southampton players visibly relaxed. And then Barry showed Lundekvam a red card.

His decision altered the game, not least because David Jones's team are simply not the sort that play better when down to ten men. Southampton generally demean themselves on their travels — this was their eighth successive away defeat — and they were already a goal behind at the time of Lundekvam's dismissal. Mark Draper having eluded Marsden's lunging tackle to score his first FA Carling Premiership goal of the season. Yet Villa still seemed sufficiently vulnerable for Southampton to make their mark.

However, as soon as Lundekvam left the pitch in the fortieth minute it all fell apart. Jones urged Le Tissier to assume the lone striker's role but this was not such a wonderful idea. Le Tissier, having passed the ball around blithely, as is his wont, now found himself surrounded by defenders and he never was the sort to turn and run through the pack. Jones had lost not only a centre half, but also his most creative force.

The resulting collapse was pitiful and Villa, having failed to register a victory in ten matches, could scarcely contain their glee. John Gregory could even throw on Paul Merson, safe in the knowledge that this had become the sort of contest in which even a man with nagging personal problems could excel. Villa, harangued for their fall from grace, could find their groove again. Steve Stone, who, since his £5 million move from Nottingham Forest, had been a disappointment, revelled in the space offered him. Merson set up Villa's second goal and Stone the third. A delightfully weighted chip by the former Arsenal and Middlesbrough forward gave Joachim time to job the goalkeeper. Stone's efforts were eventually rewarded when Dublin headed in a perfect cross.

Gregory, possibly embarrassed by the whole affair, sent in his first-team coach Steve Harrison to face the press. "Irrespective of the circumstances, we played some good football," he insisted.

Southampton's failure to impress this season is a puzzle. There was real anticipation that this time they would avoid the relegation scrap. The reason for the optimism was the pedigree of their forward line but pedigree has counted for little. Mark Hughes has failed to score all season and Egil Ostenstad, who was perhaps not fully fit, was lumbering and awkward and wasted some good chances.

"We've got to find an away win from somewhere," Jones said. But with Villa so short of confidence, that win should have arrived on Saturday.

ASTON VILLA (4-4-2): M. Borsch — S. Watson, G. Southgate, C. Caldwell, W. Whitt — S. Stone, I. Taylor, M. Draper (sub: P. Merson, 57min), A. Thompson (sub: L. Hendrie, 41 — D. O'Brien (sub: S. Barry, 90+1), J. Merson. SOUTHAMPTON (4-4-2): N. Mosey — S. Hay, K. Mortimer, C. Lundekvam, P. Collier (sub: D. Hirst, 72) — D. Hughes, J. Dodd, C. Marsden, M. Le Tissier — E. Ostenstad (sub: S. Popley, 85), M. Hughes (sub: F. Brown, 73). Referee: N. Barry.

Draper celebrates his first Premiership goal of the season

Lightweight Charlton lack consistent punch

MIDDLESBROUGH'S season has gone flat, but Bryan Robson might find satisfaction in the stillness. In each of his previous years as a manager there has always been a ghastly effervescence, with the club in a panic over relegation or clawing for promotion. Now, they can go placidly about the business of making other teams screech with fear and anxiety.

Robson's side are still to play the three contenders for the FA Carling Premiership title at home, with Chelsea arriving on Wednesday, Manchester United and Arsenal must also regard Middlesbrough as a likely impediment to progress in the championship.

Sport is supposed to stired nerves, but spells of tranquillity have their charm. Middlesbrough are reviving and another portion of last year's form was served to a contented crowd. The supporters will particularly have relished the lithe mobility of Hamilton Ricard, whose eruption of goals, with five in his past five appearances, explains the team's rise in recent weeks.

He gave Middlesbrough the lead over Charlton Athletic when he collected Brian Deane's header, shot against Richard Rufus and volleyed home the rebound. In the second half, Ricard took Robbie Mustoe's pass, paced to let his team-mate make his run and then returned the ball to the midfielder player, who notched the match's second goal with a sly kick.

The visitors could not intervene to

MIDDLESBROUGH 2
CHARLTON ATHLETIC 0

by Kevin McCarra

halt that move and, for much of the time, were barely present. It was only late in the afternoon, when Carl Tiller's header compelled Mark Schwarzer to make a good save, that Charlton registered. Yet, Alan Curbishley's team should have been making a boisterous, unholy spectacle of themselves.

How else is the club to stay in the Premiership? The self-effacing nature of this display was a puzzle, given that they had beaten West Ham at Upton Park only last Monday. Curbishley claimed that some of his players were still fired from the exertions of that victory and with four of their six remaining matches at The Valley, the team should soon find the will to start throwing punches again. The prize is great, since Charlton have a chance to alter their very status in football.

Curbishley believes that those who survive to contest a second season in the top flight and use the Premiership income to buy a batch of better players will then have a great advantage over the clubs that are promoted in subsequent years. The Charlton manager gives Derby County, Leicester City and Middlesbrough as shining examples of consolidation.

All the same, Curbishley is careful not to take the comparison too far. Steve Gibson, the Middlesbrough chairman, may give Robson £30 million to spend in the transfer market this summer. That is one piece of strategy Charlton will never be able to emulate.

MIDDLESBROUGH (3-5-2): M. Schwarzer — G. Dale, G. Palfrey, G. Cooper — R. Merson, P. O'Shea, A. Townsend, P. Gascoigne (sub: N. Middleton, 75min), D. Gordon — H. Ricard (sub: A. Armstrong, 75), B. Deane (sub: A. O'Neill, 68). CHARLTON ATHLETIC (4-4-2): A. Peterson — D. Mills, R. Rufus, C. Tiller, C. Powell — M. G. Stuart, M. Kinsella (sub: K. Jones, 82), J. Bann (sub: M. G. Stuart, 87), S. Brown, 87 — A. Hunt (sub: S. Jones, 67), M. Pingle. Referee: U. Horne.

THE BAA-BAAS ARE BACK

playing for the Scottish Amicable Trophy

At Twickenham, Sunday May 23rd

BARBARIANS WORLD XV v ALLIED DUNBAR PREMIERSHIP ONE CHAMPIONS

Watch one of the greatest Barbarian sides, boasting over 600 caps, confirmed players include:

JOOST VAN DER WESTHUIZEN (SA), THOMAS CASTAGNEDE (FR),

FRANK BUNCE (NZ), JAMES SMALL (SA), ZINZAN BROOKE (NZ), DODDIE WEIR (SCOT), JOUBERT (SA), IBANEZ (FR), PIENAAR (SA), ARBIZU (ARG) and many more of the world's greatest players.

This festival of rugby also features: Cornwall v Allied Dunbar Premiership Two Champions & Mini rugby Finals. Tickets available at £20 or £15 for adults, £7 for juniors

CALL THE 24HR CREDIT CARD HOTLINE ON 0171 344 4444

OR THE RFU TICKET OFFICE ON 0181 831 6666

Turn into News Direct 97.3 FM for exclusive news and updates on the match

Wright resurfaces to find little changed

FOR those obsessed with the crazy world of football finances, it must have felt like being one of the passengers who stumbled from the wreckage of The Last Train on television in the week, unaware that they had been in a state of suspended animation for 14 years: when it was not so much the big things that made them realise that something was not quite right — such as the fact that the world's population had all but been wiped out — but the small, like the absence of one last inspector lurking in the station rubble to check their tickets. Now that is really spooky.

So it was in the summer, when Manchester United's decision to pay more than £12 million for Dwight Yorke was less a barometer of an irreversibly inflated transfer market than the description in some quarters of the £700,000 fee that took Ian Wright to West Ham United as "nominal". A "nominal" three quarters of a million pounds? What would Alf Common, the first player to command a four-figure fee, have made of that?

So it was too at Filbert Street on Saturday, when an absence of goals rather than a glut of them enhanced the value of a match-winner instead of diminishing it.

That the best of several clear chances should fall to Wright, and be fluffed by him, seemed somehow inevitable. Forty-five minutes of reserve-team football after three months out with knee trouble have not been enough to sharpen his instincts and when Berkovic and Lampard combined neatly to present him with a clear opportunity 12 yards out, the West Ham substitute's third touch of the game had already sent the ball towards the seats behind Kasey Keller even before the Leicester City goalkeeper stretched to make certain with a fingertip save.

Having persuaded Wimbledon to pay £7 million for John Harrison — the awful truth of their predicament was down on the train survivors when they find out Wright's miss but also an earlier one by Lampard when one-on-one with Keller. Shaka Hislop, Keller's opposite number, was in top form, too, and needed to be as Leicester created the bulk of the openings, although not the best ones. Goalless yes, soulless no. But it is never quite as good without them.

But it is their own lack of firepower as much as Uefa's interference that has turned a highly promising season into an undignified scramble for an Inter-Toto Cup place. When Wright was hurt he was comfortably West Ham's leading scorer, with seven. Fourteen matches later he still is. They started the day as the fifth best team in the country, yet with a goal difference of minus six.

They ended it regretting not only Wright's miss but also an earlier one by Lampard when one-on-one with Keller. Shaka Hislop, Keller's opposite number, was in top form, too, and needed to be as Leicester created the bulk of the openings, although not the best ones. Goalless yes, soulless no. But it is never quite as good without them.

LEICESTER CITY (3-4-1-2): K. Keller — F. Sinicki, M. Elliott, R. Latham — A. Ince (sub: C. Miller, 63min), S. Savage, N. Lennon, S. Guthrie — A. Gunnlaugsson (sub: I. Marshall, 63) — E. Haslam, A. Conner.

WEST HAM UNITED (3-4-1-2): S. Hislop — S. Potts, I. Pearce, N. Richards — F. Sinicki, F. Campbell, S. Lennan, S. Minto — E. Berkovic — P. Wilson (sub: I. Wright, 71), P. D. Connolly (sub: J. Morrison, 87). Referee: J. Wignall.

MOMENTS before the main protagonists took the field, Rammy, the Derby County mascot, hurried over to the Nottingham Forest supporters, gesticulating wildly. The visiting supporters were ready for a dust-up with this half-man-half-ram, before he picked out a young lad in the crowd and invited him on to the pitch. The odd couple, both attired in their respective clubs' replica shirts, then proceeded to kick the ball to each other. Back and forth it went, without much care and attention, and so the afternoon continued unabated until shortly before 5pm.

Perhaps that explained, therefore, the decision of Horacio Carbonari, the Derby defender, selfishly to keep hold of the ball late in the game. It was an inspired one, as he weaved his way past Edwards and Cheltie before passing the ball into the net for the home side's winning goal. The moment was a conspicuous one, contrasting vividly with the previous 84 minutes of futile FA Carling Premiership football.

In fact, if Rammy's gesture with the young Forest fan was aimed at enhancing harmony between the two East Midlands rivals, it was the only thing that was not plagiarised by the players. They were tetchy and full of contempt, sometimes for members of their own team. The refereeing of Graham Barber added spice, too, for he made six unnecessary bookings in the first half. Russell Hoult, the Derby goalkeeper, and Richard Gough, of Forest, were also sent off by Barber, yet he ignored the juiciest incident.

Eleven minutes had gone when Pierre van Hooijdonk, the Forest striker, clashed with Vassilis Borbakis, the Derby midfielder. Borbakis was taken off on a stretcher to hospital, where it was revealed he had fractured a cheekbone. He will not play again this season, although Van Hooijdonk's fate is less clear. He clearly caught Borbakis in the face with his elbow and the pundits on Match of the Day were unanimous in denouncing Hooijdonk as the culprit, but others were not so sure his action was premeditated.

Ron Atkinson, the Forest manager, said that the incident did not look "too clever", and that he would watch a replay of it again before deciding whether to take disciplinary action. However, he then said: "The referee did not give a free kick, and he was booking people and getting their addresses out there. Was it deliberate?"

Jim Smith, the Derby manager, was even more supportive of Van Hooijdonk. "I think it looked worse than it actually was," Smith said. The Football Association yesterday maintained that it would wait to see whether the incident was noted by Barber in his report.

Van Hooijdonk may be innocent of this crime, but he is guilty of acting like a baby and sometimes playing badly. On Saturday, he managed both: after 75 minutes of unimpressive work, he was substituted and trudged off down the tunnel before making an early exit from the ground alone.

DERBY COUNTY (4-3-1-2): R. Hunt — J. Latham, P. O'Shea, A. Townsend, P. Gascoigne (sub: N. Middleton, 75min), D. Gordon — H. Ricard (sub: A. Armstrong, 75), B. Deane (sub: A. O'Neill, 68). CHARLTON ATHLETIC (4-4-2): A. Peterson — D. Mills, R. Rufus, C. Tiller, C. Powell — M. G. Stuart, M. Kinsella (sub: K. Jones, 82), J. Bann (sub: M. G. Stuart, 87), S. Brown, 87 — A. Hunt (sub: S. Jones, 67), M. Pingle. Referee: U. Horne.

NOTTINGHAM FOREST (4-3-3): M. Crossley — V. Louis-Mean, R. Gough, C. Edwards, T. Bonaker — C. Palmer, A. Johnson, A. Rogers — D. Fradette, C. Howdorth (sub: N. Shippey, 70), M. Greenwood (sub: Cheltie, 80). Referee: G. Barber.

NATIONWIDE LEAGUE: PROMOTION RIVALS JOSTLE FOR POSITION IN THE WAKE OF FIRST DIVISION LEADERS

Old rivals keep their pride intact

Norwich City 0
Ipswich Town 0

By RUSSELL KEMPSON

TO THE theme of "Shake Hands on Derby Day", Norwich City and Ipswich Town prepared thoroughly for the second of their annual East Anglian get-togethers. A mood of mutual friendship was fostered during the build-up, with the managers meeting publicly for tea, biscuits and good PR, and the players exchanged greetings before kick-off at Carrow Road yesterday.

Battle then commenced, in which the niceties and bonhomie of the previous week were instantly forgotten. It was a raw, full-blooded encounter, with many challenges on the limit of legality, and was concluded in an honourable draw. Neither set of supporters, who hurled insults at each other for much of the game, should claim bragging rights this morning.

Those in the yellow and green will still do so, courtesy of their 1-0 victory at Portman Road in October, but that will mean little should Ipswich secure the second automatic promotion place in the Nationwide League first division and return to the FA Cup Premier League after a four-year absence. The point gained on hostile turf pushed them back ahead of Bradford City in the pursuit of Sunderland, the leaders.

Apart from the essentially admirable self-control of the players, much of the credit for keeping the lid on a frequently fractious affair should go to Paul Taylor, the referee. He officiated with common sense, allowed the proceedings to flow whenever possible, and adopted an even-handed attitude rather than the arrogant posturing of some of his peers. The three cautions — Carey, Jackson and Bellamy, all of Norwich — were justified.

Unfortunately, Taylor erred in the fourth minute, when he stopped play for a foul by Jackson on Johnson. Had he waited just a fraction of a second and applied the advantage rule, he would have seen Stockwell collect the loose ball and run through on his own with only Green to beat.

The ref apologised to me at half-time, "George Burley, the Scowcroft, the Ipswich forward, left, fails to block this clearance by Fleming, of Norwich City, at Carrow Road yesterday

Ipswich manager, said. "He made a mistake. That's the way it goes sometimes."

Norwich made the brighter start but became increasingly indebted to Robert Green, 19, the goalkeeper, who was making his debut in place of the suspended Andy Marshall. He saved well from Johnson, twice, and tipped over a downward header from Johnson in the final minute that could have settled the outcome.

Inadvertently, Green also contributed to the premature exit of Jackson, his captain, when they clashed heads while in pursuit of the ball. Jackson was carried off on a stretcher, his nose splattered, but Green carried on.

Scowcroft wasted Ipswich's best chance in the first half, heading weakly at Green from Magilton's free kick, and Stockwell should also have done better when faced by the substantial yet solitary figure of Green. Norwich threatened only rarely and Ipswich's 25th clean sheet of the season was inevitable.

Burley has yet to win a derby at Carrow Road in five years and Ipswich have not won in Norfolk since December 1992, but the wider objective — to avoid defeat — had been achieved.

"The game was always going to be fiercely contested,"

Burley said. "I was disappointed not to win. At times, we looked like the home side. Still, we're back in second place and the others have all got to catch us."

NORWICH CITY (3-5-2): R Green — C Fleming, M Jackson (sub: L Marshall, S. Smith), M. Magilton — D. Smith, C. Carey, P. Murphy, S. Carey, E. Fuglestad — P. Delaney (sub: I. Roberts, 76), C. Bellamy. IPSWICH TOWN (3-5-2): R. Wright — A. Turner (sub: J. Curd, 53), A. Mowbray, M. Tanner — F. Wines, M. Stockwell, J. Magilton, M. Holland, J. Chapman — D. Johnson, J. Scowcroft. Referee: P. Taylor

Watford respond to Taylor's urging

Watford 2
Bolton Wanderers 0

By PETER ROBINSON

IT WAS not so much what he said as the fact that he was able to say anything at all. His voice was hoarse, roughened by an afternoon of furious activity on the touchline, his bellowing sometimes audible above the din of the crowd. He looked exhausted, elated and relieved — and there was a twinkle in his eye.

"It has been made very clear to the players what an opportunity this is," he said. "Why be frightened of it? It may not come next season, so you have to take it when it is there."

And what an opportunity, not merely to play in the FA Cup Premier League, but to make one or two old acquaintances eat their words. Words such as "turnip". That hurt, no matter how much you may laugh it off now, because it was unexpected, unfair, and because it was personal.

Graham Taylor has had years to get over that, but he has not forgotten it, nobody has, it remains an abiding image of his time as England manager. Lesser men would have been broken by it but on Saturday, there was Taylor, manager again of his beloved Watford, discussing the possibility of taking his team, in its first season in the Nationwide League first division, back among the elite via the play-offs.

Their third win in a row has given them a glimpse of glory. Bolton Wanderers were hammered, no question. But for the heroics of Steve Banks in goal they would have been five goals down at half-time, one save from Tommy Mooney, in particular, reviving memories of his great namesake, Gordon, joining Pele.

He saved a penalty, too, after just two minutes. Mooney again his victim. It took 23 minutes for Micah Hyde to break the deadlock and even Banks could do nothing to stop his 25-yard volley from reaching the top corner.

When Mooney scored at last, with a 52nd-minute header, the game was up for Bolton. They tested Chamberlain a couple of times but the Watford goalkeeper passed with flying colours. They were sluggish, almost morose, in contrast to Watford who ran like men demented — fearful, perhaps, of a rollocking from the tubby chap jumping up and down near the substitutes' bench.

WATFORD (4-3-3): A. Chamberlain — D. Beasley, S. Palmer, R. Page, P. Robinson — M. Hyde, R. Johnson, P. Kennedy — W. Wright (sub: C. Whittingham, 82min), T. Mooney (sub: A. Hazen, 88), A. Smart (sub: M. Ngwenigwe, 89).

BOLTON WANDERERS (4-4-2): S. Banks — N. Cox, A. Todd, P. Walters, R. Elliot — M. Johnson, C. Jones, P. Francis, R. Gardner — R. Taylor, E. Gudjohnson. Referee: A. Bailer

Francis has sights set on higher ground

Swindon Town 0
Birmingham City 1

By RUSSELL KEMPSON

ALL the portents suggested a feast of goals. Glenn Hoddle, the former Swindon Town manager and England coach, enthused in the match programme about Swindon's remarkable 6-4 win against Birmingham City in April 1993: the County Ground had witnessed more goals, 77, than any other venue in the FA Cup Premier League or Nationwide League this season; and the Swindon defence had been breached 21 times in their past seven matches.

Predictably, the opposite prevailed. Swindon and Birmingham huffed and puffed for 82 minutes, before producing a solitary score. Gary Rowett jumped alone at the far post, met Martin Grainger's free kick and beat Frank Talia with a header.

Amid the weekend's sporting extravaganza — FA Cup semi-finals, Grand National, Masters, Brazilian Grand Prix, Five Nations rugby, Naseam Hamed bout — the result held little significance. Birmingham won the right to take part in the end-of-season play-offs for first division and Swindon confirmed that they should escape relegation.

On a parochial scale, it meant a lot. Birmingham have laboured in the shadows of Aston Villa and perhaps now they are ready to play alongside them in the Premiership. The Easter blip of one point from a possible six had been erased from the memory and they were back on track for the big time.

"Second place and the automatic promotion place is probably beyond us but we're getting better and better," Trevor Francis, the Birmingham manager, said. "We've been consistent and I'm very pleased with our progress."

The blip — a 0-0 draw away to Crewe Alexandra and a 2-1 home defeat against Watford — had caused consternation in the blue half of Birmingham's second city. "It's always the same," Francis said. "One defeat and the club is in crisis."

Watson struck a post and Onuora and Howe were narrowly off target as the game swung to life, with Swindon pressing forward in the closing 15 minutes of the first half. Birmingham, resolute and reorganised after the retirement of Johnson at half-time, with a hamstring injury, bided their time.

SWINDON TOWN (3-5-2): F. Talia — G. Davies, G. Hall, C. Taylor — D. Linton, S. Howe (sub: M. Walters, 67min), R. Watson, G. Nash, I. Goodwin — I. Onuora (sub: C. Hay, 73), S. Bradley. BIRMINGHAM CITY (4-3-3): A. Proke — C. Rowett, D. Holdsworth, M. Johnson (sub: M. O'Connor, 46), M. Grainger — S. Robinson, G. Hyde, B. Hughes — J. McCarthy, D. Adeniji (sub: P. Nelson, 67), N. Forster. Referee: R. Funnell

Sharpe finish allows Jewell to launch charm offensive

Bradford City 2
Portsmouth 1

By MARTIN WOODS

THE fingernail stock plummeted once more around Valley Parade as Paul Jewell's promotion-chasing team were forced to withstand a second-half siege by Portsmouth, who had fallen behind to what Alan Ball, their spin-doctor-manager, called two flukes.

That the Bradford City man of the match was Ashley Westwood, the centre half, spoke volumes for the balance of power in the second period, but Westwood's manager also displayed laser-sharp defensive qualities when dismissing Ball's fluke-goals theory.

"I hope, over the next five games, we win by two flukes as well," Jewell, a man who identifies with Gary Player's golfing maxim that the more he practised the luckier he got, said.

It is already understood among the City supporters that this final sequence of games carries a health warning. The West Yorkshire derby against Huddersfield Town, on Saturday, and the final game of the season, away to Wolverhampton Wanderers on May 9, will, no doubt, age the average City fan by ten years. A small price to pay, they reckon, to return to the top flight for the first time in 77 years.

On Saturday, it was the City players who most resembled addicts waking up and setting about getting their first fix of the day. Without it, in City's case a goal, they are rather shambolic. It arrived after 25 minutes — Lee Sharpe the artistic creator, Lee Mills the executioner. Sharpe, despite his recent history of injury and enforced idleness, remains a thoroughbred and his signing, on loan until the end of the season, may yet prove Jewell's masterstroke. For the second week in succession, his liaison with Peter Beagrie promised much and delivered a goal.

Sharpe: headed goal

McCall found Beagrie on the left touchline. He delivered a sumptuous cross to Sharpe inside the box and his header sailed past Knight.

After the break, City fell into their baffling role-playing mode of a side on the verge of a breakdown. Portsmouth took advantage and pulled a goal back after 67 minutes through Durnin.

"Another disappointing performance — another victory," Jewell said. "We're not second in the league after 41 games by being flukey."

BRADFORD CITY (4-4-2): G. Walsh — J. Lawrence, D. Moore, A. Westwood, W. Jacobs — L. Sharpe, S. McCall, G. Whithy, P. Beagrie (sub: A. O'Brien, 80min) — L. Mills, D. Windass (sub: R. Blake, 71).

PORTSMOUTH (3-5-2): A. Knight — M. Robertson, A. Whitford, A. Asford, M. Vlachos, F. Simpson — J. Peron (sub: T. Thompson, 45), A. McLoughlin, S. Igoe — J. Durnin, S. Coddie. Referee: S. Barnes

Sunderland prepare to flush away lingering doubts

Sunderland 2
Huddersfield Town 0

By GEORGE CAULKIN

THE claim has not been tested yet, but it will. That the sewage system at the Stadium of Light is capable of flushing away 42,500 pints of liquid over the course of half-time seems an impressive statistic, until the consequences of Sunderland's next home game are considered. Something to celebrate, as they surely must, a crowd in excess of 4,000 and suddenly that lavatorial capacity may appear a little fragile.

Those who did not wear Wellington boots on Saturday have gained a valuable lesson well in advance of Sheffield United's visit in 12 days time. The blessed relief craved by the supporters, the players, an entire club geared towards a higher calling, is of a related nature: the closer they inch towards their inevitable promotion, the longer their remaining journey seems to stretch in front of them.

The floodgates might already have opened if Portsmouth had won away to Bradford City on Saturday, but finally, thankfully, tomorrow night may bring an end to the misery of suspended animation. Victory away to Bury would confirm Sunderland's return to the FA Cup Premier League after two years. The wait has been interminable.

"We're just desperate to crawl over that winning line now," Niall Quinn, a keen racing man, said. Quinn, who,

Non-League football 32
Results and tables 42

having won £2,500 for a local charity and a few bob for himself by backing the Grand National winner, knows a little about one-horse races. "Every time I've played against Bury it has been a tough game, but hopefully we can do enough to scrape through." Certainly, one would not dare to bet against it.

Quinn opened the scoring in this ordinary affair, courtesy of a diagonal through-ball delivered by the outstanding

Lee Clark, taken on his chest and flicked towards the target. Nico Vaseen, the Huddersfield Town goalkeeper, managed to get a touch, but it was insufficient to prevent the shot trickling over the line.

On another day, Kevin Phillips might have finished with the match ball, but on this occasion had to be content with his role in Sunderland's second goal, shielding a cross from Nicky Summerbee into the path of Allan Johnston, who volleyed from 18 yards in the 41st minute. The rest was played out on autopilot.

"There are no signs of nerves from my players," Peter Reid, the Sunderland manager, said. "They just keep rolling out the results. We know it's not going to be easy at Bury and they haven't got the best pitch in the world, but when these games come up, we seem to have what it takes."

SUNDERLAND (4-4-2): T. Sorenson — C. Mohr, A. Meville, R. Butler, M. Gray — N. Burn, M. Gray (sub: M. Bridges, 71min), L. Clark, K. Bell (sub: D. Hollaway, 71), A. Johnston — N. Quinn (sub: D. Butler, 71), K. Phillips. HUDDERSFIELD TOWN (3-4-3): N. Vaseen — S. Coddie, S. Jorries, C. Arm, M. Gray — S. Bailey, L. Richardson (sub: S. Hessey, 81), R. Edwards, J. Vincent — L. Lawson (sub: B. Thomas, 81), W. Allison, M. Stewart. Referee: B. Burns

Taylor's team-talk aids Orient cause

Leyton Orient 1
Cardiff City 1

By NICK SZCZEPANIK

AN inconclusive result on a day of similar outcomes at the top of the Nationwide League third division: Cardiff City remain in the automatic promotion positions, while Leyton Orient maintain their place among the play-off contenders. If anything, Orient can breathe a little easier thanks to the defeat of Plymouth Argyle at home to Brighton.

At least it turned out to be an eventful game after an unpromising opening half-hour when Cardiff's only attacking idea, a long ball in the general direction of John Williams, was one idea more than Orient had. Cardiff began to show their quality, however, and took the lead four minutes before half-time when Williams capitalised on a rebound from his own header.

Whatever Tommy Taylor, the Orient manager, said during the interval clearly roused his team — to the extent that he mused afterwards on the possibility of giving half-time talks before kick-off in future — and Lockwood's inswinging corner, headed in off his own crossbar by Eckhardt in the fifth minute, made a game of it.

The visiting team continued to play the better football and Williams set up an excellent chance that Carpenter wasted, but Orient nearly snatched it. Halworth parried Watt's shot at point-blank range, deservingly his luck when the ricochet off Baker bounced into his arms instead of the gaping goal: Taylor conceded that it would have been an injustice had Cardiff lost.

"We had more possession, but never used it," Frank Burrows, the Cardiff manager, said. "Teams are not going to lie down. Every game is going to be a cup final."

LEYTON ORIENT (3-5-2): S. Barnett — M. Joseph, D. Smith, S. Clark — A. Richards, W. Walsh, W. Smith (sub: S. Carham, 80min), M. Uno, D. McKinnon (R. Joseph, 73), M. Lockwood — S. Watt, C. Marshall (sub: J. Baker, 45). CARDIFF CITY (3-5-2): J. Halworth — J. Eckhardt, G. Mitchell, M. Ford — W. O. Salmon, D. Hill (sub: M. Bennett, 89), R. Carpenter — J. Power (sub: C. Middleton, 89), A. Legg — J. Bowen (sub: D. Thomas, 73), J. Williams. Referee: L. Cable

Not Bad, but no Thriller

Fulham 2
Wigan Athletic 0

By BILL EDGAR

THE Fulham juggernaut has become unstoppable. Made roadworthy by Mohamed Al Fayed and driven single-mindedly by Kevin Keegan, it showed on Saturday that it can even take a diversion into a carnival procession without losing momentum. The parading of Michael Jackson before kick-off might have distracted other teams, but not Fulham. The club's ability for self-promotion will be matched by promotion from the Nationwide League second division if Gillingham are beaten at home tomorrow.

Had he known of West Ham United's association with bubbles, Jackson might have chosen instead to watch them in honour of his pet chimpanzee. As it was, the Craven Cottage turf had the privilege of supporting the most famous feet in pop music, Fulham's owner having invited his friend to the game after showing him around Harrods earlier in the day.

Keegan, the Fulham chief operating officer, joined in the fun when it was suggested that some onlookers felt the special guest could have been a look-alike. "There are plenty of them that you can hire in London," he joked. Keegan added that Jackson, who wore a black, wide-brimmed tribal hat, was attracted to a picture on the wall that showed a Fulham team from the 1920s. "He was fascinated because they all had hats on like his."

Dick Knight, the Brighton and Hove Albion chairman, hopes to appoint Micky Adams, 37, reserve team coach at Nottingham Forest, as manager in time for the home game tomorrow against Shrewsbury Town.

Jackson's appearance was such a closely guarded secret that there was even scepticism about his authenticity on Al Fayed's own London-based radio station, Liberty, which, unhindered by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission, carries commentary on all Fulham's games. If Jackson's presence was incongruous, then Fulham are equally out of place in the second division. An utterly inevitable thirteenth consecutive home win was secured by second-half goals from two international defenders, Philippe Albert and Kit Symons.

The occasion appeared to induce stage fright in the visitors. Wigan Athletic have never won a league game in front of any five-figure attendance, let alone one containing a superstar. Liddell did hit a post early on, but his side lacked attacking ambition against a Fulham team that ground out victory without producing its familiar sparkle.

The home match against Preston North End should be Fulham's last at this level, and a familiar name will be there to see them off to the first division. One of Preston's regular defenders is named Michael Jackson.

FULHAM (3-5-2): M. Taylor — A. Symons (sub: S. Morrison, 80min), P. Albert, C. Coleman — J. Smith (sub: P. Poynton, 88), S. Finnan, S. Hayward (sub: N. Smith, 80), P. Todorov, R. Bennett — B. Haydon, G. Horsfield. WIGAN ATHLETIC (3-5-2): R. Carroll — P. McGibbon (sub: S. Green, 46), C. Greenall, S. Bulmer — C. Bradshaw, A. Porter (sub: D. Lee, 58), M. O'Neill, P. Rogers, K. Sharp — S. Heworth, A. Liddell. Referee: F. Stratton

IT'S LIKE WINNING THE "TRIPLE CROWN" THREE TIMES IN A ROW.

BRITAIN'S BEST BUSINESS BANK*

	1998/99	1996/97	1994/95
Allied Irish Bank (GB)	1st	1st	1st
Midland	2nd	5th	6th
Lloyds	3rd	3rd	5th
Barclays	8th	10th	10th
NatWest	9th	7th	9th

*Source: Forum of Private Business biennial surveys 1994, 1996, 1998.

Only Allied Irish Bank (GB) has won Britain's most prestigious banking award three times in a row. If you are the owner-manager of a successful, established business, we'd like to convert you to a better kind of banking. For more information, telephone John Kilty at Business Marketing.

CALL: 0870 6080216

Allied Irish Bank (GB), Bankcentre, Belmont Road, Uxbridge, Middlesex UB8 1SA.

Allied Irish Bank (GB) is a trade mark used under licence by AIB Group (UK) PLC (a wholly owned subsidiary of Allied Irish Banks, PLC), incorporated in Northern Ireland, Registered Office 4 Queen's Square, Belfast BT1 3DQ. Registered Number NI 18800.

Score with a FREE £10 BET

FOR FIRST TIME TELEPHONE CALLERS staking £25 or more today using SWITCH, SOLO or DELTA bank or building society debit cards. RING NOW! BET NOW!

0800 44 40 40

*Free bet is a £10 Correct Score bet on tonight's Leeds v Liverpool match. (Please place your bet and make your free bet selection within the same call.)

William HILL

PRICES SUBJECT TO FLUCTUATION. WILLIAM HILL FOOTBALL RULES APPLY TO OPEN A CREDIT ACCOUNT FREEPHONE 0800 289 892.

TONIGHT'S LIVE FOOTBALL

8/11 LEEDS v UTD
9/4 DRAW
LIVERPOOL 10/3

CORRECT SCORE	HALF TIME / FULL TIME	FIRST GOALSCORER
LEEDS 1-0 LIVERPOOL	LEEDS 1-0 LIVERPOOL	9/2 HASSELBANK (LU)
6/1 1-1	LEEDS 1-0 LIVERPOOL	5/1 SMITH (LU)
7/1 2-0	LEEDS 1-0 LIVERPOOL	13/2 OWEN (LU)
15/2 2-1	LEEDS 1-0 LIVERPOOL	7/1 FOWLER (LU)
11/1 3-0	LEEDS 1-0 LIVERPOOL	7/1 KEWELL (LU)
11/1 3-1	LEEDS 1-0 LIVERPOOL	12/1 BERGER (LU)
25/1 3-2	LEEDS 1-0 LIVERPOOL	12/1 BOWYER (LU)
8/1 0-0	LEEDS 1-0 LIVERPOOL	14/1 BENKAPPA (LU)
11/2 1-1	LEEDS 1-0 LIVERPOOL	20/1 HART (LU)
14/1 2-2	LEEDS 1-0 LIVERPOOL	8/1 NO GOALSCORER

Other scores on request. Best void if match not completed. Own goals do not count.

Prices correct at time of going to press. For the latest prices see CH4 TEXT P601/2/3

Other scores on request.

MOTOR RACING: McLAREN MERCEDES OF WORLD

IST FOR OPPOSITION IN BRAZIL

Hakkinen drives home advantage

FROM KEVIN EASON
IN SAO PAULO

JUST for a few magical minutes, it seemed that the world champion would show enough frailty to allow Formula One to revel in romance. Only the grumblings that have afflicted his McLaren Mercedes seemed able to prevent Mika Hakkinen from claiming victory in the Brazilian Grand Prix yesterday. He had swept around the Interlagos circuit over the past three days at a pace so clearly beyond his rivals that the 72 laps of the grand prix seemed mere formality.

But in Formula One, winning is never a formality and on the starting grid was a man with the willpower of Brazil behind him: Rubens Barrichello, successor to Ayrton Senna, the three-times champion. However, this world champion refused to be denied a tenth career victory. Behind him came Michael Schumacher, his Ferrari still not on terms with the speed of the McLaren, while Heinz-Harald Frentzen achieved an impressive second podium in his first two races for Jordan.

Eddie Irvine lived up to his promise of consistency, driving a steady and unremarkable race to fifth, enough to remain championship leader and keep Ferrari ahead of McLaren Mercedes in the constructors' table.

David Coulthard and Hakkinen had spent the weekend fretting that they might suffer more of the technical glitches that had put them out of the first grand prix of the season in Australia and their fears were to be realised as soon as the lights went out.

Coulthard's right arm shot into the air to signal he had stalled, a red tide of Ferrari sweeping past him to give chase to Hakkinen and Barrichello. Frentzen also burst past the Jordan Mugen Honda of Damon Hill, his teammate, who was to suffer another disastrous day after his first-lap exit in Australia.

As mechanics hurriedly pushed Coulthard's car back to the pits, Hakkinen appeared ready to stamp the authority on the race, drawing rapidly away from Barrichello and the rest of the field to a near two-second lead within three laps. Then, as the world champion passed the pit exit for the fourth time, he inexplicably cut off the power and Barrichello tore past to lead a race for the first time for Stewart Ford. Hakkinen, meanwhile, was forced to slot into third place behind Michael Schumacher, his old adversary, and the one driver he did not want to follow.

Hakkinen leads the rest of the field trailing as he drives his McLaren Mercedes to victory at Interlagos yesterday. Photograph: Gregg Newton/Reuters

It was a moment of ecstasy for the Brazilian fans, who have been galvanised by their countryman's emergence as a genuine contender in Formula One. Barrichello had spoken movingly yesterday about how he wanted to capture the imagination of his home country in the way Ayrton Senna did, but even he could barely believe the scale of support.

Fans came in record numbers to see the man they were dubbing "the new Senna". More than 2,000 policemen were drafted in to shepherd the near-100,000 spectators into grandstands with their flags and samba drums. As he passed around the circuit, set in a bowl with a magnificent view of his São Paulo hometown as a backdrop, he was followed by a Mexican wave of near-hysterical support.

His drive was as pulsating as it was nerve-wracking, but the writing was on the wall from the moment Johnny Herbert, Barrichello's British team-mate, ground to a halt with mechanical failure after 12 laps. The Stewart Ford's vulnerability cost the Brazilian dear last year and the car's breakdown, when his engine seized at the end of lap 43, ensured that he is still seeking his elusive maiden victory.

There was no comfort for Hill either. The race was barely under way when he made an ambitious attempt to dart down the inside of the Benetton of Alexander Wurz. Unfortunately, Wurz shut the door on Hill, with the result that they banged wheels, damaging the Jordan's suspension.

Coulthard's race also went from bad to worse. Starting three laps down, his McLaren started to develop more problems, preventing him from completing half the race. It was another depressing day for a man forced yet again to watch from the pit garage as his team-mate reeled off lap after lap. Having lost the lead once, Hakkinen was in no mood to make any further mistakes once Schumacher and Barrichello had their pit stops, leaving him a clear path to the chequered flag.

INTERLAGOS DETAILS

RESULT: 1. M. Hakkinen (Fin, McLaren) 1hr 38min 3.75sec; 2. M. Schumacher (Ger, Ferrari); 3. H-H Frentzen (Ger, Jordan); 4. R. Barrichello (Br, Stewart); 5. E. Irvine (GB, Ferrari); 6. D. Hill (GB, Prost).
QUALIFYING TIMES: 1. M. Hakkinen (Fin, McLaren) 1min 16.568sec; 2. D. Coulthard (GB, McLaren) 1:16.715; 3. R. Barrichello (Br, Stewart) 1:17.325; 4. M. Schumacher (Ger, Ferrari) 1:17.578; 5. G. Fisichella (It, Benetton) 1:17.710; 6. E. Irvine (GB, Ferrari) 1:17.842; 7. D. Hill (GB, Jordan) 1:17.854; 8. H-H Frentzen (Ger, Jordan) 1:17.902; 9. A. Wurz (Austria, Benetton) 1:18.354; 10. J. Herbert (GB, Stewart) 1:18.374; 11. R. Schumacher (Ger, Williams) 1:18.508; 12. O. Panis (Fr, Prost) 1:18.638; 13. J. Trulli (It, Prost) 1:18.684; 14. J. Agazzi (Fr, Sauber) 1:18.716; 15. P. Diriz (Br, Sauber) 1:19.184; 16. J. Villeneuve (Can, BAR) 1:19.377; 17. A. Zanardi (It, Williams) 1:19.452; 18. P. De la Rosa (Sp, Arrows) 1:19.579; 19. S. Sarrazin (Fr, Minardi) 1:20.018; 20. T. Takagi (Japan, Arrows) 1:20.088; 21. M. Gene (Sp, Minardi) 1:20.710.
CHAMPIONSHIP POSITIONS: Drivers: 1. Irvine 12pts, equal 2. Hakkinen and Frentzen 10; 3. Schumacher 7; 4. Wurz (Austria, Benetton) 1:18.354; 10. J. Herbert (GB, Stewart) 1:18.374; 11. R. Schumacher (Ger, Williams) 1:18.508; 12. O. Panis (Fr, Prost) 1:18.638; 13. J. Trulli (It, Prost) 1:18.684; 14. J. Agazzi (Fr, Sauber) 1:18.716; 15. P. Diriz (Br, Sauber) 1:19.184; 16. J. Villeneuve (Can, BAR) 1:19.377; 17. A. Zanardi (It, Williams) 1:19.452; 18. P. De la Rosa (Sp, Arrows) 1:19.579; 19. S. Sarrazin (Fr, Minardi) 1:20.018; 20. T. Takagi (Japan, Arrows) 1:20.088; 21. M. Gene (Sp, Minardi) 1:20.710.
Pole 1 Constructors: 1. Ferrari 18; equal 2. McLaren and Jordan 10; 4. Williams 7; 5. Benetton 3; 6. Stewart 2; equal 7. Arrows and Prost 1.

SPORT IN BRIEF

Tafi triumphant as Mapei dominate

■ CYCLING: Andrea Tafi, the Italian national champion, has won the third round of the 1999 World Cup series, the Paris-Roubaix Classic in Northern France (Jeremy White writes). Tafi's spectacular solo success followed a run of high placings in the brutal cobbled race, and came after he broke clear of the other pre-race favourites, 37 kilometres from the finish in the Roubaix Velodrome.

It was the third time in four years that Tafi's Mapei team had dominated the event as they again filled all top three placings. Wilfried Peeters, of Belgium, was second with Tom Steels, his compatriot, third. Andrei Tchmil, also of Belgium, the winner of the Milan-San Remo in March, reassumed leadership of the World Cup before the Liège-Bastogne-Liège Classic in the Belgian Ardennes, which takes place next weekend.

Radcliffe back to form

■ ATHLETICS: Paula Radcliffe has broken her British and Commonwealth 10,000-metre records after winning the European 10-kilometre Challenge in Bilbao. Radcliffe finished in 30min 40.70sec to take eight seconds off her record set when finishing second at the annual challenge event in Lisbon a year ago. The performance delighted the Bedford runner, who was disappointed after being placed only third in the world cross-country championships in Belfast last month, when she desperately wanted the gold medal.

Monnickendam's title

■ ROWING: Giles Monnickendam, from Nottingham, has taken the Soullers Head title. Monnickendam, a lightweight, started third in the 338-boat flutilla and overtook Guy Pooley, the 1992 winner (Mike Rosewell writes). Monnickendam also closed on Ian Watson, who took a last-minute decision to race after a lay-off because of a back injury and found himself leading off the field after Greg Searle, the 1998 champion, withdrew. Sue Appelboom finally became fastest woman, having finished second on three previous occasions.

Essex Met keep crown

■ NETBALL: Essex Met upset Middlesex 53-41 to retain the English Counties League title at Trent Park. Essex Met had to win by 11 goals to end the unbeaten run of Middlesex and capture the title on superior goal average. Judith Mann and Tracy Bartram stood out for Essex Met.

SCORING QUARTERS (Additions: Italy 15-12, 20-20, 31-38, 41-53; Middlesex: M. Buck 37/45, L. Scho 47; Essex Met: L. Law 34/42, T. Bartram 19/25).

Agassi resumes in front

■ TENNIS: Andre Agassi and Boris Becker will resume battle today in the final of the Hong Kong Open after three interruptions for rain yesterday. When play was suspended, Agassi was leading 2-0 in the third set and the players were level at one set each. They were meeting for the first time since 1995 and it may be the last as Becker announced this week that he will retire after Wimbledon.

Day delivers nap hand

■ RUGBY: England won the inaugural women's Five Nations Championship with an outstanding 83-11 victory over Wales at Swansea that included 13 tries. The England tries, including five for Sue Day, the Wasps winger, were breathtaking and all masterminded by Emma Mitchell, the new captain and scrum half. Three new players gained first caps and Emily Feltham, the wing, scored tries with her first two touches.

Woods laments defeat

■ ICE HOCKEY: Great Britain blew their chance of taking over the outright lead of pool B in the world championships in Denmark yesterday after a 3-2 defeat by Germany in Odense. Peter Woods, the Great Britain coach, felt his side should have come away with a point to remain unbeaten after opening with wins over Slovenia and Kazakhstan. He said: "We certainly played well enough to have drawn."

Spacey inspires Arsenal

■ FOOTBALL: Arsenal and Croydon, the joint leaders of the Premier League, secured home victories yesterday. Marianne Spacey scored a hat-trick and Faye White added two in Arsenal's 6-0 thrashing of Bradford City. Croydon, who have a match in hand with three remaining, had to rely on a second-half winner from Carmaine Walker to see off Everton 1-0.

Kawasaki's flying start

■ MOTOR CYCLING: The Kawasaki factory team, comprising Bertrand Sebléau, pictured above, of France, and Steve Hislop and Chris Walker, the British riders, completed a convincing victory in the Le Mans 24-hour race, the first leg of the world endurance championships. They finished ahead of two Suzuki teams: Dobe, Van den Bossche and Paillot, the French trio, and Rymer, d'Orgeix and Whitham, a Franco-British combination.

BASKETBALL

James laughs off Donewald's antics

BY NICHOLAS HARLING

OFFICIALS, opponents and even visiting supporters. They have all in time been subjected to the anger of Bob Donewald, the Derby Storm coach, until on Saturday when he came up with a protest of novelty value. He vented his ire on the foul count markers, knocking them down where they were stacked on the table of Bob English, the commissioner.

Donewald incurred his latest technical offence of a troublesome season as Derby lost 91-87 to Thames Valley Tigers in the first leg of their Budweiser Championship quarter-final play-off. Donewald stepped out of line midway through the second quarter as he complained about a decision.

Yet if anyone had cause for complaint it was the Tigers, who refused to succumb to provocation. "We haven't got the players who will mix it, just players who play hard," Paul James, the coach, said.

James had been taken to task by Donewald for taunting his squad by breaking an unwritten code of calling a time-out 14 seconds from the end of his team's league meeting two months ago. "I just wanted our fans to enjoy our victory," James said.

Yorick Williams returned from a seven-game ban but could not spark the Storm to victory. Nate Reinking, with 24 points, bettered Williams' tally of 19. Derby once trailed by as many as 11 points before levelling the score three minutes from the end.

Casey Arena scored 25 points for the Tigers, which included seven three pointers. Under the baskets, John McCord and Jason Siemon received significant help from Stuart Clark.

A 14-point haul to Peter Depesch in the first quarter inspired the Leopards to an 83-76 quarter-final defeat of Sheffield Sharks.

HOCKEY

Beeston find nothing but honour in draw

BY SYDNEY FRISKIN

A CREDITABLE 3-3 draw with Southgate at Trent Park yesterday was not enough to earn Beeston a place among the top four in the premier division of the National League.

After Diamond had converted a short corner in the seventh minute, Giles increased Southgate's lead two minutes before the interval from a pass by Simons.

Beeston's spirits were revived in the 42nd minute when a short corner, well struck by Keegan, led to a penalty stroke which Keegan himself converted, but Giles scored again for Southgate from a short corner in the 51st minute. Beeston hit back with a goal by Edington and another by Huckle.

The victory that Beeston were seeking would not have mattered, for Canterbury consolidated their position with a 9-2 victory over Guildford to make sure of fourth position. Mathews scored five goals for Canterbury, the first from a penalty stroke and the remaining four from short corners.

The top four teams, Can-nock, Southgate, Reading and Canterbury will assemble at Reading this weekend for play-offs, from which two teams will qualify for the premier division final at Milton Keynes on May 3.

□ A goal in the seventh minute of extra time from Claire Ferguson, the Doncaster captain, helped the Yorkshire club to retain their place in the premier division when they beat Aldridge 2-0 in the second leg of the play-offs.

Trailing 1-0 after the first leg, Charlotte Tomlin put Doncaster, the home side, ahead in the 39th minute when she drove full length to touch in a cross on the reverse stick, and Ruth Brooke set up the second when she broke down the left and found Ferguson, who put away the winner from close range.

BOWLS

Coupland shows that age is no barrier

BY DAVID RHYS JONES

AT a time when bowlers seem to be getting younger by the minute, the spectacle of Jack Coupland, who will be 85 in June, trotting up the rink in the quarter-finals of the national indoor fours championship at Melton Mowbray yesterday morning, was a sight for sore eyes.

Coupland, a retired engraver, was called up to play for Stuart Thomas's quartet when Leicester's regular lead, Les Storer, announced that his wife had booked a family holiday in Cote for the week of the national finals.

"I think I'd have killed her," Coupland chuckled yesterday, after enjoying an Indian summer of his own. "But I'm thrilled it gave me my chance to play at Melton."

On Saturday Coupland, who has been playing bowls for 50 years, and won the national mixed fours title in 1981, was in action for more than nine hours, earning admiration for his contribution to Leicester's wins over South Forest and Sunderland.

"I only wish I could have maintained my form today," he added, after Leicester went down, 24-17, to Chipping Norton, skipped by Les Gillett.

Gillett, who steered Banbury Borough to the equivalent outdoor title in Worthing last August, recently alleged that he had been attacked by his England team-mates after the international series in Bournemouth last month.

Aged 28, he made his mark when he won the International Open in 1997, and was The Times English Bowler of the Year in 1998 after reaching the national outdoor finals in all four events.

In the quarter-finals yesterday, Cumbria, the favourites, scraped home, 18-17, after Trevor Taylor, 23, their skip, played an inch-perfect draw to the jack with his last bowl on a tense extra end.

► You don't need to be Mika Hakkinen to enjoy fast, skilled, while-you-wait service for your Mercedes-Benz. Just call in at the CarExpress bay at your nearest authorised Mercedes-Benz dealer - and while you relax, routine work like oil service, tyres, exhausts and brakes can be professionally completed there and then. All at great value fixed prices, too.

How do you find your nearest CarExpress dealer? Just call. That's all.

Just call. That's all.
0800 665460

Mercedes-Benz

Five Nations Championship: Brilliant performance augurs well for World Cup campaign

Scotland players raise their arms in celebration after the final whistle heralded victory and the highest score by a Scottish team against France. Photograph: Charles Platiau/Reuters

FROM MARK SOUSTER IN PARIS

AS the Five Nations championships, Scotland can look forward to a future as bright as the orange shirts that constitute their gaudy change strip. By the time the World Cup comes around, and a full complement reports for duty, who knows what might be achievable. South Africa, who are in their pool, will have taken note. After their highest score against France, the superlatives rained down on a Scotland team that some are hailing as the best of all time. Premature, perhaps, but they have a legion of new admirers. Unlike its predecessors, what this team possesses is a talented three-quarter line and attacking ability that has set the benchmark in the championship, for which Scotland were 100-1 outsiders before hostilities began in February. Yet three wins out of four, an average of 30 points and four tries per match cannot be argued with. They came to Paris confident of victory and executed their game-plan with aplomb. It would not have been an injustice if they had scored 50 points. Previous Scotland sides had gifted individuals, but not the overall swagger with which their latter-day counterparts go about their business. In 1990, for instance, Scotland ground their way to success. Bill McLaren, who has witnessed fluctuating fortunes for Scotland for more than half a century, believes the Scots are on the verge of something special. "They are as good a Scotland side as I have seen, including 1984 and 1990. And it can only get better."

Resurgent Scots look forward to new era

One may question French commitment, yet their starting three-quarter line was the same one that shut the door on England at Twickenham. One had to rub one's eyes in disbelief at the eight-try spectacle that unfolded in a bewildering first 28 minutes. After Niamack's try, after a break by Thomas Castaignède that resulted in the injury that forced him to retire hurt after only two minutes, Scotland retaliated with venom.

Within five minutes Scotland had scored three times; Martin Leslie was first, after Logan's initial break and Tait's inside pass. From the restart Metcalfe countered 60 metres, Niamack just got back, but with a huge overlap on the right Tait trotted over. Four minutes later and Scotland were out of sight.

Townsend darted from a scrum and became only the fifth player to score tries in each round of the Five Nations. Suddenly, Scotland were 21-5 ahead.

Generally, France failed to read the lines of attack, the simple inside passes that set Grimes or either of the Leslies galloping into space, with Townsend looping in support and Tait waiting to finish the approach work. Scotland's angles of running, the ability to move the ball out of the tackle and keep it alive, were exemplary. In many instances, the catalyst from deep was Glenn Metcalfe, enjoying his best match for his adopted country. He made Tait's second try, which again stretched Scotland's advantage after Juliet had driven over, almost scored himself when just failing to outpace Niamack, and then threw away a try for Tait by delaying his pass a second.

France were not helped by the loss of Castaignède, who is expected to be out for two months, and Carboneau, about whom the prognosis is more bleak. Pierre Villepreux, the assistant coach, talked about injuries that had deprived France, but there was no excuse for a pitiful lack of spirit. For their part, Scotland can point to the absence of Tom Smith, Eric Peters, Dodie Weir, Bryan Redpath and Duncan Hodge at various stages this year. Villepreux also tried to make light of a first season without a championship home victory since 1957. He suggested that the players will "cancel this Five Nations and prepare for the World Cup. This was a bad moment for French rugby, but only a moment."

Dominici's try and Aucagne's penalty goal left France trailing 33-22 at half-time. Their forwards were starting to rumble and one wondered whether France could turn it around. Perhaps, if Niamack had not been held back by Tait when about to take Dominici's scoring pass, things might have been different in a second-half that was no less compelling for the scoring of only three points from Logan's penalty.

To be critical, Scotland then played a percentage game, forsaking the style that had served them well. Poor kicking by Armstrong and Townsend put Scotland under pressure, but they held firm and denied France a single second-half point. Gary Armstrong, the captain, said: "We are a good team building for the World Cup. We tipped them to be better goalkicking against Eng-

High Five is warning to superpowers

Throw away the form books because the last weekend of five nations rugby has confounded us all. France get the wooden spoon and Scotland win the championship. If you had tried to put money on this occurring three months ago you would have been able to name your own price.

I was enthralled with what I saw this weekend. And if any of the so-called superpowers of the Southern hemisphere think they are going to breeze past these teams in the World Cup, they had better book early flights home.

Scotland were remarkable, rattling up 30 points in even time against a French side that deserved last place. What has happened to the French? They were terrible in defence. It was as if they had decided to go on a tackling strike.

It has been wonderful to witness Scotland and Wales develop throughout this championship. They are playing adventurous rugby and being rewarded for persevering with it even though it has cost them important lessons.

The coaches, Jim Telfer and Graham Henry, have instilled the confidence and joy which so obviously comes from playing this sort of game. They deserve a lot of the credit for what has been a tremendous championship, as their teams have been involved in all the most exciting contests.

England must be a shattered unit after yesterday's defeat. They were very solid throughout without being great. Although it was probably their most adventurous outing in the tournament they still failed to finish the job after creating the foundation to do so.

Their inability to turn pressure, possession and territory into points has been a problem for some time and they have finally paid the price.

The English defence continually disrupted the Welsh into error. However, the pack as a whole were matched by a determined Welsh eight, surprisingly in the scrum.

Behind the Welsh forwards was Neil Jenkins. What a day he had! He kicked everything, including the injury time, match-winning conversion, but it wasn't just this that was so impressive. His reading of the play, passing, tackling and covering was a joy to watch. He really has come of age as a fly half. There may be more flamboyant No.10s, but there would not be too many coaches who would prefer someone else at fly half.

MICHAEL LYNAGH

He is so reliable - and I am not just talking about his goalkicking. He has often stated that his play doesn't get the credit it deserves due to the high-profile ability he has to kick. I know how he feels. He is a skilful player and, finally, he is being given the opportunity to demonstrate this.

So where does this leave the World Cup? France have to get their players fit so they can put their best outfit on the pitch, otherwise it could be embarrassing. Their coaching also has to be assessed. Their obsession with attacking the short side does not work, as it is so easy to defend. Sometimes it is not the players' fault, although the way they tackled on Saturday it was clear their hearts were not in it.

Ireland were unlucky throughout. They have to come up with some ideas of how to create tries other than the good old Garryowen. They were a big improvement on last year but they must become more creative and consistent.

Wales were the team to watch. They played attacking, well-thought out rugby using all the skills. If they continue to play like this they will be a handful for any team. Scotland were the big surprise. Great backs, who combined well with tough, uncompromising forwards in the typical Scottish tradition with some new modern skills thrown in.

England need to find the recipe of winning not only through outstanding defence but also with offence. For all their domination on the pitch, they didn't thrill or reflect this domination where it counts - on the scoreboard. Fine, but sometimes you need to take chances and with it comes the glory. Just ask Wales.

'Jenkins should get the credit he richly deserves'

Telfer: change of style

Jim Telfer was back home in Galashiels yesterday. He had joked about digging his garden but, rather than turning some old sods, he was watching the denouement of the Five Nations Championship from Wembley.

There have been times when Telfer has been regarded as a bit of an old sod himself. But even when players reeled off the training field, cursing his name, there has never been less than total respect for what he has done for Scotland, as player, captain, coach, director of rugby. At 59, Telfer says it is time to move on, to hang up the tracksuit - others are not so sure.

When the remarkable match in Paris was over and Scotland sat proudly on top of the table, John Rutherford said that he, Hugh Campbell and the players had asked Telfer to stay on as head coach. This was through no feeling of inexperience or inadequacy - Rutherford was an outstanding player and is becoming a fine coach, preparing Scotland's backs while Campbell looks after the forwards - but there is that intangible relationship between the trio that they do not want to let go.

Not that Scotland have done with Telfer yet. He reverts to his role as director of rugby for the Scottish Rugby Union in November, when the World Cup is over, but Saturday marked the termination of a 34-year association with the Five Nations. It began, neatly enough, against France in 1964,

Dictator who rules by consensus

David Hands reports on the Scotland coach's decision to take a back seat when Scotland shared the championship with Wales - an accomplishment that eluded them for the remaining six years of Telfer's career as an international.

Telfer's talent as a back-row forward was enough to take him on two British Isles tours, but the former rector of Hawick High School's global recognition has come as a coach - to Scotland and, in 1983 and 1997, to the Lions. In that role his sheer intensity frightened people; he bludgeoned players into accepting his diktat, but even amid a torrent of words, the technical accomplishment and analysis came through. When he spoke on Saturday of the way Scottish moves came to fruition, there was a sense of frustration that France's defence had not been more impenetrable, so high are Telfer's standards.

"Jim has changed since I was a player," Rutherford said. "He realises he is dealing with professional players and puts far more onus on them to make decisions. When I played, our club rugby was so bad that he had to lift players to international level by sheer force of personality." It did not leave much room for softer emotions and the most over-worked adjective in the lexicon for the coach was "dour".

But there has always been a dry humour to Telfer to alleviate the harsh demands he has always made of players, and even he could scarcely shift the smile that played across his features on Saturday. This was a Scotland side roundly written off by all but themselves before Christmas but which, given better goalkicking against England at Twickenham, might have won the grand slam.

"I never look at a team and think how good or how bad they are," Telfer said. "You just keep working away with what you've got." In that respect, this 1999 squad will live long in his memory. Few Scotland teams have attacked with the panache shown this season, although none will displace the 1984 grand slam-winning team from premier place in Telfer's affections. Then he was the sole coach and Scotland had not slammed anyone for 59 years.

"I take far more notice now of what players say, we discuss everything," Telfer said. "The players agreed that we needed to target three players - Castaignède, Carboneau and Niamack. There was nothing left for me to add. I'm a consensus man now."

APRIL
FA Cup Final
Chelsea v Leicester City
Sky Sports 1

MAY
Tetley's Bitter Cup Final
Newcastle v Wasps
Sky Sports 2

JUNE
Cricket World Cup
Semi-Finals and Final
Sky Sports 1

JULY
Pool World Championships
Sky Sports 2

AUGUST
Start of US Open
Tennis Championships
Sky Sports 2 and 3

SPORTS 1

SPORTS 2

SPORTS 3

SPORTS
NEWS

*Exclusively in digital with SkyDigital

Five Nations Championship: Gibbs's injury-time try produces pulsating finish

King Henry of Wales foils English dreams

THEY were calling Graham Henry the great redeemer before this international season began. Maybe the age of miracles is still here after Wales, against all but their own expectations, concluded their temporary tenancy of Wembley yesterday with a victory so dramatic that few could have believed it, even though they were among the 78,000 to witness it.

Ninety seconds of injury time had already been played when Chris Wyatt, a giant in the Wales lineup, tapped down one final ball and Scott Quinnell embarked on an arcing run into midfield. Scott Gibbs hit his No 8's pass hard and straight, the power of his run reminiscent of his bullocking displays for the British Isles in South Africa two years ago; it carried him past four flailing England defenders and over the line for a try that brought his side within one point of their opponents.

Neil Jenkins had still to kick the conversion but the one certainty of a sunlit afternoon was that the Pontypridd fly half would not miss. Nor did he. Wales led for the only time in the match and England's hopes of the grand slam and the Five Nations Championship drifted away, roared into oblivion by thousands of exultant Welsh throats.

By DAVID HANDS
RUGBY CORRESPONDENT

England, indeed, had cut their own throats. Three tries in the first half had given them a 25-18 interval lead, Wales staying in the match only through Jenkins's immaculate goal-kicking. But they failed to achieve any degree of superiority among the forwards and made mistakes under pressure that cost them the match.

The first was when Lawrence Dallaglio elected to kick into the corner with seven minutes remaining, rather than give Jonny Wilkinson a kick at goal from 36 metres. Had Wilkinson kicked the goal, England would have been nine points clear but the youngster did not have the chance. Neil Back had earlier knocked on in his own 22 under no pressure, paving the way for Wales's first try; and Tim Rodber was judged to have shoulder-charged Colin Charvis in a dangerous manner, conceding the territory from which Wales scored.

Yet who would deny them their triumph? Henry, not quite walking on water as he fought his way through the hordes, has turned them into a superbly competitive team with a furious belief in themselves. Even when they conceded a series of scrums through knock-ons and turnovers, they never faltered in the pursuit of Henry's game-plan — to play at pace, to pull England about the field and try to crack the defensive white wall.

Howarth's try at the start of the second half proved they could cross the England line and brought them level. That Wilkinson's third and fourth penalties nudged England ahead again gave England no right to assume they had done enough; in fact, so narrow an advantage seemed to send England back into their shells and tied them into an inaccurate kicking game.

It was all so different from the start of an absorbing game played, despite the yellow cards awarded to Jason Leonard and Rodber, in a splendid spirit. Within three minutes England had shredded the Wales defence. Mike Catt looped wide to create the space for Matt Perry, whose diagonal run beat Brett Sinkinson and Charvis, and launched Dan Luger on a 25-metre run to the posts.

However, Jenkins's goal-kicking never allowed England to stretch away but more important was the parity Wales achieved in the set-pieces. Where England might have squeezed them out, they found themselves rebounding on Welsh buffers and, curiously, there was little contest for the ball at the lineout, even though Wales used only two targets. Wyatt and the younger Quinnell.

Wyatt is hoisted high above Johnson to win clean lineout ball, a phase of play in which they achieved marked dominance

It did not seem to matter, such was the solidity of the England defence, and the second quarter was no more than a minute old when they scored their second try. Rodber and Richard Cockerill exchanged passes at the lineout. Wilkinson carried play into the shadow of the Welsh posts and Steve Hanley, winning his first cap at 19, came intelligently onto Catt's pass to score, his leap to the skies an expression of youthful pleasure. Wilkinson, though, missed the relatively simple conversion, though he had to wait another hour before discovering how costly such misses can be. Back, though, should have known better than to concede ten metres for dissent, since it brought Jenkins within range of the posts, his penalty drawing Wales level.

Yet it was a subdued Wales who trooped off at half-time. Thomas and Howarth, running back to collect Matt Dawson's deft chip, collided and the ball ran free for Richard Hill, who crashed through Mark Taylor's tackle for the try.

Whatever Henry said at the interval, Wales should bottle it for export. Back's knock-on conceded the scrum from which Jenkins dispatched so accurate a pass that it beat three defenders and gave Howarth space to score. Then the nerves kicked in. Twice England seemed to have broken clear, only for their own mistakes to haunt them, notably when Luger ignored Bar-

Ireland take the spoils in no-win situation

Ireland 39
Italy 30

By KARL JOHNSTON

WARREN GATLAND's comments the previous day about a "no-win situation" proved to be prophetic after Ireland had defeated Italy at Lansdowne Road on Saturday. His team had beaten Italy for the first time since 1988, coming from behind to do so, and had managed to avoid what would have been a fourth successive defeat, yet in the Irish Sunday newspapers phrases like "lacklustre performance", "hollow victory" and "meaningless win" abounded.

Certainly nobody will regard this success as a renaissance. The team as a whole performed very poorly, especially in the first half, but they did haul back a 12-point deficit, held their nerve when Fabio Roselli's try and Diego Dominguez's conversion left Italy only four points adrift four minutes from full time, and outscored the opposition by five tries to three.

It is true that an Ireland pack that was hailed as the best in the business at the start of the international season has ended up looking more like a collection of Celtic kittens, rather than tigers. And it is equally true that the backs offer little threat, especially in midfield.

The lack of self-belief that affects this Ireland squad was to the fore in the opening few minutes on Saturday, when not only was Dominguez's kick-off knocked on, but the next two restarts were similarly fumbled. That first knock-on led to Walter Cristoforoletti's try, scored after just 48 seconds.

With the exception of the sometimes over-enthusiastic

Results 43

Trevor Brennan, the odd piece of invention from Dion O'Cuinneagain and some useful charges by Peter Clohessy, the Ireland pack failed to dominate, frequently playing second fiddle to the likes of Cristoforoletti, Mark Giachery and the hugely impressive Orazio Arancio. Eric Elwood had a satisfactory return to the international stage and he was directly involved in three of the tries, brilliantly creating one try for Justin Bishop.

After a wayward and error-strewn first half, whatever advice Gatland had given his charges during the interval worked in the second period, when some deft touches were evident in the tries scored by Conor O'Shea and Girvan Dempsey. Still, the deficiencies remain, and the composition of the party to tour Australia this summer will be very interesting.

SCORERS: Ireland: Tries: O'Shea 2 (43m, 73), Dempsey (55), John (63). Conversions: Elwood (17, 40, 46, 61). Italy: Tries: Cristoforoletti (48m), Roselli (25), Roselli (79). Conversions: Dominguez 3. Dropped goals: Dominguez 2 (11, 24). Penalty goals: Dominguez (21). SCORING SEQUENCE (Ireland first): 0-7, 5-7, 5-10, 8-10, 8-13, 8-16, 8-23, 11-23 (half-time), 16-23, 19-23, 22-23, 29-23, 34-23, 34-30, 38-30. REPLAYS: C. O'Shea (London Irish), J. Bishop (London Irish), K. Mages (Barn), R. Henderson (Worcester), J. Ball, D. Duggan (Dundrum), G. Dempsey (Dundrum), E. Elwood (Galwegians), C. Stally (UCS), J. Fitzpatrick (Dundrum), R. Heasdale (Newcastle), K. Wood, H. Harquess (55), P. Clohessy (Young Munster) (59), P. W. Wallace (Saracens, 55), P. John (Saracens), J. Davidson (Cardiff), T. Brennan (St Mary's College), D. O'Cuinneagain (St Mary's College), D. O'Cuinneagain (St Mary's College), A. Ward (Bath), 41). ITALY: J. Perilli (Roma), F. Roselli (Roma), G. Piro (Matera), L. Martin (Siles), R. Roselli (Matera), M. Roselli (Padova), D. Dominguez (Stade Francaise), A. Tronconi (Treviso), G. De Cade (Roma), A. Roselli (Treviso), F. Propaganda (Treviso), M. Giachery (West Hartlepool), W. Visser (Treviso, 7), W. Cristoforoletti (Treviso), R. Roselli (Treviso), S. Padovani (54), M. Giachery (Treviso), S. Padovani (Treviso), S. Padovani (Treviso), S. Padovani (Treviso). Referee: F. Galt (France).

Poor decision proves crucial Jenkins converts to a great

In what has been an extraordinary season, when they have kept their followers on tenterhooks against France, frustrated them against Scotland and Ireland, given cause for celebration only to have it taken away in the final breath against South Africa, the Wales team still refused to let them feel at ease. There was one more agonising moment left in the final match of the season.

It was left to Neil Jenkins, whose temperament needed to have been of made of steel, to put those fluttering hearts to rest. His conversion of Scott Gibbs's try in the second minute of injury time gave Wales a victory that had seemed well beyond their reach. That the game should have arrived at such a climax and that Wales denied England their grand slam was, in large measure, England's own doing.

They will reflect that from the moment they scored the opening try after only two minutes, and the many other opportunities that came their way, that they failed to put the contest beyond Wales. The England dressing-room would have been a forlorn place yesterday evening.

There can be nothing worse for a team than, with so little time to spare, not to have the opportunity to regain a lead that had been so convincingly theirs from the start. At no

Gerald Davies says England should have put the match beyond Wales

time did they relinquish the lead except when it mattered most. The England players sank to their knees behind the posts knowing that the chance had gone.

For 80 minutes and more they led the charge and yet it came ultimately to naught. In the midst of that bewilderment they will cast their minds back to the 76th minute. England were given a penalty when the score stood at 25-31, but Dallaglio and Wilkinson chose to ignore the kick that would have put England more than two scores in front of their opponents and sealed the contest. Instead, they kicked to the corner for a lineout and left Wales with a glimmer of hope that Gibbs took four minutes later.

That this failure was of England's own making will not be lost on Graham Henry, the Wales coach, who has imbued in his team a stiff resolve. The perspicacity of the New Zealander has created hope where there was little and renewed a sense of purpose when it all seemed to have seeped away. Other Welsh teams would surely have knuckled under England's onslaught.

This time last year Wales had suffered two record defeats against France and England. Later in the summer they lost to South Africa by a margin that was a mere three points short of a century. Now their self-respect has returned and also, I suspect, the respect of others.

Yet, if finally it had been Wales' glorious moment, this was, in truth, Wales could not break the discipline of their opponents' defence, where the collective effort of their powerful back row consumed everything Wales attempted to throw at them.

Whereas Wilkinson, Hanley, Catt, on a couple of occasions, and Luger broke clear of the fragile Welsh defence, the home team managed to do so only on the two occasions that they scored tries. Otherwise, they fell into the welcoming arms of Hill, Back and Dallaglio, with reinforcements arriving in the shape of the estimable Rodber.

But if the sporadic Welsh attacks were rarely consistent, and liable to mistakes, it was from one of these that victory was ultimately and dramatically achieved, bringing the Five Nations Championship, in its final season, to a memorable close.

THE supreme irony within England's last-gasp defeat by Wales yesterday was that a rare England loss was contrived from a match in which they scored the greater number of tries. Thus it was that the last points scored in the last Five Nations championship match of the old millennium were struck from the boot — not the boot of a trusty England fly half, like Rob Andrew or Paul Grayson, but that of Neil Jenkins, later lauded by Graham Henry, the Wales coach, as the finest of all kickers.

That is high praise indeed, for Henry has spent many an afternoon witnessing Grant Fox, the New Zealand points accumulator par excellence, kick opponents into submission. "I have never seen a kicking display better than that," Henry said. "If the posts had been two metres apart, instead of ten, Neil Jenkins would still have kicked all his points. The team showed a huge amount of character in a close game. If you don't have that, you have got nothing."

Jenkins's haul, a flawless eight from eight, made England suffer for their ill-discipline — particularly in the first half. The Welsh No 10 had hoped to concoct a tonic for his grandmother, who has been ill, yet he stepped forward to strike the killer blow without a care in the world.

By JULIAN MUSCAT

"I didn't think about a great deal," he reflected. "I imagined I was back in the practice paddock, to be honest. I was just thrilled for the team to come through against a very good England side."

Lawrence Dallaglio, the England captain, wore a vaguely haunted look that betrayed his inner turmoil. He stood defiant, talking, again, about England's inability to convert numerous half-chances in the second half.

A similar anchor undermined the team against France three weeks ago, yet, on this occasion, two new players in Barry-Jon Mather and Steve Hanley had been added to the mix. "I felt we created enough chances to win the game comfortably," Dallaglio said. "We have got to look again at why we're not converting them. Our ill-discipline in the first half kept them in the game and I thought that we let them off the hook."

The more expansive game embraced by England, in contrast to their chosen gameplan in previous matches this year, did not pay dividends. Dallaglio appeared impervious to the detail that running backs thrive on the familiarity of ball in hand; that half-chances will be squandered until what once seemed like narrow avenues become yawning gaps to those most often exploring them.

So it was that Jenkins, for years feeding from scraps behind an ordinary Welsh scrum, missed out the three men outside him to float the immaculate pass by which Shane Howarth, Wales's excellent full back, was able to advance, unchallenged, to the England tryline with the referee's shrill whistle all but lingering from the second-half restart.

More evidently shell-shocked by the reverse was Clive Woodward, the England coach, whose reaction neatly amplified what most English supporters were thinking. "I still won't believe we lost this game when I wake up in the morning," he said, "but we have got to accept it. "We turned over too much ball, but you sometimes have to take a real kick in the guts before you can go forward. Perhaps we need to learn this really harsh lesson before the World Cup [in the autumn]."

As for Scott Gibbs — the Wales centre, who burst through England's tired defence to score the late try that gave Jenkins his match-winning chance — he was typically modest. "We didn't play particularly well and, at times, there were too many mistakes," he said. "England have an awesome defence and it took a long time to break it down."

SEPTEMBER
Ryder Cup Golf
USA v Europe
Sky Sports 1

OCTOBER
Super League Grand Final
Live from Old Trafford
Sky Sports 1

NOVEMBER
South Africa v England
1st Test
Sky Sports 2

DECEMBER
FA Cup
3rd Round
Sky Sports 2

JANUARY
Worthington Cup
Semi-Finals
Sky Sports 2

skydigital
the home of sport
www.skydigital.co.uk

MONDAY MATTERS

Time catches up with a boxing great who refuses to acknowledge the final bell

Hearns trapped in hollow ring

It is the early hours of Sunday in Manchester and fighters ancient and modern are still doing the business in the Arena. Naseem Hamed, the self-proclaimed Prince of Boxing, has finished his own gruelling struggle to overcome his fellow Yorkshireman, Paul Ingle. Now, he is ringside, watching a legendary competitor who is back answering the saddest call in the profession: fighting beyond his prime.

Asking Thomas "The Hitman" Hearns, once a world champion at six weights, to fight on the undercard to Hamed is like asking Michael Schumacher to drive in support of Eddie Irvine, or asking Zinedine Zidane to do the running for Didier Deschamps. Hearns is fighting as a professional before a British crowd for the first time, at the age of 40. He wins, over 12 uncombative rounds, against another former champion, the declining Nate Miller, from Philadelphia, but the 18,500 audience has dwindled to next to nothing.

Hamed is ringside, watching but simultaneously conducting business on his mobile, shaking hands, raising the left hand he says was broken in the 11 rounds against Ingle.

What he was witnessing was the inevitable ring of truth, that time waits for no man. In August, Greg Norman has shown the sportsman's compulsion to return to a place, a course, that stripped him of his dignity a couple of years ago. But that was without the dangers that go beyond a man's ego, the dangers that do not need spelling out in connection with prize-fighting. Hearns stepped into the ring in a daffodil yellow gown but there is not much of spring left in him, and little of the primal beast that he once was. As the millennium approaches, boxing remains a legal exercise and continues to stimulate excitement among men, and women. Jane Couch, the leading woman boxer, was among those at ringside and was on her feet in anticipation when Ingle managed to bloody the nose and threaten, albeit transiently, to dethrone The Prince.

For a moment it appeared that Ingle—who endeared himself to many with his statement "Naz may have his Lamborghinis and Ferraris, but I've got two whips and a ferret"—could dramatically close the gap. It had been an evident gulf, indeed, for while Ingle had layer upon layer of courage, Hamed seemed, in the early rounds, to be a man gifted with extraordinary feline reflexes and an altogether more rapid transmission from brain to fist.

As that bout wore on, courage, almost to the point of threatening Ingle's own physical well-being, came mighty close to equating the accumulation of stinging, hurtful, but less than concussive blows of Hamed. For this, Ingle pocketed £300,000, and it is not likely that Hearns, prolonging a career long past its bedtime, accepted less. Yet he swears that money is no longer the motive. He is looking for respect, though heaven knows he earned enough for five lifetimes.

As one of nine children to a Detroit mother, Hearns won 155 amateur contests and a further 59 victories in the professional ranks. Using extreme dieting techniques or carbohydrate loading, he shuttled up and down weights covering a range of more than three stones.

Still in his corner, having been there for the remarkable 21 years in which Hearns contested 21 world title bouts, is Emanuel Steward. The same trainer is now involved with Hamed and gave this salutary verdict: "Naseem up to now has gotten away with it with his speed, strength and youth. Now he is beginning to fight younger, tougher guys, and he is needing to change to a more durable way of fighting."

Durability, alas, has now eluded Hearns. After Hamed was made to appear more fallible than he likes to believe, a sadness dwelt on

The Hitman. The weight never used to be apparent around his waist; the torso never used to wobble when hit; his punches did not sound like hollow slaps. He is a man groping through memory, and if Steward has any real influence, he should terminate the compulsion now.

The music does not hit the right soul notes any more. A dozen years ago, the only time I witnessed Hearns in his prime in the flesh, Diana Ross and The Three Degrees heralded his entrance. Dennis Andries, a Guyanese out of Hackney, was knocked over five times in ten rounds that were savage, raw, frightening evidence that Hearns, that day fighting for the world light-heavyweight title well above his natural weight, was possibly the most debilitating puncher in the business.

"What a wicked fight!" Hamed had said in the Manchester Arena near midnight. He had meant it as a tribute to Ingle, but it had echoes of the past.

Wicked had been the failure of anyone in the corner of Andries to spare their man the damage from his own reluctance to stay down when hit by The Hitman. And wicked, indeed, is the spectacle of that same Hitman now harning himself. "I wouldn't encourage a boy to start a professional boxing career," Hearns had said after the Andries beating. "If I had known what boxing was all about before I started, I don't reckon I'd start." Now he cannot finish.

Hearns left Manchester repeating that he wants respect, wants two defences of his new title, and will then team up with Steward, training youngsters to follow in his footsteps. The cycle, ultimately, is one of sad glory.

ROB HUGHES

'He wore a daffodil yellow gown but there is not much of spring left in him'

Hearns cuts a sorry figure as he listens to advice from his corner during the late-night bout that few stayed to watch

10 months' Sky Sports FREE

when you subscribe to Sky World for 12 months.

Sky World packages range from £27.99 to £29.99 per month. £30 connection fee.

including

Chelsea v Leicester City

in their Premiership clash on Sunday 18th April

Call 08702 42 42 42 (ref ME 281)

or visit your SkyDigital retailer today, to get installed in time for the game, exclusively live on Sky Sports 1.

Offer closes 25th April 1999.

skydigital
the home of sport

www.skydigital.co.uk

Digital satellite system required to watch Sky Digital. Subscribe to Sky World with any Sky Digital Entertainment pack for 12 months and get Sky Sports 1, 2 & 3 free for the first 10 months. You will therefore only pay for Sky Movie World with your chosen Sky Digital Entertainment Pack for the first ten months (prices currently range from £22.99 to £24.99 depending on which Sky Entertainment Pack you choose). Thereafter you will pay the prevailing price for the option that you are receiving. This offer does not include Sky Box Office or any stand-alone premium channels which must be paid for separately. Subscription prices include VAT and may change; see subscription contract. Programmes/channels subject to change. Sky may refuse applications for this offer at its discretion. Offer not available to existing Sky customers or their households, nor to pubs, clubs or other similar establishments. This offer is not available with any other Sky offer. Subscribers must be 18 or over; eligibility subject to status. For further information, call Sky.

Fowler can find wider fame by acting out his fantasies

What does a footballer do once the Football Association's disciplinary machine has chewed him up, spat him out and packed him off on a long suspension to reflect on his terrible misdeeds? Heads for the silver screen, of course. Could it be that a long and prosperous career in the movies awaits Robbie Fowler?

It is a path taken already by two of the game's worst miscreants. Eric Cantona filmed his debut role in Le Bonheur est dans le Pre while serving a nine-month ban for flattening a Crystal Palace supporter. Last seen mumbering a few hon-hon-hons in the Oscar-winning Elizabeth, Manchester United's most celebrated bad-boy will shortly be seen in a boxing movie with Mickey Rourke.

Vinnie Jones won more critical praise for his thuggery in Lock, Stock and Two Smoking Barrels than for his suspension-marred efforts for Wimbledon, Leeds United and Wales. "You're the champ," Dustin Hoffman told him at the premiere of the gangster film, and Jones will be back doing what comes naturally again soon. How long before the former bad-boy turns Oscar winner?

Even if Fowler's acting talents are found not quite to stretch to the big screen, there are always the television studios and the opportunity of a lucrative chat show, as Ian Wright, another of the baddest men on planet football, has shown. Even Gary Lineker went all controversial for the sake of enlivening his television career, as anyone who has seen him cracking blue jokes on They Think It's All Over will vouch.

So the solution is obvious

Matt Dickinson suggests an alternative stage for banned striker for the Anfield striker as he contemplates a longer summer holiday than expected thanks to the FA's overzealous disciplinary machine. Get himself a movie agent and wait for the scripts to flood in.

Mike Leigh will surely be able to find a part for a Scouse scally in his next council estate drama. A sacked Liverpool dockworker, perhaps, who dislikes gays and has to suffer terrible rumours about drugs.

The serious conclusion to it all is that there is money, and a career far beyond football, to be made out of a reputation for controversy, so the Liverpool and England striker should look on the bright side as he contemplates his six-match suspension.

The FA may have attempted to make an example of him, to say that there is no place for his kind of mischief and to make sure every footballer sees the line of good behaviour. The rest of the world takes a rather different view and will await his next goal celebration with eager anticipation.

Supporters love controversy. Sponsors pray for it, provided it is kept within reason, and the game should hope for it too. "It is bad for the image of football," say the officials, but there is no more overused or misguided argument. Punch-ups, rows, feuds, spats, arguments and bad jokes about drugs are what football people love, otherwise the press would not write about them with such relish. It is half the fun, maybe more.

In a few years' time, if not already, Fowler's line-sniffing will be celebrated as a piece of brilliant individualism. "I see other footballers out there, and I don't want to name names, but I think they are in danger of becoming robots," Tony Adams said in these pages on Saturday. "You get this guy who suppresses all his feelings because he is fearful of the press and you don't show any emotions." Someone with only a passing interest in football will hazard a guess that Adams was referring to Alan Shearer, England captain, brilliant goalscorer and expert at sitting on the fence. Shearer's stonewalling is now so mannered that it has almost become a standing joke, yet in the dressing-room, he is known to be a spiky character, as willing to speak his mind and play a practical joke as any. Put on stage in front of hundreds of young supporters last week at the Match of the Day Live show at Birmingham's NEC, Shearer was witty, charming and good-humoured. He even raised a laugh.

For reasons best known to himself, though, he prefers to play to the image that he spends his spare time creating the fence. It is a largely wholesome ideal that has earned him millions, but thank goodness there are also footballers who do not mind exposing a little of themselves, sometimes more than they perhaps intended. Sport is about personalities as well as players.

One such is Fowler, who is now paying for it dearly. Of course he deserved punishment for his distasteful taunting of Graeme Souness, but the four-match ban and £32,000 fine for his line-snoring goalscoring celebrations suggest that he is being judged for who he is—a troublemaking rebel—rather than what he did, which was stick two fingers up at some Everton fans. Anyone who went out and took cocaine after that is beyond help already.

There is a strong expectation now that Fowler will not appeal against his sentence. The club want him to serve his time immediately, and the FA has made dark noises about increasing his penalty should he dispute it. But fight on, he should. It might not do his immediate football prospects any good, but all the controversy will certainly be good for his movie career.

THIS SPORTING WEEK IN THE TIMES

TOMORROW: Cricket 99 - a free 16-page guide to the season, including the launch of the Fantasy World Cup game.
WEDNESDAY: Are Sunderland and Fulham celebrating the first promotions of the Nationwide League season?
THURSDAY: Who, at last, is heading for Wembley? Reports of the Manchester United-Arsenal FA Cup semi-final replay.
SATURDAY: Danny Baker, Gary Neville and Simon Barnes.

TELEVISION HIGHLIGHT

With 32,000 runners preparing to take to the streets of the capital in the Flora London Marathon next Sunday, Leviathan (BBC 2, Wednesday, 7.30pm) takes a timely look at the classic origins of the race. Chris Eubank, the former boxer, is an elegant if idiosyncratic choice of presenter for the feature, which traces the race from the battle of Marathon 2,500 years ago to the modern Olympic Games.

حكاية من الراحل

LYNNE TRUSS

News of Robbie Fowler's ban and fine are a reminder of life on another planet. I was just getting ready to criticise the arrogant Scotti McCarron for apparently smirking over Greg Norman's misfortunes on the 12th on Saturday, when an uninvited vision of Fowler pointing his bottom at Graeme Le Saux threw it into a more normal perspective.

You get used to a different kind of etiquette at a well-run golf event like the Masters, where patrons, even on practice days, are told to "set pagers to vibrate". Broken bodies are almost never hurled at the players here, you know. Homophobic abuse of an obscene nature is kept to a minimum. And as far as I know a chorus of "Who ate all the pie?" has never been heard in the vicinity of John Daly, despite the arguable justice of the comment.

In fact, spectators here are given pretty strict behavioural guidelines in a special message from "Robert Tyre Jones Jr" (Bobby Jones), reprinted annually in the Spectator Guide. First written in April 1967, this message explains that it is "appropriate" to "applaud successful strokes in proportion to difficulty, but excessive demonstrations by a player, or his patrons are not proper because of the possible effect upon other competitors."

He goes on: "Most distressing to those who love the game of golf is the applauding or cheering of misplays or misfortunes of a player. Such occurrences have been rare at the Masters but we must eliminate them entirely if our patrons are to continue to merit their reputation as the most knowledgeable and considerate in the world."

Even if you set aside the special etiquette of golf, what happened to the old idea that American fans trample over the sporting sensibilities of the world? Somehow I grew up with the idea that Americans were bad sports, but either I have been in the wrong places, or it simply is not true.

At the National Indoor Arena last week, British Davis Cup fans had no compunction whatever about celebrating every American double fault, at Madison Square Garden last month, when Evander Holyfield fought Lennox Lewis, British fans booed the Star-Spangled Banner, and intimidated the locals (no mean feat, to intimidate New York fight fans).

Clean-cut American soccer supporters had various rude awakenings at their World Cup first-round matches last summer, not least a full-scale political rally at Lyons staged by expatriate Iranians that made the faint, collegiate cry of "U. U. USA!" look decidedly small potatoes.

Here at the Masters, the interest in — and support for — international players has been emphatic and heart-warming. Seve Ballesteros is an adopted son; so are Nick Faldo and Bernhard Langer. Colin Montgomerie is welcomed warmly, and Ian Woosnam's caddy, Wobbly, met his wife in Augusta, you know.

Ask anybody. The message seems to be that charisma goes rewarded, wherever it comes from. And where there is unfortunately no charisma to speak of (in the case of Olazábal), sympathy for stoicism in adversity is called on to compensate. Adoptive favourites this weekend have been Olazábal and Norman, and you cannot tell me that bad feet and shocking shoulder respectively did not come into that.

Suffering alone is not enough, however. Perhaps deliberately soliciting the sympathy vote — or to make himself sound more interesting, after his record run of consecutive birdies — Steve Pate revealed to The Augusta Chronicle on Sunday

a whole catalogue of personal misfortunes that make chronic foot career, and it seems that they now speak of Pate and the coyote in the Roadrunner cartoons in the same breath. Had the crowd known all this, they might have cheered him all the more. But as it was, they cheered him for his birdie-birdiebirdie-birdie-birdie-birdie-birdie, which was nice.

Oddly, Norman denied he was getting special treatment from the fans on Saturday. Standing under a tree outside the clubhouse on Saturday evening, as shadows lengthened across the course, he said it was untrue that he had been singled out; that you could hear them cheering other players on other holes as well.

The truth is, however, that the two things cannot be disentangled. Every time Norman toughed out, every time he showed nerve and resolve, his performance was bound to be assessed entirely in terms of his famous blow-up three years ago. Had he laid those ghosts, or were they thumbing their noses at him yet again?

On Sunday morning, I have to say, we were as taut as piano wire here at Augusta. Monty might win, or Ernie Els (my tip), or that nice Davis Love III. More than anyone, however, we wanted Norman, because the sight of that poor bloke rolling on the 15th green in despair (while managing to keep his hat on) was something we could not bear to see repeated. Like the sight of Robbie Fowler pointing his bottom, it is an image once seen, never forgotten.

August figures provide real sense of occasion

The weight of history and tradition are handled effortlessly at Augusta, of course, but you can't help wondering how the club will continue to cope in another 50 years, when a bit more history has accrued. By then, you see, the like Pond, the Founders Circle, the Nicklaus Plaque and the Hogan Bridge will be jostling for attention with the Norman Bunker, Couples Corner, and the Woods ... er, Wood. Not to mention all those little wayside shrines to Seve in the bushes. Is there room for more tradition in this place, or is it all filled up? That's my only worry.

Already, whenever an Augusta National visitor spots a circular break in the perfect grass they rush to take a look at it, assuming it commemorates yet another famous moment in Masters history. And whoever Sprinkler was (Jeff Sprinkler? Bobby Sprinkler?), he must have done a lot of exciting things on this particular golf course.

Snead (left), Sarazen and Nelson prepare to tee off on the first day

new to Augusta, I'd been feverishly wondering whether the poor old fellas were expected to trudge off down the hill to complete 18 holes, while a hundred younger blokes snapped impatiently at their revered heels. Once I realised it was just a ritual of striking the ball, I could relax. And it was great. What a way to start a tournament. As he took the tee, Snead said: "Oh, I just try to keep up with Gene." (Lots of laughs.) He was then introduced as the man with the best golf swing of all time; at which he said, mock-dolefully, looking at the driver in his hand, "Well, that oughta do it."

One day, of course, an octogenarian Nick Faldo will appear on the identical tee with a cheery wave, and golf fans yet unborn will assume he was always a free and easy bloke who liked a laugh. The precision mowing will be the same, likewise the wisteria around the clubhouse, the green-jacketed officials and the wafting smell of that leathery bacon they have in America that is nothing like the proper bacon we have at home. But people will cheer in the same manner and it will be just as lovely, a ceremonial event. Especially when, as in unbroken previous successive years, Seve Ballesteros, that lovely old jokesmith, clears his throat ("Ahem! Oh, my apologies") just as Faldo makes his backswing.

Norman marches back over the Hogan Bridge to the 12th tee after losing his ball in the Asiatic jasmine

Blooming bushes deny search party

The futile search for Greg Norman's lost ball at the 12th on Saturday afternoon created an interesting scene. Any green-fingered observer who had assumed the azaleas and dogwoods were held in high esteem by the golfers at Augusta was in for a nasty shock as Norman and Lee Janzen, together with caddies and officials, tore urgently into the bushes as if searching for a bomb. So much for the glorious horticulture, eh? As they manhandled the Asiatic jasmine, it was like watching someone brutally body-search your maiden aunt: you half-expected the bushes to cry out, "Unhand me, sir!"

Nobody wanted Greg to fall foul of the five-minute rule, yet to see someone at this elevated level lose a ball was highly consoling, not to mention hilarious. As they trampled the pine-straw — digging into the bush, shaking it, and all but pulling it out by the roots — I inwardly cheered on behalf of all who have ever spent two or three hours in the long grass tearing their hair out and yelling "Look, it can't have just disappeared."

As he completed his round, after a great comeback on the 12th, where he got a two with his second ball, and the 13th, Norman was still saying: "I'd just like to know what happened to that ball." To which one can only say: Join the club.

Just in passing
I met a woman on Friday who used to have her hair cut by Darren Clarke's wife. Really. On Wednesday I met a man who knew a man who lived next door to Jeff Maggert's caddy. It was that sort of week.

If I'm honest. Leaving the golf aside, the Masters was a bombardment of inconsequential details and unanswered questions. Why was Ian Botham sitting outside the clubhouse on Tuesday? Why were so many men either smoking (or fiddling with) big fat cigars? Why was a man trying to sell Beany Babies to the passing traffic beyond the gates? Did he sell any? Even of Maple, the Canadian bear, a rare item?

Personally, I was very touched to see, at a nearby filling station, a large display of drinks tins arranged to spell out "WE MISS JACK" — referring, presumably to the absent Nicklaus. Sadly, I mentioned this affectionate tribute to a colleague, who suggested: "Perhaps he used to buy a lot of petrol." Which rather ruined the effect.

Magic moments make Wyer the envy of riders everywhere

A lot of my enthusiasm for this year's Grand National ended at the last flight in the race before, the Mariell Aintree Hurdle, and with a shot that the Grandstand cameras never showed. The race was over hurdles, those smaller and flimsier obstacles over which a horse seldom falls. They are, though, with their high wooden bar and their tendency to spring back, the worst-designed obstacles in the history of equestrian sports.

Veneta Williams, a great admirer of mine, had entered an untried horse called Stretarez in this elite race. This, I thought, was typically audacious. This sort of thing is just not done. But she is a lady who knows what she is about. Alas, the race developed in the way it was expected, with a stirring duel between the brilliant Istabraq and the giant French Holly. Stretarez nowhere. Then news came through that he had fallen at the last and had been put down.

At once, the bubbles went out of the day. It was that faint whiff of personal involvement that did it. I could see the merriment of this attempted coup against tradition: I know a little of extraordinarily meticulous preparation that goes on in the Williams yard. To run a horse in a jumping race is always a serious matter, and always one with a hint of gaiety about it.

That is why it is always such a blow when a horse is injured or killed. It is the champagne glass dashed from your lips, it is hearing some serious and depressing news in the middle of telling your favourite joke. It is a hard one for television to cope with, too: the clichés don't work. All you can do is put over the facts, leave a moment's pause, and kick on. It is this, the proximity of frivolous joy to most serious death, that gives the edge to National Hunt racing. I am never quite at ease with it.

Perhaps no one ever is. The Grand National is an almost hysterical occasion: longed for and dreaded. It takes a lot to worry a jump jockey, but they feel a terrible mixture of physical terror and stage fright, two things that bring out extreme performances in humans and animals.

Trainers and owners who have prepared all year or all their lives for this event, feel that strange last-minute dread. They said so again and again during the build-up: I again during the build-up: just hope he comes back safe. The viewer is entitled to finally emerges after Becher's Brook second time round. There was a brief glimpse of some X-certificate mayhem, and then Blue Charm emerged as the day's hero, lobbing along in front with such delightful ease that you could hardly believe the disasters he had left in his wake.

It must be wonderful, then: the terrors tamed, the horse in a rhythm, jumping strongly and nothing left to do — especially on an outsider — but to revel in your luck and your horse. Oh brave old world, that has such creatures in it.

Blue Charm was caught on the run-in, and so the story of the day was the Carberry family and the swinging from the rafters, a great piece of television, destined for much re-running. But those tracking shots of Blue Charm said everything about the good bits of National Hunt racing. I am sure that it was not just me who wished to change places with his jockey, Lorcan Wyer.

I bet many people who have never sat on a horse in their lives felt the same thing: tasting with television's perfect vividness the horse and rider's mutual delight in the conquest of deadly danger.

Eudipe was killed after the mayhem at Becher's. General Wolfe got round, so did Suny Bay. Part of me never got over the unseen fall in the hurdle race before; and another part will always envy Wyer and the long minutes of fulfilment over the final dozen fences. The hardest thing in the world: and for those two or three minutes, it was easy.

AIR MILES (over time you spend) Accepted at 16 million outlets worldwide

Over 1000 outlets. Call 0800 610 646 (Mon-Fri, 9am-6pm Sat)

NatWest (MasterCard) the preferred card of Jordan Grand Prix.

NatWest

THE CLOSING DATE FOR APPLICATIONS IS 9th May 1999. One AIR MILE* for every £20 spent. Excludes advances, the purchase of foreign currency or travellers' cheques, interest and other charges. Credit is only available to persons who are over the age of majority and is subject to status and conditions. Written quotations are available upon request. The APR for the NatWest Combined Card Account for new cardholders only, where the MasterCard and Visa Card are held is 13.9% for Purchases (and Balance Transfers) and 15.7% for Advances (including Balance Transfers) including the purchase of foreign currency and travellers' cheques (includes a cash handling fee of 1.5%, minimum charge £1.50). The 30% quoted are calculated on a credit limit of £1,000 and one on the basis that no annual fee is payable and the interest for the NatWest Combined Card Account is fixed at a rate of 1.00% per month until 31st May 2000. After that period the annual fee, currently £12 for the Account, will be immediately payable and the monthly rate will revert to the then current NatWest Combined Card Account rate. If your outstanding balance on your monthly statement is less than £5, you must pay it off by the date shown on your statement. Otherwise you must pay the greater of £5 or 2% of the balance. There is an administration levy of 2.75% of the amount of each foreign currency transaction. Until 31st May 2000, the cash handling fee may vary. From 1st June 2000, the monthly interest rate, the annual fee and the cash handling fee may vary. AIR MILES and the flying boot logo are trademarks of AIR MILES International Holdings N.V. AIR MILES are held and issued for use subject to AIR MILES Customer Terms & Conditions and NatWest AIR MILES Scheme Terms & Conditions. We may monitor and record your phone calls with us in order to maintain and improve our service. Registered Office: 41 Lombury, London EC2P 2BP. Registered in England number 3290227. Ref. No. 20194

Visit the new British bookshop on the Internet.

It's easy to reach. Simply use your mouse to transport you to www.bol.com where you'll find discounts of up to 40%.

At BOL you have access to a global selection of 4 million British and international titles.

BOL has been created by book lovers who have been at the heart of the book world for a long, long time.

Be sure to visit this exciting new chapter in book shopping now.

www.bol.com

The new British bookshop on the Internet

CRICKET

England suffer fresh setback to World Cup hopes

FROM RICHARD HOBSON IN SHARJAH

SHARJAH (India won toss; India bt England by nine runs)

FOR the third time in five days England slipped to defeat, albeit a narrow one, under the floodlights here yesterday and each successive loss raises more concern a month ahead of the World Cup.

India displayed greater composure under pressure and England are now certain of finishing bottom of the Coca-Cola tournament even if they beat Pakistan tonight.

Much of the game followed the pattern of the previous meeting last Friday which India won by 20 runs. After losing the toss England conceded the batsmen for the majority of the innings, only to suffer in the closing stages before losing wickets at the head of their reply.

A target of 240 on another low, slow pitch would not have troubled a side playing at its peak. Confidence is draining rapidly from this squad, however, and none of the top order seemed less at ease than Alec Stewart, the captain. He has now gone 17 one-day internationals without a half-century.

Playing and missing with indecent regularity, he was finally put out of his misery when Srinath won a leg-before decision two runs in 21 balls. As events transpired England had every reason to be grateful to Ganguly for dropping Knight at slip with the left-hander on 12.

While Knight recovered to pull and cut audaciously, scoring 50 of the first 70 runs, a succession of partners carried less conviction. Wells, who had replaced Croft, hit Prasad for a straight six only for the bowler to accept a return catch in the same over, and the experiment of using Ealham to swipe early boundaries failed as a misunderstanding with Knight resulted with his being run out.

When, four overs later, Hick fell to alert wicketkeeping by Mongia, stumped down the leg side attempting to sweep Kumble, England were precariously placed at 66 for four, facing elimination from a tournament envisaged optimistically as a vehicle to raise morale ahead of the World Cup which starts on May 14.

A further problem emerged over the weekend when Alan Mullally, one of the few players to finish the recent Carlton and United tournament in Australia with his reputation enhanced, reported a side strain. England have taken the precaution of registering the injury with the International Cricket Council (ICC) in case he fails to respond to treatment.

The 15-man squad has been told that, except as signed by April 26, Tim Lamb, the chief executive of the England and Wales Cricket Board, delivered the terms yesterday when he arrived ahead of an ICC meeting to discuss World

Stewart sets off for the pavilion after his latest failure as the India fieldmen congratulate Srinath, the successful bowler

Cup issues. Including wages paid by their counties, each player stands to earn around £60,000 by winning in the final on June 20. Lamb said that the terms were not negotiable.

He arrived at the CBF Stadium as India were beginning to accelerate. That their innings started slowly had much to do with Angus Fraser, the replacement for Mullally. His first spell of eight overs cost 15 runs and figures of one for 24 from ten tested to the virtues of line and length regardless of conditions.

After Gough had bowled Ganguly between bat and pad, Fraser confused Ramesh with a ball that rose a little more sharply and the attempted pull looped towards Wells at wide mid-on. With Kambli, attempting to rebuild his international career after alcohol problems, succumbing to a fine running catch by Hick off Ealham, England might have thought they could restrict India to below 200.

However, Jadeja, standing in for the injured Azharuddin as captain, has proved himself an imaginative leader of the side. A decision to promote Srinath realised dividends with the fast bowler striking 28 from 29 balls and Dravid moved through the gears to reach 69 before Fairbrother ran him out with a direct hit.

The final thrust came from Jadeja himself. Seemingly a step ahead of Stewart's bowling changes, he struck seven fours in an unbeaten 74 from 67 balls. After taking three wickets in his only over two days earlier, he had made another enormous contribution.

Thorpe scored the bulk of the runs in a stand of 53, but Jadeja set clever fields to stop Fairbrother generating a rhythm at the crease. A fine delivery by Prasad eventually removed the Lancashire batsman and, two overs later, Austin became his third victim when he was bowled attempting a lusty heave through mid-wicket.

Thorpe started to look for boundaries rather than nudge singles but with 36 required from the last four overs the element of risk continued to grow. After scoring 79 from 87 balls he went down the wicket to Joshi, missed and was stumped. Gough raised hopes of an improbable win by driving Srinath for six but in the same over Fraser was run out.

Thorpe scored the bulk of the runs in a stand of 53, but Jadeja set clever fields to stop Fairbrother generating a rhythm at the crease. A fine de-

LINKS
WEBSITE: www.ukcricket.org/
TELEVISION: Sky Sports 2, 12 noon, live

Australia give Bichel one-day chance

ANDY BICHEL was called into Australia's one-day squad to face the West Indies as a last-minute replacement for Adam Dale, the swing bowler, who is in bed with pneumonia.

Bichel received the call just 30 minutes before he was going to fly home after his involvement with the Test squad. Dale, an asthmatic, has been ruled out of at least the first two of the seven one-day matches with West Indies.

Steve Waugh, Shane Warne and Geoff Marsh, who form Australia's selection panel, named a strong batting lineup for the first match of the series, in which Australia bowled out West Indies for 209 in St Vincent yesterday.

West Indies have drafted Viv Richards onto their World Cup management team after he proved a secret weapon for them in the recent 2-2 drawn series with Australia. The involvement of the 47-year-old former captain, who will be asked to help out with the batsmen, apparently follows his contribution during the third Test when he visited the home dressing-room many times, talked to the players and motivated them as the West Indies claimed an eventual one-wicket success.

The players welcomed Richards' contribution and asked Pat Rousseau, the president of the West Indies Cricket Board, to talk to the former batting legend about being officially involved in the Cup campaign. After discussing it with his board and the team's management, Rousseau made the invitation which Richards accepted.

SCOREBOARD FROM SHARJAH

INDIA		ENGLAND
S Farnesh c Wells b Fraser	12	N V Knight b Kumble	84
S C Ganguly b Gough	2	T A J Stewart lbw b Srinath	2
R Dravid run out	53	V J Wells c and b Prasad	7
V G Kumble c Hick b Ealham	23	M A Ealham not out	7
J Smith c and b Hick	29	G A Hick at Mongia b Kumble	1
A Jadeja not out	74	P P Thorpe at Mongia b Joshi	79
R R Singh c Fairbrother b Gough	18	A Flintoff not out	2
N R Mongia not out	1	N H Fairbrother b Prasad	16
Extras (lb 2, w 2, nb 4)	8	D Gough not out	2
Total (50 overs, 50 balls)	239	A R C Fraser run out	1
S B Joshi, A Kumble and B K V Prasad did not bat		Tales to 1, lb 4, nb 3	8
FALL OF WICKETS: 1-16, 2-16, 3-61, 4-120, 5-149, 6-207		Total (48.5 overs)	200
BOWLING: Gough 10-2-49-2, Fraser 10-3-24-1, Austin 7-0-49-0, Flintoff 10-3-43-0, Ealham 10-0-41-1, Hick 3-0-13-1, Wells 2-0-18-0		FALL OF WICKETS: 1-26, 2-41, 3-55, 4-66, 5-125, 6-131, 7-184, 8-188, 9-219
		SCORING: Srinath 65-0-54-1, Prasad 10-2-35-3, Kumble 10-2-29-2, Singh 50-25-0, Joshi 9-0-54-1, Ganguly 4-0-17-0, Jadeja 1-0-2-0
		Umpires: K J Francis (St Lanka) and D B Har (Australia)
		D B Har (Australia)

Warrington suffer at hands of Wigan walking wounded

Wigan Warriors.....24
Warrington Wolves.....10

By CHRISTOPHER IRVINE

ST HELENS remain two points clear at the top of the JJB Super League with the only 100 per cent record after Warrington Wolves had their unbeaten run brought to an end in a game of contrasting halves at Central Park yesterday.

It was only after Wigan Warriors had surged 18 points clear in 35 minutes that Warrington offered genuine competitiveness. Two quick strikes after the resumption rattled the home side, who got back on track when the imperious Andy Farrell landed a fourth goal to add to a superb earlier try.

Farrell and Jason Robinson, filling in at half back, were evidence of the injury problems at Wigan. These worsened when Haughton and Johnson were helped off and the side concluded the last ten minutes with 12 players.

"Last year we hardly had any injuries. Now we're picking up a couple a week," John Monie, the Wigan coach, said. With Kris Radlinski forced to sit out his first game for two years, Monie was delighted with the performance at full back of Wes Davies, grandson of Billy Boston, whose full debut contained enough electric bursts to draw the odd parallel with the legendary Wigan wing.

In the first half, Warrington never managed a clean break and Wigan's first two tries were scored from acting half back, the first by Reber and the next by Connolly after the visitors had been penalised for holding down in the tackle.

When in possession, Warrington lacked creativity and their defence was found wanting again as Farrell's dummy prised a gap down the right. With the line 40 metres away, no-one was going to deny the Wigan captain his first try of the season, which he converted from the touchline.

Warrington had shipped too many points to get back on equal terms, but as Lee Briars began to direct operations, Huntie claimed the scrum half's kick to the left corner for their first try. When Briars ran the ball on the last tackle, smart handling worked Roach over on the opposite wing.

Farrell reasserted Wigan's control after Duffy was caught ball stealing. His one slip was a missed conversion of the final try. His one slip was a missed conversion of the final try. His one slip was a missed conversion of the final try.

SCORERS: Wigan Warriors: Three: Reber, Connolly, Farrell; Moore, Goals: Farrell (4). Warrington Wolves: Three: Huntie, Roach, Goals: Briars. WIGAN WARRIORS: W Davies, P Johnson, S Connolly, L Garscor, D Moore, A Farrell, J Robinson, N Cowie, M Reber, T Maslow, M Cassidy, S Haughton, D Bain, Substitutes: B Garscor, M Smith, R Ball, T O'Connor. WARRINGTON WOLVES: L Penny, J Roach, T Koke-Love, A Hurst, M Forster, J Duffy, L Briars, M Hinton, D Farrer, D Murray, S Garscor, I Koke, M Whymant, Substitutes: G Chambers, S McGuire, D Busby, D Hanger. Referee: S Prosser (Castleford)

Andy Farrell: inspired form

Gregory blue as Reds fade Eagles prey on Rhinos

Salford Reds.....17
Castleford Tigers.....29

By A CORRESPONDENT

VULNERABILITY in mid-field, where the tackling became increasingly fragile, cost Salford Reds their fifth consecutive JJB Super League defeat at The Willows yesterday, after they had established an 11-point lead after just half an hour. In the end, the superior pace and power of Castleford Tigers decided what was a lively contest.

With only four victories in 23 Super League starts, Andy Gregory, the Salford coach, was understandably disappointed after witnessing such an encouraging start by his side. "My job isn't on the line," he insisted. "I'll be here until the end of the season. If we start winning, then who knows what will happen?"

A crowd of 3,663, little more than half of the number for Salford's two previous home fixtures, were right to be enthused by their side's initial onslaught which, deservedly, brought tries for both Stuart Little and Neil Baynes, and goals for Steve Blakeley and Carl Briggs.

It was then that Danie Orr, the Castleford half back, began to stamp his authority on the proceedings. His scorching break and long pass gave Michael Eagar his sixth try in three games and, just before the break, he initiated a superb touchline move involving Francis Maloney and Adrian Vowles before Richard Gay ripped past Paul Carige to score.

Brad Davis sent Maloney hurtling in under the posts soon after the break. Orr then kicked his third goal before adding a penalty and, although Joe Palmato collected Salford's third try in a rare breakout, Castleford pulled even further away with a superb score, created by Orr for Jason Flowers. Further goals from Orr and Ian Tonks added to the visiting team's tally.

With four victories from five games, Castleford are now enjoying their best ever Super League start. Much harder tests await them, however, and they are conscious that they will have to play better than ever to sustain their good run of form.

SCORERS: Salford: Three: Little, Baynes, Palmato, Goals: Blakeley (2). Dropped goal: Briggs. Castleford: Three: Eagar, Gay, Maloney, Flowers. Goals: Orr (4), Tonks (2). Dropped goal: Orr. Salford Reds: P Carige, B Thompson, S Little, G Casey, S Martin, S Blakeley, C Briggs, P Southern, M Little, M Sayers, H Smith, D Steadury, P Highton, Substitutes: M Croft, C Morley, J Farnham, C Mahan. Castleford Tigers: J Flowers, R Gay, J Eagar, P Maloney, D Rogers, D Orr, B Davis, D Thompson, A Rapier, N Sykes, L Harland, G Tait, A Vowles, Substitutes: I Tonks, J Wells, A Hall, D Eason. Referee: K Kirkpatrick (Warrington)

Sheffield Eagles.....22
Leeds Rhinos.....16

By A CORRESPONDENT

A REMARKABLE second-half fight back gave Sheffield Eagles a rare JJB Super League victory over Leeds Rhinos in a thrilling encounter at the Don Valley Stadium yesterday. A year after being denied by the odd point in 47 on home soil, Sheffield gained sweet revenge by out-scoring the Silk Cut Challenge Cup finalists by four tries to two, continuing their steady improvement.

Leeds, who clearly have the Wembley final on their minds, looked to be cruising to a comfortable win when they led 14-4 at half-time, but Sheffield, the Challenge Cup holders, slowly, but surely, hauled themselves back into a match they had seemed ready to let slip.

Led by the guile of their full back, Dave Watson — who more than made amends for his first-half sin-binning — together with the power and persistence of Johnny Lawless, the hooker, and Dale Laughton, the prop, Sheffield clawed their way back. Tries by Rod Doyle and Simon Baldwin, plus two goals by Mark Aston, had tied the scores at 16-16 after 70 minutes. Leeds had been restricted to a solitary second-half penalty by Iestyn Harris.

However, with just seven minutes remaining, Sheffield snatched the lead for the first time when Aston slotted a penalty, after Adrian Morley had been sin-binned for obstruction, and, in the closing stages, Geoff Hardy crashed through for the try that brought the biggest crowd at the Don Valley Stadium this season to its feet.

Leeds, who have now lost three of their past five Super League matches, had appeared to be in almost total control before the interval as they ripped Sheffield's defence to shreds with wave upon wave of effective attack.

Tries by Paul Sterling and Morley, who finished off a scintillating handling move involving six of his colleagues, plus three goals by Harris, edged Leeds ahead, but Doyle's opening try, on 33 minutes, set the scene for the rousing renaissance as Sheffield secured their third victory in the space of just nine days.

SCORERS: Sheffield: Three: Doyle (2), Baldwin, Hardy, Goals: Aston (3). Leeds: Three: Morley, Sterling, Goals: Harris (4). SHEFFIELD EAGLES: D Watson, K Lovell, D Powell, K Senior, B Soder, J Hardy, M Aston, D Laughton, J Lawless, D Shaw, S Baldwin, D Turner, R Doyle, Substitutes: C Thompson, R Wright, W Swales, M Jackson. LEEDS RHINOS: M St Helens, L Riew, M Golden, B Gooden, F Cummings, I Harris, D Lawford, M Aspinall, T Newton, D Harty, A Morley, A Farrell, M Garscor, Substitutes: P Sterling, K Sinfield, I Jackson, D Ward. Referee: Stuart Cummings (Widnes)

Goulding proves inspiration to end Giants' losing streak

BY OUR SPORTS STAFF

a brief glimmer of hope as he barged over to make it 18-12 at half-time.

Danny Russell, the Huddersfield captain, scored after the break and after 57 minutes Goulding completed the scoring with his fifth goal from seven attempts.

Shaun McRae, the Gateshead Thunder coach, is pleased with the improvement shown by his Super League newcomers after their second home victory, a 22-14 defeat of Halifax Blue Sox at Gateshead International Stadium on Saturday.

"We're better defensively than we showed in the games against Leeds and St Helens," McRae said. "I've been happy with our performances and we've made a good start at home, but it's vital we start picking up points away."

The margin flattered Halifax, who are nothing like the side that finished third last year. Their third defeat of the season was confirmed when Willie Peters, the livewire Gateshead scrum half, intercepted a pass by Graham Holroyd and won a 50-metre sprint to the line.

Gateshead's all-Australian outfit showed far greater pace and creativity as they raced ahead with tries by Kerrod Walters, their captain, and Craig Simon. Gavin Clinch and Darryl Cardiss responded for Halifax, but the Thunder took control again when Ben Sammut followed up a kick by Will Robinson.

"Gateshead are a confident team," John Pendlebury, the Halifax coach, said. "They play percentage football and defend with enthusiasm, so they are very hard to break down."

GOOD THINGS COME TO THOSE WHO...WAIT.
GUINNESS
OFFICIAL SPONSOR OF RUGBY WORLD CUP 1999

TURNING THE ULTIMATE EVENT INTO THE ULTIMATE OCCASION

Prepare yourself for the last great sporting event of the century and make sure that you're part of the action. Appointed by the Rugby World Cup, we are the only official corporate hospitality organisers for this world-beating event.

This means that only we can guarantee you match tickets, all-in reserved seating blocks, as part of your fantastic hospitality package.

Also included in the price is a range of superb cuisine and fine wines, an all day complimentary bar, and many other excellent benefits that other companies simply cannot offer.

So don't fall victim to the ticket touts and enjoy perfect hospitality at this year's Rugby World Cup!

CALL AN OFFICIAL RUGBY HOSPITALITY 1999 LTD PARTNER NOW AND QUOTE REFERENCE 2050

CARNEGIE SPORTS INTERNATIONAL	0131 317 7773
CAVENISH HOSPITALITY	0181 567 3530
LETHESBY & CHRISTOPHER	0845 305 0900
MATCH POINT	0181 332 7384
SLATTERY PASCOE ASSOCIATES	00353 1 6614055

ONLY USE OFFICIAL SERVICES DISPLAYING THE RUGBY WORLD CUP 1999 LOGO

RACING: CLASSIC BETTING CHANGED AFTER GODOLPHIN'S TRIALS IN DUBAI

Island Sands impresses

By CHRIS McGRATH

PRECISELY as Paul Carberry was taking the National Hunt season to an exuberant climax, swinging from the rafters in the winner's enclosure at Aintree, thousands of miles away a rather more discreet drama was serving to ignite the new Flat season. In the desert evening of Dubai on Saturday, Godolphin took the gloves off its most promising three-year-olds in an attempt to establish a pecking order for the European classics.

Two trials over a mile, for colts and fillies respectively, were staged under authentic race conditions, extending to the participation of Frankie Dettori and other experienced jockeys. The results should make punters grateful for Sheikh Mohammed's recent expression of bemusement that bookmakers had prejudged the relative merits of horses yet to be properly tested. Sure enough, Italian and Dubai Millennium were among those to forfeit prominent positions in the Sagitta 2,000 Guineas or Vodafone Derby before disappointing in the colts' trial. Instead it was Island Sands, barely mentioned by the wagging tongues of winter, who confirmed how he has thrived in the sun. His closest pursuers were Mukhalif and Adair, whose performance augured extremely well for their prospects when stepped up in distance: both are likely to tackle traditional Derby trials.

Island Sands was recruited by Godolphin after two impressive wins for David Elsworth at Salisbury last season. A son of Turtle Island, he proved on the second occasion that he could handle soft ground with the same facility as his sire, but he evidently handled much firmer conditions with ease. He finished 14th from 25-1 for the horses, still a fair price given the calibre of his rivals in the trial. Simon Crisford, Godolphin's racing manager, said: "Island Sands has been working very well and we were delighted with his performance."

In the fillies' rehearsal, Etizazz finished a close third and remains a very plausible fancy for the Sagitta 1,000 Guineas. Overall, though, Crisford warned: "Our plans for the Guineas remain open, as we need to see how the horses do over the next few weeks and how they travel to England."

Dettori rode Etizazz and was confident that she would improve for the trial, in which she was narrowly foiled by Pescara, a French import, and a real dark horse in Zahrat Dubai. The latter would appear an intriguing Vodafone Oaks prospect, while Calando fared creditably enough to remain a possible for the Sagitta 1,000 Guineas. That race is off the agenda, however, for Karameh, who has had a setback, while plans are on hold for the disappointing Saytara.

The first draft of Godolphin horses to be trained in Newmarket this season will fly from their desert base on April 25, five days before the Guineas meeting. That same classic weekend, of course, Sheikh Mohammed is dreaming of yet another new frontier in the Kentucky Derby. There was a chastening defeat on Saturday, however, for Prado's Landing — something of a "sighter" for Godolphin — in the Blue Grass Stakes at Keeneland. He finished last, doubtless emboldening local scepticism about the challenge of Worldly Manner and Aljabr.

A series of more conventional trials begin on domestic soil with the Shadwell Stud Nell Gwyn Stakes at Newmarket tomorrow. In Ireland yesterday, the recent defeat of Stravinsky was compounded by a disappointing run from his stablemate, Black Rock Desert, in the Gladness Stakes at Leopardstown. André Fabre yesterday criticised the Vodafone Derby after Slickly had won the group two Prix Noailles at Longchamps. "It is too hard a race for three-year-olds," he said. "It has not produced a decent steeple in years and lives on its reputation. I would rather win the French Derby than at Epsom."

Island Sands, twice a winner at Salisbury last year, landed one of Godolphin's trials in Dubai on Saturday

WINDSOR

ROB WRIGHT

- 2.15 Paddywack 3.45 BAYONET (nap)
2.45 Maiden's Blush 4.15 Shalatenso
3.15 Abajany 5.15 Floating Charge

Timekeeper's top rating: 3.15 WUXU VENTURE.
Our Newmarket Correspondent: 2.45 MAIDEN'S BLUSH (nap).
3.15 Wuxu Venture. 3.45 Sweet As A Nut.

GOING: FIRM (GOOD TO FIRM IN PLACES) TOTE JACKPOT MEETING SIS
DRAW 5F-6F, HIGH NUMBERS BEST

2.15 BANTRY MAIDEN AUCTION STAKES

(2-Y-O: £2,794 5f 10yds) (18 runners)

- COMMONWOOD (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
103 (13) ANSTAR (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
104 (14) OFFMATE (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
105 (15) SAMARAND (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
106 (16) TIGER WHISTLE (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
107 (17) BOND (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
108 (18) CARLOS (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
109 (19) PERFECTION (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
110 (20) STEP UP (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
111 (21) MAGIC BANE (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
112 (22) GOOD EVANS (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
113 (23) SEA VILLY (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
114 (24) MISS MILLER (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
115 (25) SHABANI (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton

BETTING: 2-3 Acacia, 5-1 Miss Millenium, 10-1 Paddywack, 20-1 Abajany, 12-1 Tinsel Whistle, 14-1 Carlos, 16-1 Magic Bane, 18-1 Good Evans, 20-1 Sea Villy, 22-1 Miss Millenium, 24-1 Shabani.

1998 WUXU VENTURE MEETING

2.45 KENMARE MAIDEN FILLES STAKES

(3-Y-O: £2,879 1m 27yds) (15 runners)

- 201 (21) 55- AFFRANTE 189 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
202 (22) 0- MAREKIN 171 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
203 (23) 0- MAIDEN'S BLUSH 183 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
204 (24) 0- MECCA 215 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
205 (25) 0- MOON 171 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
206 (26) 0- MY ANNETTE 171 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
207 (27) 0- NAUGHTY CHIEF 189 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
208 (28) 0- NINA 183 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
209 (29) 0- RADA'S DANCER 183 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
210 (30) 0- RED MARY 171 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
211 (31) 0- ROSA CAVALIER 171 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
212 (32) 0- SUELLA LAKE 189 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
213 (33) 0- TIGER WHISTLE 183 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
214 (34) 0- VILLA WANDA 183 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton

BETTING: 2-3 Acacia, 5-1 Miss Millenium, 10-1 Paddywack, 20-1 Abajany, 12-1 Tinsel Whistle, 14-1 Carlos, 16-1 Magic Bane, 18-1 Good Evans, 20-1 Sea Villy, 22-1 Miss Millenium, 24-1 Shabani.

1998 WUXU VENTURE MEETING

BLINKING FIRST TIME: Windsor: 5.15 Regal Academy, Kelso: 2.30 Ratush.

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

4.00 Political Mandate

2.45 KENMARE MAIDEN FILLES STAKES

(3-Y-O: £2,879 1m 27yds) (15 runners)

- 201 (21) 55- AFFRANTE 189 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
202 (22) 0- MAREKIN 171 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
203 (23) 0- MAIDEN'S BLUSH 183 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
204 (24) 0- MECCA 215 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
205 (25) 0- MOON 171 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
206 (26) 0- MY ANNETTE 171 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
207 (27) 0- NAUGHTY CHIEF 189 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
208 (28) 0- NINA 183 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
209 (29) 0- RADA'S DANCER 183 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
210 (30) 0- RED MARY 171 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
211 (31) 0- ROSA CAVALIER 171 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
212 (32) 0- SUELLA LAKE 189 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
213 (33) 0- TIGER WHISTLE 183 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
214 (34) 0- VILLA WANDA 183 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton

BETTING: 2-3 Acacia, 5-1 Miss Millenium, 10-1 Paddywack, 20-1 Abajany, 12-1 Tinsel Whistle, 14-1 Carlos, 16-1 Magic Bane, 18-1 Good Evans, 20-1 Sea Villy, 22-1 Miss Millenium, 24-1 Shabani.

1998 WUXU VENTURE MEETING

3.15 RUSSELL REED CLASSIFIED STAKES

(3-10: £2,753 6f) (24 runners)

- 401 (21) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
402 (22) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
403 (23) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
404 (24) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
405 (25) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
406 (26) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
407 (27) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
408 (28) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
409 (29) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
410 (30) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
411 (31) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
412 (32) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
413 (33) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
414 (34) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
415 (35) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
416 (36) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
417 (37) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
418 (38) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
419 (39) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
420 (40) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
421 (41) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
422 (42) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
423 (43) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
424 (44) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
425 (45) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
426 (46) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
427 (47) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
428 (48) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
429 (49) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
430 (50) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
431 (51) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
432 (52) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
433 (53) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
434 (54) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
435 (55) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
436 (56) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
437 (57) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
438 (58) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
439 (59) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
440 (60) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
441 (61) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
442 (62) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
443 (63) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
444 (64) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
445 (65) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
446 (66) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
447 (67) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
448 (68) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
449 (69) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
450 (70) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
451 (71) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
452 (72) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
453 (73) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
454 (74) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
455 (75) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
456 (76) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
457 (77) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
458 (78) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
459 (79) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
460 (80) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
461 (81) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
462 (82) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
463 (83) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
464 (84) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
465 (85) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
466 (86) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
467 (87) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
468 (88) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
469 (89) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
470 (90) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
471 (91) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
472 (92) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
473 (93) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
474 (94) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
475 (95) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
476 (96) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
477 (97) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
478 (98) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
479 (99) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
480 (100) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
481 (101) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
482 (102) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
483 (103) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
484 (104) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
485 (105) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
486 (106) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
487 (107) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
488 (108) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
489 (109) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
490 (110) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
491 (111) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
492 (112) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
493 (113) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
494 (114) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
495 (115) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
496 (116) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
497 (117) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
498 (118) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
499 (119) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
500 (120) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
501 (121) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
502 (122) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
503 (123) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
504 (124) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
505 (125) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
506 (126) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
507 (127) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
508 (128) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
509 (129) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
510 (130) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
511 (131) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
512 (132) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
513 (133) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
514 (134) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
515 (135) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
516 (136) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
517 (137) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
518 (138) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
519 (139) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
520 (140) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
521 (141) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
522 (142) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
523 (143) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
524 (144) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
525 (145) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
526 (146) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
527 (147) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
528 (148) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
529 (149) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
530 (150) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
531 (151) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
532 (152) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
533 (153) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
534 (154) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
535 (155) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
536 (156) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
537 (157) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
538 (158) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
539 (159) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
540 (160) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
541 (161) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
542 (162) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
543 (163) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
544 (164) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
545 (165) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
546 (166) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
547 (167) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
548 (168) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
549 (169) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
550 (170) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
551 (171) 00244 ACULES STAR 16 (M Bani) 8-11 M Fenton
552 (172) 00244 ACULES STAR 1

Grand National: Irish success at Aintree is a family affair, as Alan Lee discovers Confidence breeds success for Carberry

Tommy Carberry needed to think for only a moment before summing up the virtues of his son's jockeyship in a single word. "Confidence," he said with parental satisfaction, before puffing on the first cigar of what he was pleased to predict, would be a prodigious celebration even by his high standards.

When it comes to confidence at Aintree, the senior Carberry is a qualified judge. Back in 1975, he had been so infused with the stuff that, in a conversation at the start that has gone down in jockeys' legend, he told a group of colleagues that he was about to win the National.

This conviction, stunning in a breed of men who barely like to forecast they will jump the first fence in this most daunting of races, was offered despite the presence in the opposition of a certain Red Rum, to whom winning round here was mere routine. "I am sure they thought I was mad," Carberry said of his audience. "But I just felt that with an ordinary run of luck we would win."

Carberry duly fulfilled his expectations aboard L'Escargot, who had already won two Cheltenham Gold Cups, and on Saturday, with the help of his eldest son Paul and a horse called Bobbyjo, he joined the elite group who have both ridden and trained National winners, a feat last completed by Fred Winter in 1965. Of at least equal significance, Carberry was also providing Ireland with its first National winner since... well, since he last won it.

On a bright, blustery Saturday, an Irish roar had already shaken the timbers of the winners' enclosure, one of the few parts of Aintree that remains much as Carberry left it in 1975. Istabraq had returned to an exultant reception after another exhibition of haughty supremacy over his hurdling generation. He will aim to complete a clean sweep of the principal festivals at Punchestown later this month.

Most of the Irish present would have settled for that, for the National has long since ceased to be an event to which they travel with much expectation. This time, though, there was a horse to give them hope, a horse worth opening the wallets for. They did so to such effect that Bobbyjo, available at £2.1 in the morning, was sent off at 10-1. It was not insider trading, for the owner, Bobby Burke, made his money from booze rather than betting. He owns a string of pubs in north London but says he gave up gambling ten years ago. The confidence was not misplaced, though, for it was met with the mutual faith of the family Carberry. This matchless event seldom falls short in the human interest stakes but this dynasty from Co Meath is something else. Tommy trains the horse, his wife Pamela rides him at work and young son Philip partnered him to win his unusual Aintree preparation, a two-mile hurdle race at Down Royal. And then there is Paul.

Carberry eases up on Bobbyjo after matching his father's 1975 success

Mere mention of Paul Carberry among his peers brings smiles, raised eyebrows and hair-raising anecdotes that bear no public repetition. At 25, Paul is prankster and party animal supreme. As with many such extroverts, there is innate shyness beneath, but by inclination Carberry belongs to an earlier, less po-faced generation.

He is a throwback to the days before heightened professionalism and punitive breathalyzer laws trimmed the devilment from jump jockeys. He is very much a chip off the old block, the son of a man who could raise hell with the best of them. Yet he also has a talent for coaxing the best out of horses that can make as stern a judge as his father purr with pleasure. "He's better than I ever was," Tommy said, and compliments do not come much greater.

Paul Carberry was never entirely settled in England, despite the security of a retainer from owner Robert Ogden. His heart stayed in Ireland but when he returned there this year, he carried his abiding ambition to come back and win the National, just as he had watched his father do so many times on videotape. This, he recognised with the clarity if not the stated certainty of Tommy in 1975, was his chance. He claimed to have been in bed by 9pm on Friday, which was not only some sort of record but an indicator of his desire.

Bobbyjo — named after Burke and his wife, Jo — is nine years old, statistically the best age to win a National. He is a proven stayer, having won the Irish National a year ago. If one factor dimmed the confidence, he was a stone out of the handicap, but the Carberrys knew he was better than that.

More often than not, confidence comes before a fall at Aintree. Joe Tizzard had radiated belief in Double Thriller, who had looked sure to go off the shortest-priced favourite since Red Rum when Carberry senior beat him in 1975. On the day, though, the public deserted Double Thriller and so did fortune. He overjumped at the first fence and slid to the turf.

It was not to prove a race of carnage and recriminations, however. Other than at Becher's on the second circuit, where three fallers included Eudipe, fatally, and the surprising favourite Fiddling The Facts was brought down, only four more horses hit the deck.

Approaching the final fence, there were still four possible winners, including Richard Dunwoody on Call It A Day and Adrian Maguire on Addington Boy. But the English-trained horses were to be run out of it by the representatives of Ireland and Scotland.

For a few strides after the last, it looked as though Blue Charm could become the first Scottish winner since Rubisich, 20 years ago. Then Carberry, who had treated his horse with customary kid gloves, produced from him a devastating sprint that put the result beyond question in a matter of yards.

The jockey was celebrating wildly 50 yards before the winning post, while the trainer watched calmly on the big screen in the parade ring, wearing the quiet smile of the vindicated. Tommy trains only 15 horses, close to Fairyhouse racecourse, and says he seeks no more. His resolve in that matter may be tested after this triumph.

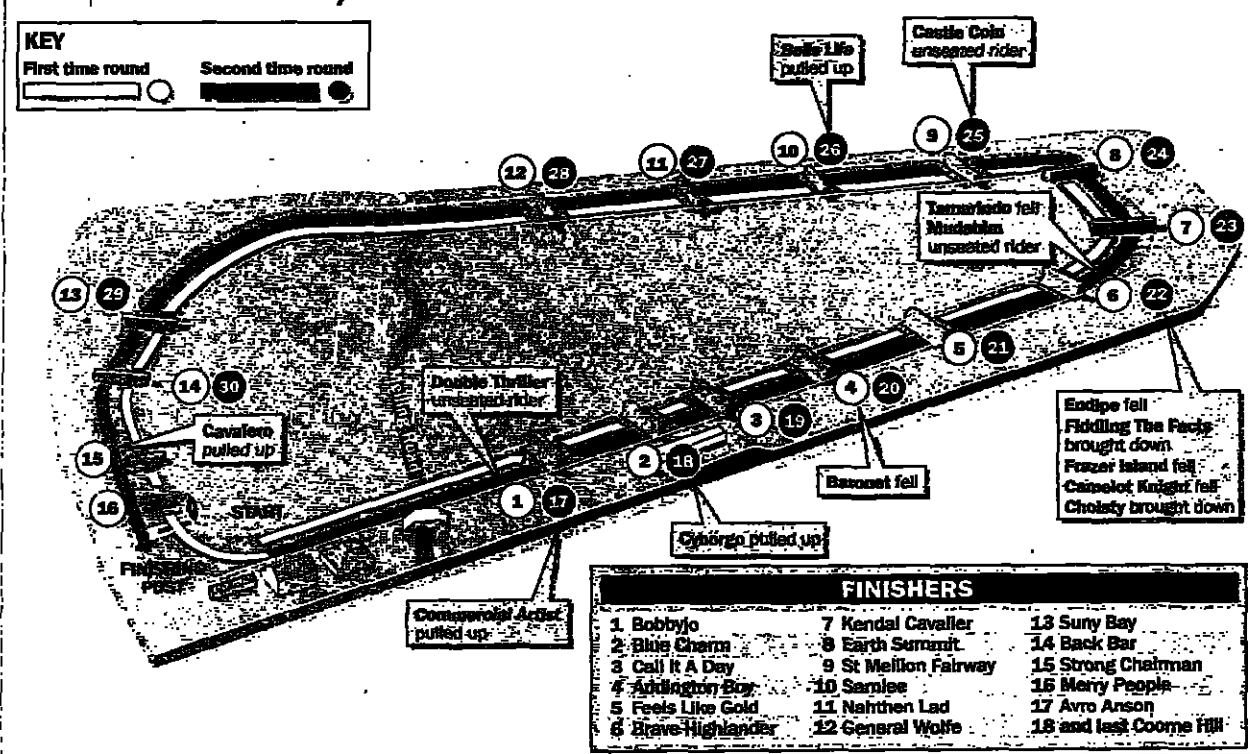

In the winner's enclosure, Burke punched the air repeatedly, paraded his son before Des Lynam and enjoyed the uproarious chanting of several coachloads of his pub regulars. Paul Carberry swung from the rafters, possibly not for the last time on an evening that threatened to provide Liverpool's Adelphi Hotel with a party worth another TV documentary to itself.

Simon Barnes, page 37

Bobbyjo clears the open ditch on his way to victory in the Martell Grand National

AINTREE'S FENCES, FALLERS AND FINISHERS

Bobbyjo to chase Whitbread bonus

By CHRIS McGRATH

CONNECTIONS of Bobbyjo are to chase a £50,000 bonus and send their Martell Grand National winner for the Whitbread Gold Cup at Sandown Park on Saturday week. The bonus goes to any horse finishing placed in the Aintree race and winning the Whitbread.

Trainer Tommy Carberry, besieged by a crowd of over 1,000 on Bobbyjo's triumphant homecoming to the Co Meath village of Ratoath yesterday, said: "Yes, he will go for the Whitbread."

Opposition at Sandown is likely to include long-time National favourite Double Thriller, the dampest of squibs when unseating Joe Tizzard at the first fence, and David Nicholson's Baronet, another early casualty when falling at the fourth.

Trainer Paul Nicholls yesterday reported Double Thriller none the worse for his mishap. "He's out in the paddock now and is as right as rain," the trainer said.

"It was one of those unfortunate things that happen in a race like the Grand National."

Chris McGrath tipped the 10-1 Grand National winner, Bobbyjo, in The Times on Saturday

He jumped the fence okay but just seemed to crumple and go down.

"Anyway, the main thing is that the horse is all right as he jumped round loose for a circuit and then pulled himself up, but he seems fine and I think the Whitbread Gold Cup could be next."

Nicholson, reporting his two National runners in good order said: "Call It A Day and Baronet are absolutely fine. I would doubt Call It A Day will run in the Whitbread. We will decide in a day or two but he has just gone four and a half miles round Aintree. It is more likely that Baronet will run — he is fine after his fall."

The tragic loss of Eudipe was the nadir of two grim days for David Johnson. Last season's champion owner, who had not despaired of retaining that status when arriving in Liverpool, instead endured a meeting of the most savage ill fortune.

On Friday, Gris d'Estraval broke a hind leg on the flat in the John Hughes Chase. Then Eudipe was left horribly stricken at Becher's second time round.

"It was bad enough to lose Gris d'Estraval," Johnson reflected yesterday. "You hold your breath when they're jumping fences, but hardly expect anything to happen between them. And then Eud-

BIG-RACE DETAILS

3.45 MARTELL GRAND NATIONAL
Handicap chase (242,600 4m 4f)
1. BOBBYJO P Carberry, 10-1
2. Blue Charm L Wier, 25-1
3. Call It A Day R Dunwoody, 7-1
4. Addington Boy A Maguire, 10-1

Fiddling The Facts 6-1 fav. 32 ran
10, nk. T Carberry in Ireland tote
£13.30, £2.50, £4.80, £2.10, £3.70.
DF: £218.40. Tote: £3,283.50.
CSF: £228.52. Treas: £1,725.50

I spoke to my wife and daughter up there and they were naturally pretty distressed, but my heart really goes out to the stable staff. They are the forgotten heroes. They are with these horses every day but today they are looking at empty boxes.

"I spoke to Tony McCoy earlier and he has a nasty kicking, but all he's concerned about is the horse. He's very upset."

KELSO

ROB WRIGHT
2.00 Kibby Bank 4.00 Shinerella (nb)
2.30 Chevalier Errant 4.00 Coole Abbey
3.00 Eastlands Hi-Light 5.00 Cash Box
Carl Evans: 3.00 Faster Ron, 4.30 Coole Abbey.

GOING GOOD TO FIRM SIS

2.00 GRAHAM BUILDERS MERCHANTS NOVICES

Chase (€3,838, 3m 10) (12 runners)
1. 1534 BIT O MAGIC 31 (0.5) R Allen 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
2. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
3. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
4. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
5. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
6. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
7. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
8. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
9. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
10. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
11. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
12. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85

2.30 CHEVROT RENTALS (MARQUEE HIRE)

NH NOVICES HURDLE (€3,025, 2m 110yd) (19)
1. 1534 BIT O MAGIC 31 (0.5) R Allen 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
2. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
3. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
4. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
5. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
6. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
7. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
8. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
9. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
10. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
11. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
12. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85

3.00 DRYBURGH ABBEY HOTEL BUCKLEUCH CUP

(Maiden Hunters Chase) (€2,150, 3m 11) (13)
1. 1534 BIT O MAGIC 31 (0.5) R Allen 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
2. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
3. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
4. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
5. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
6. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
7. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
8. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
9. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
10. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
11. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
12. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85

3.30 ANDY SCOTT HANDICAP HURDLE

(€2,762, 2m 110yd) (9)
1. 1534 BIT O MAGIC 31 (0.5) R Allen 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
2. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
3. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
4. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
5. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
6. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
7. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
8. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
9. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85

4.00 PAT DE CLERMONT HANDICAP CHASE

(€3,536, 2m 10) (11)
1. 1534 BIT O MAGIC 31 (0.5) R Allen 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
2. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
3. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
4. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
5. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
6. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
7. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
8. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
9. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
10. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
11. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85

4.30 PERCY ARMS HUNTERS CHASE

(€2,232, 3m 10) (8)
1. 1534 BIT O MAGIC 31 (0.5) R Allen 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
2. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
3. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
4. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
5. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
6. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
7. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
8. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85

5.00 MOET & CHANDON HANDICAP HURDLE

(€2,918, 2m 6110yd) (13)
1. 1534 BIT O MAGIC 31 (0.5) R Allen 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
2. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
3. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
4. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
5. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
6. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
7. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
8. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
9. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
10. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
11. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85
12. 105 BRANCH END 116 (0.5) J O'Neill 7-11-6 A Thornton 85

MEETING POINTS

THE TIMES GUIDE TO THE GOING TODAY

EARLY BIRD
Best value this morning
Island
Sands
2,000 Guinness
15/1 with Coral & Ladbrokes

KELSO
Jumps, 7-race card
1st race: 2.00
Winning favourite: 42%
Long distance traveller: Snapper (3.00), 190 miles

WINDSOR
Flat, 7-race card
1st race: 2.15
Winning favourite: 31.6%
Long distance traveller: Peripatus Star (2.15), 181 miles

TV: None

Underfoot conditions
Standard Hard Firm Good Soft Heavy

See racecards for detailed going

Brightwells reach ten

THEY train just two horses, but Paul and Margaret Brightwell saddled their tenth point-to-point winner at the Essex and Suffolk meeting on Saturday (Carl Evans writes).

The Hadleigh-based couple sent out Commuter Country to win the hunt race, and Crackin' idea to take the ladies' open contest. Both horses have won five times this season.

Trevor Glass is a late starter in this sport, but his second victory as a rider came in yesterday's prestigious Grimthorpe Gold Cup at the Middleton meeting. Glass, 38, drove Overflowing River to a ten-length win from Tidaro Fairy.

SATURDAY'S RESULTS

Aintree
Going good
1.45 (m 110yd) 100-1, Kibby Bank (J. Wright) 1-11-6 A Thornton 85
2.00 (m 110yd) 100-1, Kibby Bank (J. Wright) 1-11-6 A Thornton 85
2.30 (m 110yd) 100-1, Kibby Bank (J. Wright) 1-11-6 A Thornton 85
3.00 (m 110yd) 100-1, Kibby Bank (J. Wright) 1-11-6 A Thornton 85
3.30 (m 110yd) 100-1, Kibby Bank (J. Wright) 1-11-6 A Thornton 85
4.00 (m 110yd) 100-1, Kibby Bank (J. Wright) 1-11-6 A Thornton 85
4.30 (m 110yd) 100-1, Kibby Bank (J. Wright) 1-11-6 A Thornton 85
5.00 (m 110yd) 100-1, Kibby Bank (J. Wright) 1-11-6 A Thornton 85

Hamilton
Going heavy, soft in places
1.10, 1. Top Jess (7-2) fav. 2. Interal Aitor (7-1); 3. Captain Brady (33-1); 4. Western Gander (6-1) 17 ran.
1.40, 1. Hestridge (4-5) fav. 2. Cautionary (6-2); 3. Kingston Bell (4-4) 6 ran.
2.10, 1. Dunsford (3-1) fav. 2. Naisport (14-1); 3. Stan Michel (10-1); 4. Northern Swallow (33-1) 17 ran.
2.40, 1. Ardleigh Chatterer (5-1); 2. The Buntingford (11-1) fav. 3. High Pursue (20-1); 4. Newwood Spin (12-1) 17 ran. Nf. Breeze Monoplane.

Hereford
Going good to firm
1.30, 1. Route One (11-4); 2. Headwee (14-1); 3. Dennis (100-30) 16 ran.

JUMPS LEADERS

TRAINERS
M/P	W	L	Pl	Loss
M. P. P.	144	33	1	-162.57
P. Hestridge	93	74	4	-5.79
M. A. R. P.	91	67	58	-30.56
P. Hestridge	78	67	49	-4.86
M. A. R. P.	67	34	35	-1.91
M. Hestridge	67	65	61	-3.41
M. Hestridge	65	49	37	-20.50
N. Hestridge	52	61	50	-76.83
L. Hestridge	49	34	15	-117.72
M. A. R. P.	39	37	27	-29.77
M. A. R. P.	34	40	39	-34.16
C. Hestridge	24	28	5	-4.84

JOCKEYS
M/P	W	L	Pl	Loss
A. P. M. C.	150	94	85	-122.37
M. A. R. P.	114	113	108	-85.59
M. A. R. P.	110	61	68	-7.31
R. Dunsford	102	65	57	-56.86
N. Hestridge	102	65	61	-2.96
J. Hestridge	71	56	45	-38.69
A. Hestridge	70	52	57	-88.48
C. Hestridge	67	41	37	-148.17
M. A. R. P.	56	54	54	-31.29
A. Hestridge	56	41	34	-116.64
R. Hestridge	47	36	29	-59.61
S. Dunsford	47	42	59	-135.44

WITNESS THE CLASH OF THE TITANS

WITNESS THE CLASH OF THE TITANS

On May 8th, Europe (captained by Robert Sangster) take on the Middle East (captained by Sheikh Mohammed) at Goodwood for the Blue Square Sberbank Cup in the first international team racing event. For ticket information, including advance booking discounts call 0800 0188191 or 01243 755022.

SAILING

Garside aims to sail into the record book

BY EDWARD GORMAN
SAILING CORRESPONDENT

MIKE GARSIDE, the former SAS officer at the helm of Magellan Alpha, remains the only Briton left in the Around Alone Race and, one day into the fourth and final leg from Punta del Este, Uruguay, to Charleston, South Carolina, he is showing signs of enjoying his self-appointed task.

The man, who 16 years ago cruised round the world with his family and then returned to the sea in the Finot-designed Magellan only to find he hated her privations and her awkward temperament, has been saying how much he disliked the challenge from the day he set off last September. But things finally gelled on the third leg through the Southern Ocean and Garside is even rumoured to be considering further campaigns.

In the meantime, he has set himself two goals: to win the 5,700-mile final leg and to set a record time by a Briton.

Winning the leg is going to be difficult. J. P. Mouligne, of France, in the slower blood-red Cray Valley, produced the performance of the race with his successive leg wins in Class 2. Mouligne has an eight-day lead over Garside but is in no mood to sit on his laurels.

Garside, in turn, is only nine hours ahead of Brad van Liew, of the United States, in Balance Bar, in the overall standings. The American is capable of winning the leg himself in a boat optimised for light-air, upwind racing.

As for the record, Garside is well up on Josh Hall's time of 157 days when coming third in Class 2 in 1990-91. "I am aiming for a time of 26 days for the leg which, when added to my elapsed time of 107 days, will hopefully give me a final total of less than 134 days," Garside reported yesterday from a position about a mile behind Van Liew and Mouligne, who were tied for the early lead.

Srikumar Sen sees the champion show a worrying lack of stamina

Hamed locates escape route in nick of time

NASEEM HAMED came close to defeat against Paul Ingle when they met at Manchester on Saturday. If Ingle had not walked into a left in the eleventh round, he might have stopped the World Boxing Organisation featherweight champion, who appeared to be running out of stamina at the time.

If Hamed does not want to live dangerously, he should put himself in the care of Emanuel Steward, who trains Lennox Lewis. Hamed had called him in as an adviser at a late hour, and it was just as well, because it was Steward who gave him the punch with which to finish Ingle.

All night long the champion belted Ingle about the head and body but, before the decisive blow, he had managed to put the challenger on the canvas only twice: in the first and in the sixth. Yet the Scarborough man came back and in the second half almost turned the contest around.

Ingle gritted his teeth and stuck to his game-plan of pressuring Hamed in the second half when the champion was expected to tire. Ingle took charge from the eighth, often catching Hamed with good jabs. In the ninth he hurt the champion, whose desire for a fight suddenly appeared to leave him. Hamed either backed around the ring trying to get out of Ingle's way or threw wild swings that the challenger had no trouble avoiding.

By the tenth, Hamed's nose was bleeding freely. It was in the eleventh that Steward injected some of his expertise. He told Hamed not to rely on punches around Ingle's guard but to go straight through the middle.

As Ingle tried to force the pace, Hamed shot out a short left through the middle. With

Hamed celebrates his twelfth title defence

Ingle coming in, the blow caught him high on the head and sent him flying onto his back. Even though he got up and tried to continue, the referee, Joe Cortez, stepped in.

"It is the mark of a great champion to get yourself out of a difficult situation like that," Steward said. Hamed's discomfiture in the closing rounds can be gauged from the fact that he had wanted to see Thomas Hearns against Nate Miller in the contest immediately after his bout but was unable to return ringside until Hearns' bout was almost over.

Rob Hughes 36

Hamed has become a more rounded boxer under his new trainer, Oscar Suarez. His boxing has been tightened up and balance improved. But his stamina needs attention. His boxing in the first six rounds was of the highest class. The double left hook that sent Ingle to the floor in the first and the left to the body that grounded the challenger in the sixth were high-quality punches.

It was nice to see Hamed giving credit to Ingle for the gallant effort that has earned the Scarborough man a place on HBO's list of fighters. "I give credit to Paul," Hamed said. "He took some really hard shots, got off the floor and came back to turn on the heat." Ingle added: "I was really enjoying it from the seventh round."

Hamed's failure to stay in charge after dominating the contest in the first half will cause his team concern. That is why he should look to Steward. "He was close to defeat," Steward said. "For the first time, his nose was bleeding. He has been getting away with much because of his punch and youth. But as he fights more, a lot of guys are going to be younger and stronger. He has got to make adjustments."

Hamed blamed a hand injury, sustained around the fifth round, for his failure to keep up the intensity and accuracy of his first-half boxing. He is to have an X-ray today. "I don't think my hand is broken," Hamed said. "After the sixth round, my hand really started to hurt. As much as it hurts, I'm not really bothered, as long as I can punch."

"I felt confident, from round one, I was going to win. I felt definitely stronger than him and when I knocked him down in the first round, I knew something was going to happen."

Hamed, who admitted that Ingle had given him one of the toughest fights of his career, now intends to unify the belts and, hand permitting, will meet Manuel Medina, the International Boxing Federation champion, or Luisito Espinosa, the World Boxing Council title-holder, in July.

Ingle crumples under Hamed's double left hook in the first round before getting up to give the champion a testing time. Photograph: John Gichigi/Allsport

VOLLEYBALL

Perfect ten as Malory complete double

BY RODDY MACKENZIE

LONDON Malory do not know the meaning of defeat when it comes to a cup final. The English League champions continued their unblemished record in finals when they won their tenth Westfield Health English Cup in 13 years at Ponds Forge, Sheffield, on Saturday.

The 15-12, 15-7, 12-15, 15-13 win over City of Liverpool was not without anxiety, particularly when Liverpool clawed back the third set as Tom de Smet, their Belgium junior international, and Mark Brennan, who went on to take the most valuable player award, picked holes in the Malory block.

In the final set, De Smet made a costly error of judgment at 12-13 when he elected to play a ball that was drifting out of play and Malory went on to win the service back. It was the momentum they needed to take the trophy and complete the league and cup double.

"I guess winning the cup ten times in 13 years is not too shabby," Jefferson Williams, the Malory player-coach, said. "Liverpool surprised me as they raised their game and they were a very tight unit." Williams, who had been on the sidelines for six weeks with a knee injury, brought himself on court after the first set and played a large part in the victory with his outside hitting.

There was a surprise in the women's final when Loughborough, in the final for the first time, took the trophy with a 15-4, 15-11, 15-6 over London Malory. Malory were handicapped by the absence of Audrey Cooper and Amanda Glover, who were in Mexico to compete in the Acapulco world series beach tournament. However, Loughborough fully deserved the win and took just 71 minutes to overcome the London side.

Photograph, page 43

I'VE LIVED MY WHOLE
LIFE IN THE FAST LANE.
AN AIRPORT TERMINAL
SHOULDN'T CHANGE THAT.

RIG LANE HANIS
Actor

Life is short. So shouldn't queues at airports be a thing of the past? We think so. That's why Aer Lingus has its very own security checkpoint. So while other passengers queue to have their luggage and themselves checked, our Premier Class passengers are whisked through in just a matter of minutes. Even at the airport.

Aer Lingus

THE TIMES

HALF-PRICE SUMMER SHIRTS

PLUS 25% OFF ADDITIONAL ORDERS

CODES AND COLOURS

Navy	NA
Dark cornflower	DC
Coral	CO
Natural	NA
White	WH

French navy
Candy pink
Pale lilac
Sky blue
White

Dark indigo	DIN
Pale blue	PBL
Plum	PLM
Pale yellow	PYE
White	WHT

Dark indigo	DIN
Pale blue	PBL
Plum	PLM
Pale pink	PPK
White	WHT

HOW TO ORDER

Simply collect four differently numbered tokens from the seven published in The Times until next Saturday. Token 1 appeared in The Times Magazine on Saturday, April 10. Attach the four tokens to the order form, left, and send them to: The Times/Boden Offer, Midland Terrace, Victoria Road, London NW10 6DB. You can also order your shirts on the Internet by visiting www.boden.co.uk/times. Each token carries an Internet code in the bottom right hand corner. Just input the codes when you order and follow the instructions.

FOR A CATALOGUE OR INQUIRIES
CALL: 0181-453 1535

CHANGING TIMES

هكذا آمن الاصل

RESULTS AND STATISTICS

TODAY

Interims: Wards Stores, Fina: Bond International Software, Riva Group, Servomex. Economic statistics: none scheduled.

TOMORROW

Interims: Peter Black Holdings (8 mths), Deloitte Inns, London & St Lawrence Investment Trust, Pressac. Fina: Automotive Precision Holdings, Rugby Estates, Tesco, Xorise Group, Economic statistics: British Retail Consortium March retail sales monitor.

WEDNESDAY

Interims: Gardner Group, High-Point Rendel Group. Fina: none scheduled. Economic statistics: ESI regional economic forecasts.

THURSDAY

Interims: none scheduled. Fina: Cavendish Group, Laura Ashley Holdings, Polydoc, Seascope Shipping Holdings. Economic statistics: British Chambers of Commerce quarterly economic survey.

FRIDAY

Interims: ARM Holdings (Q1), Barclays Global Investment. Fina: Sature. Economic statistics: none scheduled.

SUNDAY TIPS

The Sunday Times: Buy Centrica, Bass, Ardagh, Fiat Technologies, Citidel Holdings, Sell Selfridges. The Sunday Telegraph: Buy Tesco, Countrywide, Assured, British Borneo, TBI, VFC, Sell Wyvale Garden, Hold Cranswick. The Mail on Sunday: Buy Aukett Associates, BOC, Arjo Wiggins Appleton, Sunday Express: Buy Baldwins, AEA Technology, Peterhouse Group, Hold P&O, BWI.

COMPANIES

MICHAEL CLARK

Referral casts shadow over Tesco

Terry Leahy, chief executive of Tesco, is expected to report another set of encouraging figures, with sales up about 7 per cent

TESCO: Final results from Britain's biggest supermarket chain tomorrow are likely to be overshadowed by the referral of the food retailers to the Competition Commission. Even so, brokers are looking for another impressive performance from the group, with estimates of pre-tax profits ranging from £860 million to £870 million. The comparative figure for the previous 52 weeks is £817 million and £832 million for the actual 53 week period reported.

The dividend will come in at 4.2p, up from last year's 3.9p. Total sales growth for the year of about 7 per cent is forecast with a like-for-like sales increase of about 3.5 per cent, slightly up on the figures released by the group in its trading statement on January 18. These figures showed total sales growth of 6.5 per cent in the 20 weeks to January 2, with like-for-like sales up 3.1 per cent.

Total sales over the crucial six-week Christmas period were 7.4 per cent ahead or up 4.1 per cent on a like-for-like basis.

Tesco has decided against giving current trading updates with either full or half-year results and is, instead, updating the City on a quarterly basis and continuing to issue the Christmas trading statement.

Brokers will be looking for any changes to its Clubcard loyalty scheme, after reports that it is to be relaunched in the summer.

Analysts will also be seeking information on the uptake of Tesco's free Internet service as well as news on growth plans for its overseas operations in the wake of the referral to the Competition Commission.

Tesco recently bolstered its position in Asia by forming a joint venture with Samsung to develop hypermarkets in South Korea with Tesco holding 81 per cent. It also operates stores in the Irish Republic and central Europe.

BT Alex Brown, the broker, rates the stock a "strong buy" and expects strategic returns from overseas diversification to start to flow through after 2002, but said that further growth in the UK "should ensure a steady earnings stream". It is forecasting pre-tax profits of £870.2 million. SC Securities is looking for £870 million with a dividend of 4.1p while Teather & Greenwood is also looking for £870 million.

PETER BLACK: Final results from the leisure retailer on Tuesday will include the actual eight-month and pro-forma 12-month figures to January 31, 1999. There should be no surprises after Gordon Black, chairman, reported in mid-February that pre-tax profits for the year to January 31 would be not less than £21.7 million. Williams de Bro's Jeremy Hilditch is forecasting a rise in the dividend to 7.6p from 7p following earnings of 23.2p, compared with 21.4p.

RIVA GROUP: Brokers were warned in January that the group does not expect pre-tax profits for the year ended December 31 to exceed £700,000 as a result of charges relating to a decision to exit from direct operations in Spain and Denmark. That compares with £1.3 for million 1997.

The exceptional costs of this action remain uncertain, but the impact on the group's profits is unlikely to exceed £1 million. The group achieved a strong performance in its operations in the UK and France and Benelux, but had a disappointing December, with the anticipated revenues for three projects moving out of December and into the new year. No dividend is anticipated.

SERVOMEX: The final third of the group's financial year is a key period representing about 70 per cent of group revenues and profitability.

When the expected level of revenue generation in this important period failed to materialise, this electronic and electrical equipment group — currently in offer talks — was forced to issue a second trading statement stating that profitability in 1998 would be substantially lower than the previous year.

It also became apparent that further exceptional costs would be needed to restructure the business and lower its cost base to meet lower demand levels.

Brokers fear that with net debt rising to £5.2 million for the year end, interest cover falls to 2.8 times and that may mean a reduction in the final dividend from 9½p to 3½p with earnings down from 20.3p to 7p.

Pre-tax profits of £1 million are forecast, struck before restructuring charges of about £750,000. In 1997, Servomex made £2.95 million.

WARDLE STOREYS: Half-year results, due out today, are likely to show pre-tax profits up from £5.4 million to £5.7 million on sales down 10 per cent at £53 million. The group, which supplies inflatable systems and emergency escape drops, is also expected to raise the payout from 7p to 7½p.

ECONOMIC OUTLOOK

After last week's quarter-point rate cut, the markets will be waiting for evidence of whether the Bank's rate cutting spree has further to go. However, with only a limited amount of data scheduled for release this week it is unlikely that any clear picture will emerge.

The most interesting release will be the British Chambers of Commerce quarterly survey on Thursday. The survey, which is regarded as the most comprehensive examination of the business climate, is not expected to reveal any startling information but should suggest that recovery remains tentative. The Bank received a draft version ahead of last week's meeting and so it may have influenced its decision.

Today, the British Retail Consortium should provide fresh evidence that consumer spending is beginning to pick up as confidence improves with high street sales benefiting.

The German January manufacturing data, which is released today, is likely to be viewed as justifying the ECB's half-point cut last week. MMS International, the economics forecasting group, estimates that pan-German monthly production will decline by 0.5 per cent.

In the US, the only data of great note are the inflation figures released tomorrow. While short-term fears that the Federal Reserve may be forced to tighten rates are unlikely to disappear, a small increase in the inflation rate to 0.3 per cent should not worry the markets too much.

ALASDAIR MURRAY

Lloyds Bank Interest Rates for Business Customers

These rates of interest apply with effect from 12th April 1999

	OLD AER %	OLD GROSS %	NEW AER %	NEW GROSS %	NEW NET %
Business Investment Account - Monthly Interest
30 Day Notice
£250,000+	4.23	4.15	3.97	3.90	3.12
£100,000-249,999	4.18	4.10	3.92	3.85	3.08
£25,000-99,999	3.92	3.85	3.66	3.60	2.88
£10,000-24,999	3.40	3.35	3.14	3.10	2.48
£1-9,999	0.50	0.50	0.25	0.25	0.20
Premier Interest Account - Monthly Interest
14 Day Notice
£250,000+	4.13	4.05	3.87	3.80	3.04
£100,000-249,999	3.92	3.85	3.66	3.60	2.88
£25,000-99,999	3.66	3.60	3.40	3.35	2.68
£10,000-24,999	3.25	3.20	2.99	2.95	2.36
£1-9,999	2.02	2.00	1.76	1.75	1.40
Business Call Account - Monthly Interest
£250,000+	2.58	2.55	2.32	2.30	1.84
£50,000-249,999	2.38	2.35	2.12	2.10	1.68
£10,000-49,999	2.02	2.00	1.76	1.75	1.40
£1,000-9,999	1.71	1.70	1.46	1.45	1.16
£1-999	1.46	1.45	1.21	1.20	0.96
Clients Call Account - Half Yearly Interest
£1,000,000+	3.53	3.50	3.28	3.25	2.60
£100,000-999,999	3.43	3.40	3.17	3.15	2.52
£10,000-99,999	2.87	2.85	2.62	2.60	2.08
£2,500-9,999	2.16	2.15	1.91	1.90	1.52
£1-2,499	0.35	0.35	0.25	0.25	0.20
Clients Call Account - Monthly Interest
£1,000,000+	3.53	3.47	3.28	3.23	2.58
£100,000-999,999	3.43	3.38	3.17	3.13	2.50
£10,000-99,999	2.87	2.83	2.62	2.59	2.07
£2,500-9,999	2.16	2.14	1.91	1.89	1.51
£1-2,499	0.35	0.35	0.25	0.25	0.20
Treasurers Account - Monthly Interest
£25,000+	2.38	2.35	2.07	2.05	1.64
£10,000-24,999	1.76	1.75	1.51	1.50	1.20
£5,000-9,999	1.16	1.15	0.90	0.90	0.72
£2,500-4,999	0.50	0.50	0.25	0.25	0.20
£1-2,499	0.25	0.25	0.15	0.15	0.12
Schools Banking Account - Monthly Interest
£1+	3.30	3.25	3.04	3.00	2.40
Business Reserve Account - Quarterly Interest
14 Day Notice
£10,000+	3.09	3.05	2.83	2.80	2.24
£1-9,999	2.63	2.60	2.27	2.25	1.80
Deposit Account - Monthly Interest
7 Day Notice
£1+	0.25	0.25	0.25	0.25	0.20
Deposit Account - Half Yearly Interest
7 Day Notice
£1+	0.25	0.25	0.25	0.25	0.20
Loans
Flexible Business Loan, Business Loan and Farm Loan - Standard	0.94	11.28
Flexible Business Loan, Business Loan and Farm Loan - Special	0.76	9.12
Flexible Business Loan - Preferential	0.72	8.64
Small Business Loan - Standard	1.03	12.36
Managed - Small Business Loan	0.93	11.16
Overdrafts
BAND A (and Standard)			0.91	10.92
B			0.82	9.84
C			0.73	8.76
D			0.69	8.28
Unauthorised			2.00	24.00
Business Mortgages
A			0.94	11.28
B			0.76	9.12
C			0.72	8.64

For more information, visit our website - www.lloydsbank.co.uk/businessaccounts

Part of the Lloyds TSB Group

MPs begin inquiry into branded goods' prices

By SAIED SHAH

THE high price of branded goods is likely to come under fire this week in a Commons investigation that is expected to call for a change in trademark law.

The influential Commons Trade and Industry Committee, chaired by Martin O'Neill, will begin hearing evidence on Wednesday on "trading, trademarks and competition" in an inquiry that will focus primarily on "parallel" imports.

These are branded goods sourced unofficially outside the European Union and sold at discount prices. Under current European law, manufacturers have the power to control such imports, but the MPs are likely to attack this as being a way of keeping prices up.

The European Commission

O'Neill: to hear evidence has also said that it is concerned by manufacturers using a law meant to protect their goods from being copied as a way to restrict supply and so maintain high prices.

Typical parallel imports include designer goods such as well-known makes of perfume, jeans and sunglasses.

The inquiry follows the committee's investigation of car prices in the UK last year. The MPs' strongly worded report found that British buyers pay 35 per cent more for cars than consumers on the Continent and called for prison sentences for car manufacturers and dealers who systematically overcharge.

Lindsay Hoyle, Labour MP for Chorley and a member of the committee, promised a "robust" report, due in the summer, to put pressure on the Department of Trade and Industry for a change in the law.

He said: "The consumer is being ripped off, whether it's for CDs or cars. There is a general ethos that you can charge more in the UK, and this is not acceptable."

READER OFFER THE TIMES RELAX IN RECLINER CHAIR FROM ITALY

● Sit back and relax in this superb recliner chair from Italy. It is the perfect occasional chair for outdoors. With a sturdy cotton-padded seat in a green and white stripe and an epoxy coating. It has two adjustable arm straps which allow the chair to be set at the correct angle to suit you. Lightweight, with rounded frame it folds flat for easy storage or placing in a car boot. When folded the chair measures 61cm x 120cm x 120cm. Order one chair for £29.95, or buy two for £57.90, a saving of £2.

Send your payment and coupon to: The Times Recliner Chair Offer (T014), Belton Road West, Loughborough, Leics, LE11 5XL.

THE TIMES RECLINER CHAIR

Mr/Ms/Ms/Ms/Ms _____ Or debit my MasterCard/Visa card no. _____

Address _____ Postcode _____ Print Name _____ Exp Date _____

I enclose a cheque/PO (NO CASH) made payable to The Times Recliner Chair Offer. Write name and address on back of cheque.

ITEM	QTY	PRICE	TOTAL
Recliner chair T014/MS01	1	£29.95
Two recliner chairs T014/MS02	2	£57.90

Offer available in the UK only. Allow 14 days for delivery on orders. If cancelled, please return goods within seven days of receipt for a full refund. No cash for items in hand can be made after 60 days. Offer is subject to availability. Please tick box if you do not wish to receive further details from The Times or companies approved by us. ☐ SW 1080

Free postage and packaging on all UK orders

24-HOUR CREDIT CARD ORDERLINE: 01509 638636

CHANGING TIMES

Gas complaints rise

COMPLAINTS and inquiries to the Gas Consumers Council rose to record levels last year amid fears that gas companies are rushing into business with poor customer service (Christine Buckley writes). GCC staff dealt with 300,000 inquiries — an 8 per cent increase on the previous year — as competition in the household market became established throughout the country. Serious complaints leapt by 36 per cent to 60,479. The majority of complaints concerned household supplies.

NatWest Personal Credit Interest Rates

NatWest announces the following interest rates, effective from 12 April 1999:

Current Accounts
Old Gross Rate per annum (%)	Old AER (%)	Balance	New Gross Rate per annum (%)	New AER (%)
1.75	1.76	Student/Graduates Bank account, interest paid monthly	1.50	1.51
2.50	2.53	Advantage Premier Account package - by invitation only	2.25	2.27
2.00	2.02	£25,000 - £249,999	1.75	1.76
1.50	1.51	£2,000 - £9,999	1.25	1.26
0.75	0.75	£1 - £1,999	0.75	0.75
Savings
Old Gross Rate per annum (%)	Old AER (%)	Balance	New Gross Rate per annum (%)	New AER (%)
5.10	5.20	Crown Reserve 3 month notice - interest paid quarterly	4.85	4.94
5.00	5.09	£250,000 +	4.75	4.84
4.70	4.78	£100,000 - £249,999	4.45	4.52
3.75	3.80	£50,000 - £99,999	3.50	3.55
3.25	3.29	£25,000 - £49,999	3.00	3.03
2.70	2.73	£10,000 - £24,999	2.45	2.47
		£2,000 - £9,999
4.80	4.91	Diamond Reserve 1 month notice - interest paid monthly	4.55	4.65
4.50	4.59	£100,000 +	4.25	4.33
3.75	3.82	£50,000 - £99,999	3.50	3.56
3.25	3.30	£25,000 - £49,999	3.00	3.04
2.70	2.73	£10,000 - £24,999	2.45	2.48
		£2,000 - £9,999
2.70	2.73	Reward Reserve Instant access - interest paid quarterly	2.45	2.47
2.45	2.47	£10,000 +	2.20	2.22
		£2,000 - £9,999
4.95	4.99	including all conditional reward interest payable - quarterly and annually	4.70	4.73
4.70	4.73	£10,000 +	4.45	4.48
		£2,000 - £9,999
3.30	3.34	Premium Reserve Instant access - interest paid quarterly	3.05	3.09
3.20	3.24	£50,000 +	2.95	2.98
2.95	2.98	£25,000 - £49,999	2.70	2.73
2.60	2.63	£10,000 - £24,999	2.35	2.37
		£2,000 - £9,999
2.10	2.12	First Reserve Instant access - interest paid quarterly	1.85	1.86
1.85	1.86	£1,000 +	1.60	1.61
1.00	1.00	£500 - £999	1.00	1.00
0.85	0.85	£250 - £499	0.85	0.85
0.75	0.75	£1 - £99	0.75	0.75
5.50	5.61	TESSA Reserve No longer available to new savers	5.25	5.35

The rates for all other personal savings accounts remain unchanged. Where appropriate, lower rate will be deducted at source from interest credited or paid. The Gross Rate is the rate paid before deducting income tax. The Annual Equivalent Rate (AER) is a national rate which shows the gross interest rate (including any reward interest payable) as if paid and compounded on an annual basis. The AER shown includes all conditional reward interest payable, comprising quarterly interest rewards of 1.75% gross per annum and an annual interest reward of 0.50% gross per annum. No more than one withdrawal is made in any quarter. Annual rewards are payable provided the account remains in credit and no more than three withdrawals are made in any year. Should you close your account during a quarterly or annual period you will not receive any quarterly or annual reward for that period. For details of other interest rates please ask at your local branch or visit our website - www.natwest.co.uk. All rates are subject to variation.

سكرا من الامل

ONOMIC
UTLOOK

Defending the indefensible

Amid all the horrors of Kosovo, the economic and financial aspects have naturally received scant attention. But for anyone who thinks about government finances, these events should raise serious questions about an issue once regarded as of supreme importance but which has hardly figured in recent public debate: namely, what proportion of our national income we should properly devote to defence.

In relative terms, Britain has made a significant contribution to the current Nato campaign against Serbia. But the absolute number of aircraft involved is small. Of course, this is partly the result of a deliberate decision to minimise the risk of British losses, but it is partly the result of necessity. For small though the numbers are, they form a significant part of Britain's total forces. Given that we are simultaneously deploying forces in far-flung parts of the world, our resources are severely stretched.

So what, you might say. There are still those who think that any defence spending is money down the drain and anything saved from the defence budget is an unalloyed benefit. Let us hope, for the sake of consistency, if nothing else, that such people take a thoroughly non-interventionist view in the current situation in the Balkans — and elsewhere.

A more common view is that Britain's small Armed Forces are simply the inevitable result of her reduced importance in the world. At the beginning of this century, Britain was still the world's leading economic power. At the end of it, she is the world's fifth-largest.

But hold on. This is only part of the story. Britain may be a lot smaller than she was, but fifth-largest is not tiny. Yet look at any of the actual or potential conflicts with countries, such as Serbia, whose GDP barely ranks on the world scale at all, and our military resources look remarkably small. Apologists would say that there is a vast difference in quality, and they have a point. But the real reason is quite different. We no longer spend much on defence.

The absolute amount sounds impressive enough — some £22 billion a year. This makes it the fourth-largest consumer of taxpayers' money. But the Government spends four times as much on social security as it does on defence. Spending on defence amounts to about £400 a year for each person in the country — roughly the cost of a cheap package holiday to the sun, or three times the average person's annual expenditure on the National Lottery.

Moreover, real spending on defence is set to fall by 3.6 per cent this year, and by a further 2 per cent over the following two years.

ROGER BOOTLE

With the economy growing strongly, this means that the share of the country's GDP spent on defence is set to fall sharply. Twenty five years ago, it was 6 per cent. At the time of the Falklands conflict it was still 5 per cent. As recently as five years ago it was 3.3 per cent. It is now down to 2.5 per cent. If we had simply maintained defence at the share it had five years ago, current spending would be 30 per cent higher — implying 30 per cent more planes, ships and troops.

The numbers in the Armed Forces are now at pitifully low levels. All three services combined now total just under 220,000. Six years ago the figure was 50,000 higher. The Army is now so small that it would very nearly fit into Wembley Stadium. The Royal Navy would be positively rattling around. As for the Royal Marines, they are now surely outnumbered by the burgeoning ranks of stress counsellors.

Why have we allowed this situation to develop? Because if the world were a safe and secure place then defence spending could properly be regarded as pure waste, and when the country is not engaged in a war, it is tempting to believe that the world is a safe place. After the collapse of the Soviet Union, it was widely believed that we could enjoy a "peace dividend" in the shape of lower defence spending, implying the scope for reduced taxation and/or increased spending on other things. To shrewd judges, this always looked like an illusion. In many ways the world had become a more dangerous place. Yet spending on defence continued to be pruned.

There were other illusions, namely that high technology would provide both effective and cheap protection, and that even if it didn't, someone else — Uncle Sam — would continue to do the job. Yet the US has also made some massive cuts, to the point where its defence expenditure is now less than 3.5 per cent of GDP. In Europe there is a fond idea that by pooling European resources we can come to some impressive numbers. Yet Italy, Denmark, Germany, The Netherlands, Belgium and Spain spend less than 2 per cent of their GDP on defence. In terms of expenditure per head of the population, the US spends two-and-a-half times as much as Germany, three times as much as Belgium and four times as much as Canada. How much longer are the American people going to be prepared to foot the bill for other countries' protection?

The upshot is plain. Defence just cannot safely be squeezed any further. Indeed, if the world continues to develop on current lines, then public opinion will have to be prepared for a significant increase in defence spending. The implications could be significant — not only for government finances but also for the defence industries and the jobs market for young people. Forget the "peace dividend". We have effectively spent it several times already. It may soon be time to ask for some of the money back.

roger.bootle@capitaleconomics.com

Profits surge at Savoy after revamp of hotels

By DOMINIC WALSH

THE Savoy Group will today reveal a surge in profits that will provide comfort to Blackstone and Colony Capital, the American investment firm that paid an astonishing £520 million for the hotel group last May.

The posh and highly conservative hotel chain will report a 39 per cent jump in gross trading profits excluding exceptional items to £41 million, from turnover up 10.6 per cent to £112.7 million.

Its pre-tax profits rose 23 per cent to £28.7 million, while revenue per available room rose 16 per cent to £211 as the effects of a £90 million refurbishment programme kicked in.

This was most marked at Claridge's, one of its four London hotels, where the completion of a £42 million revamp boosted sales by 38 per cent and operating profit by 99 per cent.

Ramon Pajares, managing director, said the group continued to invest on improvements. Some £2 million will be spent upgrading the Lancaster ballroom and two private banqueting suites at the Savoy, and a similar amount is being spent at the Simpson's in The Strand restaurant.

Mr Pajares said trading in London was still buoyant, with operating profit in the first three months of 1999 some £1.2 million higher year on year. He said there had been no impact from the Yugoslav crisis but admitted: "If the Russians get involved, people might get nervous. But so far, there has been no negative effect."

A revaluation of the group's properties, which have now been transferred to separate legal entities, has lifted the net asset value from £391 million to £580 million. Mr Pajares said: "This reflects the restoration programme and investment we have done, the higher gross trading profits of the group and the profitability we have forecast for 1999."

He admitted that, in the context of what the new owners had paid for the group, the revaluation "gives them some comfort". He said Blackstone continued to evaluate opportunities to acquire further hotels but nothing was imminent.

The sale of the Savoy Group to Blackstone and the subsequent restructuring resulted in exceptional costs of £7 million.

Martin Myerscough, designer of a revolutionary new washing machine, has done a deal with a UK-based manufacturer

By JASON NISSE

Numbers man aims to clean up

MARTIN MYERSCOUGH, an accountant with a biotechnology background, will today disclose that he has achieved what James Dyson, the vacuum cleaner entrepreneur, has so far been unable to do — design and launch a revolutionary new washing machine.

Mr Myerscough and his company, Monotub Industries, have beaten Mr Dyson to the post with the launch this morning of Monotub's Titan washing machine at the Design Museum in London.

Mr Dyson, whose Dyson Appliances company sells more than £100 million worth of his distinctive vacuum cleaners each year, has long suggested that his next product would be a washing machine.

Monotub's Titan launch is the culmination of six years' work, which began when a washing machine engineer complained to Mr Myerscough about design faults of the front-loaded washers that dominate the UK and European markets. Mr Myerscough, who is finance director of KS Biomedix, the biotechnology group, drew on his original training as a marine engineer to produce what he says is the first newly designed washing machine since the 1960s.

Novel features include the ability to halt a wash at any point in the cycle — just like US-style top-loaded washers — plus capacity 40 per cent greater than most machines and a removable basket so that you do not have to tug wet items of washing out of it.

Monotub has raised £750,000, largely from private investors, and has signed a deal with a big, UK-based manufacturer. It has the backing of one of the two main makers of washing powder, and a chairman with washing-machine industry experience — Michael Hearn, former head of Servis. The launch will be followed by meetings with retailers such as John Lewis and Comet, and Mr Myerscough expects the Titan to be in the shops by summer 2000 at £550 to £600. This premium price will match it against products of AEG and Bosch of Germany in a market sector in which 400,000 machines a year are sold in the UK. Monotub says that it can make a profit selling just 12,000 a year.

Dyson remains unruffled. "We are working on a number of new products," it said. "We have not specifically mentioned a washing machine."

Japanese bank in trouble

Japanese regulators have taken over Kokumin Bank, a regional bank which suffered a run on deposits after investigators found it had a negative net worth of between $400 million and $600 million.

Japan's Financial Reconstruction Committee said the bank would be put under state control to assess its loan book. The FRC said it would seek a buyer after transferring its bad loans to a government debt collection agency. The failure of Kokumin Bank, which had deposits of $4.3 billion, could be a signal that more regional banks will hit the buffers soon.

Directors more optimistic

Business optimism has returned to levels last seen a year ago, a new survey published today reveals. The Institute of Directors' business confidence survey shows that the balance of directors feeling more optimistic about their companies climbed from 7 per cent in December to 40 per cent in March. Other survey indicators, including employment and output balances, also ticked higher, while cost and pay pressures remain weak. The balance of companies reporting improved profits is also hit the best levels seen since December 1997.

Greenalls deal

Greenalls, the pub and hotel operator, is poised to announce the acquisition of Dunston Hall hotel and golf course near Norwich for about £15 million. The 72-room property is one of half a dozen golf-based hotels targeted by Greenalls in a move to expand its De Vere Hotels division.

WORD-WATCHING

Answers from page 40

ADONIZE

(b) Of men: to make an Adonis of, to adorn, to dandify. Both transitive and intransitive. "Three good hours, at least, in adjusting and adonizing myself."

BASKE

(c) To strike with a bruising blow. A variant of bask, adaptation of the Danish bask. 1642: "Temptations, crosses, discouragements, which many others are basked withall."

BROGGLE

(c) To continue poking with a stick or pointed instrument in a hole. Also, specifically, to fish for eels by thrusting a stick with a baited hook into the holes and under the stones where they lie. Apparently a frequentative of the Gaelic brog, an awl. "A way to catch eels by brogging. Go into some shallow place of the river among the great stones, and broggle up and down until you find holes under the stones."

ANGELET

(c) A gold coin, half the value of an angel. From the Old French and Italian diminutives of angel. 1608: "Fear's wife offered one of them one hundred anglets to let him escape."

SOLUTION TO WINNING MOVE

1. Qxb7? creates decisive threats against the back rank (1... Qxb7; 2. Rxe8+ and mates) and even 1... Nc7 does not help. eg. 2. Rxe8+ Rxe8; 3. Rxe8+ and Black loses a piece.

Costa stirs up coffee battle

By DOMINIC WALSH

THE PROFIT IN COFFEE

COSTA, the upmarket coffee bar chain owned by Whitbread, is turning up the heat in the battle of the espresso bars with plans to open more than 50 units in the next 12 months in an attempt to stay ahead of a new wave of market entrants led by Starbucks of the US, Scottish and Newcastle and McDonald's.

Whitbread bought out the Costa Brothers business in October 1995 for an estimated £15 million to £25 million. In the same year an American couple, Scott and Ally Svenson, decided to launch their own chain in London, calling it Seattle Coffee Company. The move was followed by Coffee Republic, set up by a lawyer, Sahar Hashemi, and her brother, Bobby, an investment banker, who saw a gap in the market.

Almost three years on, Costa, Seattle and Coffee Republic are the clear leaders in a market comprising about 300 outlets, most of them in London. All are ploughing ahead with vigorous expansion plans. Under Whitbread, Costa has tripled its turnover to almost £40 million. Scottish and Newcastle has recently dipped a toe in the water by developing its own concept called Espresso and last month bought ten sites from Sofra, the Turkish cafe operator, for an estimated £2.5 million.

The most surprising development was last month's £10 million-plus acquisition by McDonald's of the 23-strong Aroma chain — only the second time the US fast food behemoth has strayed outside its burger format. McDonald's is planning 250 Aromas and even hints at an eventual move across the Channel.

Fears that the market is overheating are countered by a recent report from Mintel, the market researcher, which suggests that there is scope for at least 1,500 coffee bars over the next three to four years.

EXCHANGE RATES

	Bank Buys	Bank Sells
Australia $	2.65	2.47
Austria Sch	21.47	19.81
Belgium Fr	63.21	58.25
Canada $	2.530	2.342
Cyprus Cyp £	0.9047	0.8332
Denmark Kr	11.48	10.76
Egypt £	5.69	5.08
Finland Mk	9.40	8.65
France Fr	10.23	9.45
Germany Dr	3.073	2.831
Greece Dr	507	468
Hong Kong $	13.27	12.07
India Rs	129	109
Indonesia Rp	17630	12630
Ireland P	1.262	1.1372
Israel Sh	6.83	6.17
Italy Lit	3096	2819
Japan Yen	208.68	192.15
Malta £	0.673	0.614
Netherlands Gld	3.469	3.174
New Zealand $	3.15	2.91
Norway Kr	13.12	12.18
Portugal Esc	210.82	208.79
Spain Ptas	165.64	154.93
Sweden Kr	14.09	12.96
Switzerland Fr	2.533	2.315
Turkey Lira	62472	58203
USA $	1.713	1.570

Rates for small denomination banknotes only as supplied by Barclays Bank. Different rates apply to traveller's cheques. Rates as at close of trading on Friday.

CHANGE ON WEEK

THE POUND

US Dollar

1.6058 (+0.0008)

Euro

0.6711 (-0.0026)

Exchange Index

102.6 (+0.4)

Bank of England official close (4pm)

STOCK MARKET

FT 30 share

3942.2 (+103.4)

FTSE 100

6472.8 (+139.8)

New York Dow Jones

10173.84 (+341.33)

Tokyo Nikkei Ave

16855.63 (+528.07)

FREE 15"

HP Vectra
CORPORATE PCs

0990 47 47 47 Ext 01

HEWLETT PACKARD

UNTIL 15th

£549 EX VAT

£646 INC VAT

HP Vectra VE: Intel® Pentium® II processor 350 MHz; 3.2 Gb Hard Drive; 32 Mb RAM; Windows 98; 15" monitor (PC model D5670T, monitor D2828A)

£655 EX VAT

£770 INC VAT

HP Vectra VL: Intel® Pentium® II processor 350 MHz; 4.3 Gb Hard Drive; 32 Mb RAM; Windows NT 4; 15" monitor (PC model D5680T, monitor D2828A)

Free 15" Monitor

Offer ends April 15th or while stocks last

Foundation is laid for Tiny's Zimbabwe legacy

Jason Nissé on how the late Lonrho tycoon's memory will live on with launch of charitable trust

The Harare headquarters of Lonrho is in a two-storey, Art Deco building with an attractive courtyard, dwarfed by the skyscraper blocks around it in the city's small central business district. On the front it has two signs. One says "Lonrho, 1910", signifying the heritage of the group which started life as the London and Rhodesian Mining Company. The other is a "To Let" sign, showing that less than eight months after the death of Tiny Rowland, the influence of the pan-African conglomerate he created is on the wane in the country where it started.

The Zimbabwean markets are eagerly awaiting the sale of David Whitehead, the textile business controlled by Lonrho Africa, as the part of the empire which still has interests in Zimbabwe is called.

At the same time, Josie Rowland, Tiny's widow, who grew up in Zimbabwe, and the mogul's four children, Toby, Andia, Louisa and Plum, are involved in setting up the Rowland Foundation. The foundation is an educational trust which aims to give Tiny Rowland the sort of immortality that Cecil Rhodes enjoys through the Rhodes Scholarships he endowed.

The Rowland Foundation was launched a few days ago at the University of Zimbabwe, where the British-registered charity is to invest more than £3 million in building a new library and business department at the law faculty, endowing a chair of business law and sponsoring 20 students to study at the university.

Once this project is up and running, the foundation is planning other endowments, using its own funds, which are estimated at about £100 million, and those of the Kellogg Foundation, which is supporting the initiative. Dirk Mueller-Ingrand, the Rowland Foundation's managing director, has been in talks with the universities of Pretoria and the Witwatersrand in South Africa about setting up similar projects and wants to spread a network of educational trusts through the continent, rather like Tiny Rowland spread Lonrho's influence from Nigeria to Mozambique and — more controversially — from Cape Town to Tripoli.

Tiny Rowland, with wife Josie, was described by Robert Mugabe as a "true friend of Africa"

"We don't want our endowments to be like Rhodes Scholarships," Mrs Rowland explained at the foundation's launch. "They cost £20,000 each to send a student to England. The student often does not come back to Africa and does not contribute to the local economy. We can sponsor 20 students for that amount, and they are likely to stay in Zimbabwe."

The comparison between Tiny Rowland and the founder of the De Beers diamond empire is something that comes up quite often when you talk to African business people. The two men operated in similar places and with similar methods. Both were viewed with suspicion by the City of London yet were treated like royalty in Africa. However, Rhodes, unlike Rowland, enjoyed the support of the British Government and history has honoured his memory. Josie Rowland hopes posterity might be as kind to Tiny.

Certainly, in Zimbabwe his name carries much more of a cachet than it ever had in the UK. The Rowland Foundation launch drew a good smattering of the country's top brass including the President, Robert Mugabe, the Industry Minister, Edison Zvobgo, and the Higher Education and Technology Minister, Ignatius Chombo.

Their appearance at the University of Zimbabwe caused some caustic comments. After all, the President had closed down the campus for a large part of last summer after a student protest in June, and one of the law professors, Peter Hughes, was a leader of the protests supporting the Zimbabwean judiciary when it stood up to the Government over the imprisonment and torture of two journalists late last year.

Given this, the Rowland Foundation launch was an exceedingly polite affair. In his speech, President Mugabe described the late tycoon in glowing terms. "In our hearts we cherish the memory of Tiny as a true friend of Africa, a true friend of Zimbabwe," he said. Mr Zvobgo added: "He [Tiny] really felt that those who were oppressed, if they really wanted to do something about it, he would help them."

These charitable words show how Tiny won over the Zimbabwean hierarchy, who were quite hostile to him when they gained control of the country in 1980. Although Tiny Rowland was a genuine opponent of minority rule in Africa, President Mugabe had been angered by Rowland's support of Joshua Nkomo, one of the other main leaders of the black groups which fought against the Ian Smith regime in Rhodesia. He had been won round by positive comments he received in the press from The Observer after it was bought by Lonrho.

Mr Zvobgo was also anti-Rowland, but he had been won over by less subtle means. According to Tom Bower's biography of Tiny Rowland — A Rebel Tycoon — Mr Zvobgo's wife was hired by Lonrho as a consultant, and he was lent money by Rowland to buy a farm. To cap it all, Rowland agreed that Mr Zvobgo's nephew, Godwin Matshu, would be hired as The Observer's African correspondent, based in Harare.

The late tycoon's ways of doing business were undoubtedly controversial. But in Africa this is seen as part of the process. One Harare businessman, who preferred not to be named, put it bluntly: "Every Western company which does business in this part of the world oils the wheels. If they do not, the wheels stop turning."

students for that amount, and they are likely to stay in Zimbabwe."

The comparison between Tiny Rowland and the founder of the De Beers diamond empire is something that comes up quite often when you talk to African business people. The two men operated in similar places and with similar methods. Both were viewed with suspicion by the City of London yet were treated like royalty in Africa. However, Rhodes, unlike Rowland, enjoyed the support of the British Government and history has honoured his memory. Josie Rowland hopes posterity might be as kind to Tiny.

Certainly, in Zimbabwe his name carries much more of a cachet than it ever had in the UK. The Rowland Foundation launch drew a good smattering of the country's top brass including the President, Robert Mugabe, the Industry Minister, Edison Zvobgo, and the Higher Education and Technology Minister, Ignatius Chombo.

Their appearance at the University of Zimbabwe caused some caustic comments. After all, the President had closed down the campus for a large part of last summer after a student protest in June, and one of the law professors, Peter Hughes, was a leader of the protests supporting the Zimbabwean judiciary when it stood up to the Government over the imprisonment and torture of two journalists late last year.

Given this, the Rowland Foundation launch was an exceedingly polite affair. In his speech, President Mugabe described the late tycoon in glowing terms. "In our hearts we cherish the memory of Tiny as a true friend of Africa, a true friend of Zimbabwe," he said. Mr Zvobgo added: "He [Tiny] really felt that those who were oppressed, if they really wanted to do something about it, he would help them."

These charitable words show how Tiny won over the Zimbabwean hierarchy, who were quite hostile to him when they gained control of the country in 1980. Although Tiny Rowland was a genuine opponent of minority rule in Africa, President Mugabe had been angered by Rowland's support of Joshua Nkomo, one of the other main leaders of the black groups which fought against the Ian Smith regime in Rhodesia. He had been won round by positive comments he received in the press from The Observer after it was bought by Lonrho.

Mr Zvobgo was also anti-Rowland, but he had been won over by less subtle means. According to Tom Bower's biography of Tiny Rowland — A Rebel Tycoon — Mr Zvobgo's wife was hired by Lonrho as a consultant, and he was lent money by Rowland to buy a farm. To cap it all, Rowland agreed that Mr Zvobgo's nephew, Godwin Matshu, would be hired as The Observer's African correspondent, based in Harare.

The late tycoon's ways of doing business were undoubtedly controversial. But in Africa this is seen as part of the process. One Harare businessman, who preferred not to be named, put it bluntly: "Every Western company which does business in this part of the world oils the wheels. If they do not, the wheels stop turning."

The oiling of the wheels did not necessarily mean bribes. For example, Tiny Rowland helped to pay for the education of Sam Jonah, a well-connected Ghanaian who wanted to study mining. Mr Jonah later became chairman of Ashanti Goldfields. Lonrho was able to buy a stake in Ashanti for £2 million in the 1970s. This stake is now worth more than 50 times that.

These days, however, the Harare business community is trying to clean up its act. The financial community is just recovering from the collapse of the United Merchant Bank, which overextended itself trading in bankers' acceptances for the state-owned Cold Storage Company. There have been a series of insider trading scandals, though this is not yet a crime in Zimbabwe.

President Mugabe promised new banking regulation and a strong legal framework for business as part of his way of remembering Tiny Rowland. For her part, Josie Rowland said that the Rowland Foundation existed to see "how we can develop business excellence in Zimbabwe in the spirit of the founder". That should foster an interesting new generation of entrepreneurs.

A tale of redemption

Great Expectations
BBC2, 9pm

Although the cinematography is often ravishing, this is no chocolate-box adaptation of the great Dickens novel. Tony Marchant's screenplay is anything but cosy and Julian Jarrold's direction keeps the narrative moving briskly along in this two-parter (concluded tomorrow). Gabriel Thompson makes a fine young Pip, living on the Thames marshes with his embittered, hectoring sister (Lesley Sharp) and gentle giant Joe (Clive Russell). Bernard Hill is a less monstrous Magwitch than some of his illustrious predecessors in the role, but the terror of his encounter with Pip is still genuine. The two main surprises are how effective Ian Gruffudd is as the older Pip, and how well Marchant and Charlotte Rampling handle the matter of Miss Havisham, the jilted bride and 30-year recluse, whose adopted daughter Estella (Gemma Gregory) and later, Justine Waddell) becomes Pip's obsession.

Mystery of the Mummies
Channel 4, 8pm

This archaeological detective story sets out to establish a connection between the pre-Hispanic inhabitants of the Canary Islands, or "Guanches", and the Ancient Egyptians. The basis is principally their shared practice of mummifying the corpses and installing them in rock tombs. Many of the Guanches, whose work was less refined because of local resources. By comparing mummies, visiting Canarian sites and finally locating, in Morocco, Berber tombs which prove to be a halfway house between Egypt and the Canaries, the Egyptologist Dr Joann Fletcher and the archaeologist Mike Eddy make a convincing case, even roping in Thor Heyerdahl in support of their ideas.

Sikhs
BBC2, 7pm and 11.25pm

There are 20 million Sikhs around the world, 500,000 in Britain, and this two-part film is as thorough and polished a picture of the history of the religion and its adherents as they (and those of us who are not) could wish. The producer/directors John Das, Inderjit Nagra and Parnjit Gill have assembled some terrific (often harrowing) archive footage, a collection of articulate and authoritative individual Sikhs of all generations and backgrounds, and have marshalled the various elements into a clear, easily followed story.

Justine Waddell, Charlotte Rampling, Ian Gruffudd: Great Expectations (BBC2, 9pm)

Equinox: Living Dangerously
Channel 4, 9pm

Risk is something we seem to be obsessed with, but whereas some of us live in fear of mugging, BSE or simply venturing out of doors, others, such as base jumpers, who leap from lower blocks wearing parachutes, seek ever more extreme risks. There is evidence that our levels of an enzyme called monoamine oxidase (MAO) control our tolerance of and liking for risk, and that young men are biologically more likely to be risk-takers. This much would be enough for one film, but it goes on to assess the actual risks of everyday life, and it becomes clear that we are more likely to die falling out of bed or down the stairs at home than from AIDS or new variant CJD.

Tony Patrick

RADIO CHOICE

Afternoon Play: Dossier Ronald Akkerman
Radio 4, 2.15pm

"I liked the funeral, didn't you? How about some coffee?" Mundane questions, you'll agree. But in the context of Suzanne Van Lohuizen's play, they are as unsettling as the conversations between the ghost (Alan Rickman) and his living lover (Juliet Stevenson) in Anthony Minghella's film Truly, Madly, Deeply. The ghost in Dossier Ronald Akkerman is that of a journalist (Christopher Staines) who has died of AIDS. Kelly Hunter plays the nurse who ministers to him during his illness. Pre and post-mortem, their relationship is perceptively summed up by the ghost as "a kind of marriage in which we are condemned to each other". Supernatural plays such as this one don't always work. This one does.

RADIO 1 (BBC)

6.30am Zoe Ball 9.00 Simon Mayo 12.00 Jo Whiteley 3.00pm Chris Moyles 5.45 Newsbeat 6.00 Dave Pearce 8.00 Lorraine Live. Trevor Nelson presents a feature on Sade "Putty" Cootner. 9.00 Radio 1 in a contest for Amnesty International 12.00 The Evening Show 2.00am Dave Warren 4.00 Scott Mills

RADIO 2 (BBC)

6.00am Sarah Kennedy 7.30 Wake Up to Wogan 9.30 Richard Allen 12.00 Jimmy Young 2.00pm News 3.00pm Johnnie Walker 7.00 Humphrey Lyttelton 8.00 Big Band Special 8.30 John Holland 9.30 Joe Brown. Let It Rock (2/13) 10.30 Lyns Persons 12.00 Katrina Lescharch 3.00am Alex Lester

RADIO 5 LIVE (BBC)

5.00am Morning Reports 6.00 News 9.00 Nicky Campbell 12.00 The Midday News 1.00pm Ian Payne 4.00 Drive 7.00 News Extra 7.30 Wembley Winners. Peter Slater looks back at the 1990 FA Cup final between West Ham and Arsenal 8.00 Trevor Brooking's Monday Match. Leeds United v Liverpool. Plus a round up of news from the continent 10.00am Late Night Live with Nick Robinson 1.00am Up All Night

TALK RADIO

6.00am The Big Boys Breakfast 9.00 Scott Chisholm & Sally James 12.00 Let's Talk. Soap 1.00pm Anna Rieburn 4.00 Chat: England v Pakistan 8.00 James White 1.00am Ian Collins

VIRGIN

6.30am The Breakfast Show 9.30 Russ Williams 1.00pm Nick Abbott 4.00 Hamlet Scott 6.45 Pete and Geoff 10.00 Gary Davies 1.00am Richard Allen 4.30 Phil Kennedy

RADIO 3

6.00am On Air Petro Trelawny presents music and arts news, including a report on the Ballo awards 9.00 Masterworks With Peter Hobday. Beethoven Choral: The Mass of Aachen. Dostak (Violin Concerto No 1); Mozart, comp. Sussner Requiem in D minor, K226 10.30 Artist of the Week This week Joan Bakewell talks to the British pianist Moura Lympany 11.00 Second Stories: Architects' Soap Choice 12.00 Composer of the Week: J.C. Bach 1.00pm The Radio 3 Lunchtime Concert Live from the Wigmore Hall, London. Angela Hewitt, piano J.S. Bach (Goldberg Variations) 2.00 The BBC Orchestra's BBC Scottish Symphony Orchestra. Beethoven (Symphony No 2 in D), under Osmo Vanska. Brahms (Double Concerto in a minor), under Marko Beblo. Beethoven (Symphony No 3 in E flat, op. 90), under Osmo Vanska 4.00 News in Action Graeme Kip presents six programmes on the mechanics of opera 5.00 In Tune Humphrey Carpenter looks at the work of the Polish composer Grazyna Bacewicz 7.30 Performance on 3 (Broadcasting the Century) A concert from the Royal Philharmonic's series. Melior - The Spectacle at the Albert Hall, London. In this performance, given last month, Giuseppe Sinelli conducts two works with his violin, contralto, Keith Lewis, tenor. Mahler (Symphony

No 10, 1st mvt. Das Lied von der Erde) 9.20 Postscript: Seamus Heaney at 60 Five programmes celebrating and reassessing the poetry of Seamus Heaney 9.40 (Duo in G, K422). Mark Lubotsky, violin. Nobuko Imai, viola 10.00 Voices Iain Burnside traces changes in songs written before and after the First World War 11.00 Night Waves: Peter Markovits gives the Kandinsky exhibition at the Royal Academy of Arts 11.30 Jazz Notes This week, Alyn Shipton presents a four-part jazz parade from the Chichester Festival Theatre, featuring some of the best mainstream talent. Tonight, the Best of British Jazz Band, led by Kenny Baker, trumpet, and Don Lusher, trombone 12.00 The Night 12.05 Chopin (Nocturnes in B, op. 32 in C sharp minor) 12.15 Liszt (Les préludes) 12.35 Iain Vartus (Concerto grosso) 12.50 Devorin Kempf (Zvukovik) 1.00 Webern, Shostakovich, Johann Strauss (sonn 2.10 Schumann (Symphony No 3 in E flat, Rhurau) 2.55 Frederik van Rooyum (Violin Concerto No 1) 3.10 Brahms (Piano Trio in C, op. 87) 3.45 Bach (Partita No 3 in E, BWV1006) 4.05 Music by William and Henry James 4.15 Panto de la Rue (Missa Sancto Job) 4.50 Shostakovich, arr. Kain (The Age of Gold) 5.00 Dabbes (Suite: Sylvia) 5.30 Canales (Quartet in D, op 3 No 1) 5.45 Smetanek (Psalm 144)

RADIO 4

5.30am World News 5.35 Shipping Forecast 6.00 Isadora News 6.05 5.55 News for the Day 6.47 Farming Today Presented by Charlotte Smith 6.00 Today with Sue MacGregor and James Naughtie 9.00 Start the Week Hosted by Jeremy Paxman 9.45 (FM) Start the Week This first in a week of readings from Bruce Chatwin's books 9.45 (LW) Daily Service With the Coventry Cathedral Chaghehouse Choir. Director of music Paul Ledington Wright 10.00 Woman's Hour with Martha Kearney and guests. Includes part five of Diary of a Provincial Lady 11.00 Mapping the Town New series. The archaeologist Jiten Richards traces towns' links with the past, beginning with a history of Coventry from the Middle Ages to the 20th century (1/4) 11.30 Fall Moon Puu is asked to Blending's Castle. Second part of P.G. Wodehouse's comic tale. With Gles Haverall and Paul Richard (2/4) 12.00 (LW) News 12.04pm You and Yours Consumer news and stories, with Liz Barclay and John Waite 1.00 The World as One News round-up 1.30 Mastermind General knowledge quiz 2.00 The Archers Yesterday's edition (1) 2.15 Afternoon Play: Dossier Ronald Akkerman Suzanne Van Lohuizen's drama. See Choice 3.00 Money Box Live: 0870 010 0444 Vincent Duggley takes listeners' personal finance queries 3.30 A News to Remember Barbara Myers tells the story of the medical genius James Parkinson, who gave his name to Parkinson's disease 3.45 The Scattered Isle Anna Massey narrates part 71 of the history of Britain (1) 4.00 The Food Programme Derek Cooper assesses the country's food industry (1) 4.30 Four Corners Jane Frazee and guests examine global issues with behind-the-scenes reports

5.00 PM with Clare English and Chris Lowe 6.00 Six O'Clock News 6.30 Quiz. Uniqua Popular quiz, with guests Robert Lacey, Seamus Heaney, Fran Landesman and John Sutherland. Chaired by Nigel Rees 7.00 The Archers Helen decides to take control 7.15 Front Row The arts programme 7.45 Diary of a Provincial Lady by E.M. Delaford. The daily journal of a well-organised 1930s housewife Broadcast earlier as part of Woman's Hour (1) 8.00 Race to Do Better in the second of two programmes, Ferdinand Dennis examines how public and private organisations identify and tackle institutional racism (2/2) 8.30 Analytica Zoltan Badawa chairs a debate on the issues raised in the previous programme 9.00 Spring Watch Nick Baker travels from East Anglia to North Wales to chart the progress of spring 9.30 Start the Week Broadcast earlier (1) 10.00 The World Tonight Robin Lustig presents 10.45 Book at Bedtime: Archibald Aron Howard reads part six of Robert Harris's thriller (6/10) 11.00 Late Night on 4: Voyage New series. First part of Stephen Baxter's tale: Having survived the Dallas assassination attempt, John F. Kennedy orders a manned mission to Mars. With Laurel Lefkow and Vincent Marzello 11.30 Crossing Continents Julian Pettit visits Estonia, where an innovative scheme is intended to ease ethnic tensions (1) 11.30 (LW) Today in Parliament 11.45 The Parliamentary Postcard MPs talk about their experiences of democracy. People Power 12.00 News 12.30am The Late Book: Earthly Joys Part six of Philippe Gregory's turbulent novel about the Jacobean gardener and adventurer John Tradesant. Read by Kevin Whistley 12.48 Shipping Forecast 1.00 As World Service

FREQUENCY GUIDE. RADIO 1. FM 97.5-99.8. RADIO 2. FM 88.0-90.2. RADIO 3. FM 90.2-92.4. RADIO 4. FM 92.4-94.8. LW 198. MW 720. RADIO 5 LIVE. MW 883, 909. WORLD SERVICE. MW 648. LW 198 (12.45-5.55am). CLASSIC FM. FM 100-102. VIRGIN RADIO. FM 105.5. MW 1187, 1215. TALK RADIO. MW 1053, 1089. Television and radio listings compiled by Perry Cleveland-Peck, Ian Hughes, Gillian Mooney, Jane Gregory and Barry O'Keefe

1996 BORDEAUX

"In the 20 years I have been visiting the area and tasting young Bordeaux vintages, I have never tasted Cabernet Sauvignon as rich, ripe, pure and intense as the finest 1996 Médoc exhibits. I believe some Cabernet Sauvignon based wines of the Médoc may turn out to be among the greatest red wines Bordeaux has produced in the last 50 years."

Robert Parker

1996 BORDEAUX TASTING CASE £250
3 bottles each of these 4 superb clarets

"Pretty aromas of plum and raspberry unfold in this medium-bodied, fine-textured red. Fresh and silky..."
Wine Spectator

Chateau Lascombes
MARGAUX AOC
2ème Cru Classé
£285.95 per 12 bottles

"The 1996 Talbot is an excellent effort from this large Saint-Julien estate...a powerful, dense, rich, fruity wine with fine intensity..."
Robert Parker

Chateau Talbot
SAINT-JULIEN AOC
4ème Cru Classé
£285.95 per 12 bottles

"...possesses a surprising lusciousness...It is a hedonistic, user-friendly Pauillac that should age nicely..."
Robert Parker

Chateau d'Armailhac
PAULIAC AOC
5ème Cru Classé
£225.95 per 12 bottles

"Cap de Mourlin produces typically robust, rich, full-bodied Saint-Emilion wines with a great deal of fruit and muscle...consistently mouthfilling, satisfying wines..."
Robert Parker

Chateau Cap de Mourlin
SAINT-EMILION GRAND CRU AOC
Grand Cru Classé
£224.95 per 12 bottles

CELLAR RECOMMENDATIONS

price per 12 bottle case

Carruades de Lafite, Pauillac AOC	£344.95
Chateau Léoville Poyferré, Saint-Julien AOC, 2ème Cru Classé	£357.95
Chateau Branaire-Ducru, Saint-Julien AOC, 4ème Cru Classé	£285.95
Chateau Prieuré-Lichine, Margaux AOC, 4ème Cru Classé	£285.95
Ségla, Margaux AOC	£199.95
Chateau La Lagune, Haut Médoc AOC, 3ème Cru Classé	£278.95
Chateau Potensac, Médoc AOC	£199.95
Chateau Caronne Sainte Gemme, Médoc AOC	£176.95
Chateau Lagrange, Pomerol AOC	£186.95
Chateau La Pointhe, Pomerol AOC	£222.95
Chateau Balestard-La-Tourneille, Saint-Emilion Grand Cru AOC, Grand Cru Classé	£237.95
Chateau Soutard, Saint-Emilion Grand Cru AOC, Grand Cru Classé	£211.95
Chateau Larmande, Saint-Emilion Grand Cru AOC, Grand Cru Classé	£260.95

THE SUNDAY TIMES
WINE CLUB OFFER
INCLUDES
SIX MONTHS' FREE
MEMBERSHIP
OF THE
SUNDAY TIMES
WINE CLUB

To place your order or request the latest edition of the Fine Wine List, please call Jon Swann, Ed Wells or Mark Lyford on 0118 903 0800 (please quote WE59) who will be happy to assist you. Call between 8am and 5pm Monday to Friday (outside these hours please leave your details with voicemail) or email jonswann@directwines.co.uk.

Readers calling from the Republic of Ireland, please call 00 44 118 903 0800 and quote WE72.

0118 903 0800

FREE UK DELIVERY

The Sunday Times Wine Club, New Aquitaine House, Exeter Way, Teale, Reading, RG7 4ZJ Telephone 0118 903 0800

ion

...the film 'The Thin Red Line'...

...the film 'The Thin Red Line'...

...the film 'The Thin Red Line'...

...the film 'The Thin Red Line'...

...the film 'The Thin Red Line'...

...the film 'The Thin Red Line'...

...the film 'The Thin Red Line'...

Absolutely abnormal and super: a tribute

He was absolutely abnormal and super, recalled old friend Anthony Blond. "He was on a huge scale... like Alexander the Great," he added later. This set the tone for the Real James Goldsmith (Channel 4, Sunday). The programme was not uncritical. Richard Ingrams, the former Private Eye Editor whom Goldsmith tried to get imprisoned, was allowed to put in his three half-pennies. But most of the doubts about this bizarre and often menacing figure were contained in Leone Jameson's densely packed commentary, read with his curious, rippling, plums-in-the-mouth precision by Simon Callow. All the other contributors were falling over each other to tell us a character "Jimmy" was, how passionate, how larger than life. It got like one of those Hollywood "tribute" shows, where we are told what a "huge, huge star" someone was by a chorus of other huge, huge stars. For stars substitute super-rich, far-right "mavericks", though "lonies" often seemed nearer the mark. Goldsmith's life, his obsession with gambling, his desire for revenge on the British Establishment who ostracised his father during the Great War and on his first wife's family of snobbish Bolivian mine-owners, his pioneering of the most predatory forms of capitalism, his sexual profligacy and his multiple families, was always the stuff of newspaper title-tattle. Goldsmith turned them into national issues, first by the unprecedented ferocity of his action against Private Eye and later by his forming the Referendum Party. Yet for all his wealth and drive, he could only wound, not destroy, his targets. Two anecdotes stood out. He took revenge on his hated Eton housemaster by buying a pile of energy and aggression, this programme left us with a picture of a man maddened by the realisation of his own mediocrity. It was suggested that Rhinoceros (ITV, Sunday) was a new departure for Robson Green, no longer the juvenile heart-throb, but taking an older, heavier role. True, he played Michael Flynn, a middle-aged former football star, whose career had been ruined by injury. As in Reckless he gets the beautiful older woman (there are a lot of dramas on this theme these days) only this time he's older, too. Actually, Green has always played the same part. From the chirpy auxiliary of Casualty, Soldier, Soldier and A Touch of Evil he has managed to blend casual working-class machismo with a buried, vulnerable sensitivity. It is a potent mix, an archetype almost, and a gift to casting directors. The press information described Rhinoceros as a "romantic comedy", which was puzzling because there were almost no jokes. It was actually a very serious and thoughtful piece, based on a true story, apparently, though how closely I have no idea. Flynn has divorced his wife Julie (Niamh Cusack) and has not seen her mentally handicapped son Danny for many years. When Danny gets lost in the Welsh countryside on his first unaccompanied journey from his special school to visit Julie in London, the couple end up scouring the mountains for him in Flynn's red Porsche. After exorcising their old rages and resentments, a heart-warming reconciliation inevitably follows. But potentially soppy romance was lifted by the exploration of their emotional reactions to their child's disability and by their growing awareness of what was going on in Danny's head, particularly his stubborn determination to achieve something by himself. He was, in fact, absolutely abnormal and super. Like Guy Fawkes after his arrest, it was perhaps unnecessary, elongated, but whatever other drive it broadcasts, ITV still seems to make these middlebrow dramas more convincingly than any other channel. After their successful pilot last summer Vic Reeves and Bob Mortimer returned for a full series of Families at War (BBC1, Saturday). From Opportunity Knocks to Stars in Their Eyes there is a long tradition of talent shows patronising the pants off the participants. It was hard to see how the Georgie pan-fighters would cope, given their record for humiliating celebrities on Shooting Stars. In the event it works superbly, because nobody pretends to take any of it seriously. The families seem to be drawn from places most of us have heard of, but never actually visited. The Feltons (hair-waxing, netball hoops and a motorbike stunt) came from Tottenham. The Greaveses from Worsop provided a schoolboy boxer who punched a garden shed to bits and a man who ran on a treadmill, carrying Leo Sayer on his back as he sang When I Need You. It was absolutely abnormal and super, and we sat in a row like the Simpsons, chortling inanely.

REVIEW

Paul Hoggart

- BBC1
- 6.00am Business Breakfast (20314)
 - 7.00am BBC Breakfast News (1) (41763)
 - 9.00am Killy (1) (903218)
 - 9.45am Can't Cook, Won't Cook (1) (258473)
 - 10.15am The Vanessa Show (1) (1045742)
 - 11.00am News: Weather (1) (5982522)
 - 11.05am City Hospital News Series. Gaby Roslin and the team witness life at Southampton General (1) (919251)
 - 11.55am News: Weather (1) (5796134)
 - 12.00am Going for a Song (7584021)
 - 12.25pm Wipeout (4534706)
 - 12.50am The Weather Show (1) (76950183)
 - 1.00am One O'Clock News (1) (11522)
 - 1.30am Regional News: Weather (58037826)
 - 1.40am Neighbours (1) (1628725)
 - 2.05am Inside (1) (1716183)
 - 2.55am Through the Keyhole (1) (2142638)
 - 3.25am Children's BBC: Playdays (8572522)
 - 3.45am Bob the Builder (4106581)
 - 3.55am Wildlife (7141183) 4.00am Dodger & Badger (585270) 4.15am Casper (584763) 4.35am 50/50 (7577367) 5.00am Newsround (5509164) 5.10am Blue Peter (2360783)
 - 5.35am Neighbours (1) (1155218)
 - 6.00am Six O'Clock News: Weather (1) (367)
 - 6.30am Regional News Magazine (947)
 - 7.00am A Question of Sport: Sporting Heroes. Special George Best, Jenny Pittman, Dixie Bird and line Nastase take part in the light-hearted sports quiz (1) (8744)
 - 7.30am QED Special: The story of the rescued chimp Trudy, who left the headlines when her owner, Mary Chappell, was accused of cruelly towards it (1) (831)
 - 8.00am EastEnders: Pat springs a surprise on Roy (1) (4184)

- BBC2
- 7.00am Children's BBC Breakfast Show: Polka Dot Shorts (5437960) 7.10am The Silver Brumby (989304) 7.35am Top Cat (8070164) 8.00am The Bots Movie (5300676) 8.25am Help! It's the Hair Bear Bunch (5040528) 8.45am Blue Peter (8781473) 9.10am Goodnight and Good Chassis (7019164) 9.35am Student Bodies (8774066) 10.00am Teletubbies (56793) 10.30am FILM: Moon Pilot (2028720) 12.10pm The Car's the Star (725780) 12.30am Working Lunch (52118) 1.00am Juniper Jungle (38262305)
 - 1.10am The Leisure Hour (1) (1871909)
 - 2.10am Awash with Colour: Dermot Cavanagh's (5894365)
 - 2.40am News: Weather (1) (3354909)
 - 2.45am One Cup with Steve Davis: The 1994 World Championship final (1) (183541)
 - 3.25am News: Weather (1) (5840947)
 - 3.30am The Village (1) (2579947)
 - 3.55am Kaye Advick shows (2554838)
 - 4.25am Ready, Steady, Cook (1) (7162589)
 - 4.55am Esther's Story (1) (9354299)
 - 5.30am Whose House? (118)
 - 6.00am Hit, Miss or Maybe: Zoo Ball and guess review three pop videos (1) (859218)
 - 6.15am The Simpsons: Lisa takes offence at a new doll (1) (331184)
 - 6.35am The Simpsons: Nasa decides to send an average American into space as a publicity stunt (1) (323270)

- HTV
- 5.30am ITV Morning News (25386)
 - 6.00am GMTV (2971928)
 - 9.25am Trisha (1) (3624299)
 - 10.30am This Morning (1) (49231367)
 - 12.15pm HTV News (1) (718751)
 - 12.30am ITV Lunchtime News (1) (2718305)
 - 12.55am Shortland Street: Billy meets an old friend (1877183)
 - 1.30am Lie Detector (1) (16284909)
 - 1.55am The Jerry Springer Show: Outrageous talk show (1) (5142367)
 - 2.40am Wheel of Fortune (1) (2131522)
 - 3.10am ITV News Headlines (1) (5849218)
 - 3.15am HTV News (1) (5845858)
 - 3.20am City: Maitre (583102) 3.25am Kipper (583725) 3.35am The Adventures of Captain Pugwash (5876183) 3.50am Oogy and the Cockroaches (587676) 4.05am The New Scooby Doo Mysteries (7155299) 4.30am Poltergeist (270)
 - 5.00am Lie Detector (1) (3676)
 - 5.30am WEST: Garden Calendar: Horticultural tips (1) (522)
 - 5.30am WALES: House to House: A retired couple's home in Llanymy, Mid Glamorgan (1) (522)
 - 5.58am HTV Weather (59102)
 - 6.00am HTV News (1) (763)
 - 6.25am WALES: Party Election Broadcast by the Wales Labour Party (341676)
 - 6.29am Crimestoppers (341676)
 - 6.30am ITV Evening News: Weather (1) (265)
 - 7.00am Wish You Were Here? Anita Turner visits Australia, Judith Chalmers relaxes in Co. Kerry, Ireland, and Nick Knowles explores the Bahamas, while Marti Roberts checks out Spain's Costa del Sol (1) (3812)
 - 7.30am Coronation Street: Leanne blurts out the truth to Gail (1) (252)
 - 8.00am Neighbours: From Hell: Footage and accounts of bizarre and bitter neighbourly disputes (1) (2560)
 - 8.30am Cop Shop: It's Christmas, but for staff at Gosport police station it's business as usual (58) (1) (8367)

- CENTRAL
- As HTV West except:
 - 12.20-12.30pm Central News: Weather (930590)
 - 12.55am Lie Detector (2793096)
 - 1.25am The Jerry Springer Show (4967812)
 - 2.10-2.40am Lie Detector (89930183)
 - 3.15-3.20am Central News: Weather (5845858)
 - 5.30am Shortland Street (522)
 - 6.00-6.30am Central News at Six: Weather (763)
 - 11.20-11.30am Central News: Weather (777299)
 - 4.35am Central Jobfinder '99 (5155810)
 - 5.20-5.30am Asian Eye (9589394)
- As HTV West except:
- 12.15pm Westcountry News (7187251)
 - 12.27-12.30am Numbertime (8302099)
 - 12.55-1.25am Westcountry Live: Weather (2793096)
 - 1.25am The Jerry Springer Show (4967812)
 - 2.10-2.40am Lie Detector (89930183)
 - 3.15-3.20am Westcountry News: Weather (5845858)
 - 4.58-5.00am Birthday People (7097724)
 - 5.30am Animal SOS (522)
 - 6.00-6.30am Westcountry Live: Weather (763)
 - 11.20-11.30am Westcountry News: Weather (777299)

- CHANNEL 4
- 5.25am Alfie Atkins (9695763)
 - 5.35am The Pink Panther (2818034)
 - 5.55am Sesame Street (1) (5077367)
 - 7.00am The Big Breakfast (34473)
 - 9.00am The Big Breakfast (3286034)
 - 9.05am Saved by the Bell (1) (7012251)
 - 9.30am Sam and Max (36270)
 - 10.00am CatDog (1) (3961928)
 - 10.20am Boy Meets World (1) (3970676)
 - 10.45am Moesha (1) (265763)
 - 11.15am The Big Breakfast (6427676)
 - 11.30am Taste of the Times (4/6) (1) (5638)
 - 12.00am Sesame Street (1) (82152)
 - 12.30am Bewitched (1) (9063812)
 - 1.05am Caroline in the City: Annie's parents separate (9733813)
 - 1.35am Capuchin Monkey (13017947)
 - 1.40am By the Light of the Silvery Moon (1959) A soldier returns from the First World War and causes disruption in the sweetshop's household. Musical, starring Doris Day and Gordon MacRae. Directed by David Butler (1) (32386638)
 - 3.30am Collectors' Lot: Special edition focusing on super-sleuth memorabilia (1) (883)
 - 4.00am Fifteen to One (1) (528)
 - 4.30am Countdown (1) (7594034)
 - 4.55am Mervyn Williams (1) (3493367)
 - 5.30am Pet Rescue (1) (164)
 - 6.00am Roseanne (1) (305)
 - 6.30am Hollyoaks: Lucy gets a shock (1) (657)
 - 7.00am Channel 4 News: Weather (1) (600980)
 - 7.50am The A-Z of Scotland New series. An alphabet of Scottish diversity (1) (239812)
 - 8.00am CHOICE Mystery of the Mummies: A transcontinental expedition to explore possible links between Ancient Egypt and mummies found in the Canaries (1) (8473)

- CHANNEL 5
- 6.00am 5 News and Sport Headlines, sport and business (5832588)
 - 7.00am Worldwide: The founder of modern chemistry and the man who first isolated oxygen (1) (7282305)
 - 7.30am Milkshake! (2570763)
 - 7.35am Muppet Babies (1) (4801676)
 - 8.00am Havalakozoo (1) (8781909)
 - 8.30am Dappledawn Farm (1) (8773980)
 - 9.00am What Is Good For You? (1) (4645305)
 - 9.25am Russell Grant's Postcards (312473)
 - 9.30am The Oprah Winfrey Show (6701657)
 - 10.20am Sunset Beach: Virginia gets ready to leave town (1) (4187331)
 - 11.10am CHOICE News at Noon (1) (8784096)
 - 12.30pm Family Affairs: Maggie returns Ben's gift (1) (896675)
 - 1.00am The Bold and the Beautiful: Maggie confides in James (1) (2781676)
 - 1.30am The Roseanne Show: Entertainment show; 5 News Update (8336116)
 - 2.00am 100 Per Cent Gold (2085883)
 - 3.30am Good Afternoon Lifestyle magazine; 5 News Update (8678763)
 - 3.30am Storm and Sorrow (1990) Lori Singer stars as an American mountaineer whose attempts to scale a peak in the former Soviet Union are hampered by squabbles with her team-mates. Directed by Richard A. Colla (1) (2845251)
 - 5.20am 5 News (59102305)
 - 5.25am Russell Grant's Postcards: The Grindwold ice sculptures (58101676)
 - 5.30am 100 Per Cent Gold (2085883)
 - 6.00am 5 News: Weather: Kirsty Young rounds up the day's stories (1) (8079473)
 - 6.30am Family Affairs: Pete offers a solution to Gabby's dilemma (1) (600725)
 - 7.00am Knight Rider: Michael and KITT help truckers who have been hijacked and had their cargoes stolen (1) (2069609)
 - 7.30am Animal Marvels: A close-up look at the common garden snail (1) (6066909)
 - 8.00am Instant Gardens: The experts help a couple to overhaul their high-maintenance garden, and install a pond with a timber platform (1) (2006657)
 - 8.30am Wildlife Police: New series. Cameras follow Wildlife Police police officers and Special Operations Units from the RSPB and RSPCA as they fight the ever-growing problem of crimes against nature (1/6) (1) (208184)
 - 9.00am Deadly Sins (1995) Premiers. A deputy sheriff is assigned to investigate the disappearance of 11 pupils from an all-girl Catholic school, but as he delves deeper, revelations come to light which place his life in danger. Thriller, starring David Keith, Alyssa Milano, Terry David Mullen and Corie Clark. Directed by Michael Robinson (1) (49122831)
 - 10.50am Dr Fox's Chart Update (8232367)
 - 10.55am Great Balls of Fire! (1989) Dennis Quaid stars in this exuberant rock 'n' roll biopic of the hell-raising 1950s singer and pianist Jerry Lee Lewis. With Wanda Ryder and Alec Baldwin. Directed by Jon McBride (1) (20662368)
 - 12.25am Ice Hockey: NHL Action from the NHL (8082961)
 - 4.00am FedEx Championship Series: Indycar racing (8664394)
 - 5.30am 100 Per Cent Gold (6703139)

Sally and Bob Skiba go self-catering in the French Alps (8.30pm)

Bhal Puran Singh (centre), the newly appointed Jathedar Akal Takht (7pm)

Bernard Matthews, who has made a fortune from turkeys (8pm)

A base jumper leaps off a cliff, just for the thrill of it (9pm)

Equinox: First of a new series, offering perceptions of danger (1) (6909)

Equinox: First of a new series, offering perceptions of danger (1) (6909)

- WALES
- 9.30-9.35am Party Election Broadcast (126473)
 - 10.45am International News V (131218) 11.25am Animal Police (1) (566338) 11.55am FILM: Kiss and Tell (1) (565096) 1.25am News: Headlines and Weather (1) (5816023) 1.30-6.00am BBC News 24 (8907110)

- CHOICE
- 7.00am CHOICE Slits: Two-part documentary marking the 300th anniversary of the sacred order of the Khales. Concludes later tonight (1/2) (1) (4657)
 - 8.00am Disaster: The story of one of the world's worst radioactive spills - the Mecken disaster of 1983 (1) (5034)
 - 8.30am Food and Drink: Oz Clarke and Jilly Gooden taste-test beers (1) (4541)
 - 9.00am CHOICE Great Expectations: Tony Merchant's adaptation of Charles Dickens's much-loved novel. Concludes tomorrow (1/2) (1) (8184454)
 - 10.30am Video Nation Shorts (1) (436763)
 - 10.40am Newsnight with Kirsty Wark (1) (853929)
 - 11.25am Slits: The concluding part of the documentary focuses on modern-day Sikhism (2/2) (1) (597980)
 - 11.55am Ice Skating: The World Championship Gala From Helsinki (395560)
 - 12.25am Weather (2191042)
 - 12.30am BBC Learning Zone: Open University: Building the Perfect Beast 1.20pm Open Late: Science 1.30pm Women and Allegory: Gender and Sculpture 2.00pm Exam Revision: GCSE: Biology Revision: Geography 2.40pm Languages: Get By in German 5.00pm Business and Training: Skills for Work - Team Working 5.45pm Open University: Venice and Antwerp - Forms of Religion 6.10pm The Portuguese Voyages of Discovery 6.35pm Open Advice: The Three Degrees

- BRITAIN'S RICHEST PEOPLE '99
- A privileged peek into the lives of the country's most affluent entrepreneurs, revealing who they are and how they made their money (1) (7097)
 - 10.00am Wonderful News: Henry Gensy an ultimatum (6/7) (1) (9134)
 - 11.00am ITV Nightly News: Weather (1) (88890)
 - 11.20am HTV News and Weather (1) (777299)
 - 11.30am Fitz US version of Cracker, starring Robert Pastorelli (1) (85541)
 - 12.30am Football Extra: Football League highlights (81987)
 - 1.30am World Football (1) (41597)
 - 2.00pm FILM: Brazilian Grand Prix Full rerun of the race from Sao Paulo (1) (8350708)
 - 4.35am Soundtrack (8394674)
 - 4.50am ITV Nightline (74375752)
 - 5.00am Coronation Street (1) (89961)

- As HTV West except:
- 12.15pm-12.30am Meridian News: Weather (7187251) 5.30am A Weekend's Work (3/7) (522) 6.00-6.30am Meridian Tonight (1) (763) 7.29-7.30am Meridian Weather (810541) 11.20am Meridian News: Weather (1) (763) 11.19am Animal SOS (522) 11.20-11.30am Animal SOS (522) 11.30-11.40am Animal SOS (522) 11.40-11.50am Animal SOS (522) 11.50-12.00am Animal SOS (522) 12.00-12.10am Animal SOS (522) 12.10-12.20am Animal SOS (522) 12.20-12.30am Animal SOS (522) 12.30-12.40am Animal SOS (522) 12.40-12.50am Animal SOS (522) 12.50-1.00am Animal SOS (522) 1.00-1.10am Animal SOS (522) 1.10-1.20am Animal SOS (522) 1.20-1.30am Animal SOS (522) 1.30-1.40am Animal SOS (522) 1.40-1.50am Animal SOS (522) 1.50-2.00am Animal SOS (522) 2.00-2.10am Animal SOS (522) 2.10-2.20am Animal SOS (522) 2.20-2.30am Animal SOS (522) 2.30-2.40am Animal SOS (522) 2.40-2.50am Animal SOS (522) 2.50-3.00am Animal SOS (522) 3.00-3.10am Animal SOS (522) 3.10-3.20am Animal SOS (522) 3.20-3.30am Animal SOS (522) 3.30-3.40am Animal SOS (522) 3.40-3.50am Animal SOS (522) 3.50-4.00am Animal SOS (522) 4.00-4.10am Animal SOS (522) 4.10-4.20am Animal SOS (522) 4.20-4.30am Animal SOS (522) 4.30-4.40am Animal SOS (522) 4.40-4.50am Animal SOS (522) 4.50-5.00am Animal SOS (522) 5.00-5.10am Animal SOS (522) 5.10-5.20am Animal SOS (522) 5.20-5.30am Animal SOS (522) 5.30-5.40am Animal SOS (522) 5.40-5.50am Animal SOS (522) 5.50-6.00am Animal SOS (522) 6.00-6.10am Animal SOS (522) 6.10-6.20am Animal SOS (522) 6.20-6.30am Animal SOS (522) 6.30-6.40am Animal SOS (522) 6.40-6.50am Animal SOS (522) 6.50-7.00am Animal SOS (522) 7.00-7.10am Animal SOS (522) 7.10-7.20am Animal SOS (522) 7.20-7.30am Animal SOS (522) 7.30-7.40am Animal SOS (522) 7.40-7.50am Animal SOS (522) 7.50-8.00am Animal SOS (522) 8.00-8.10am Animal SOS (522) 8.10-8.20am Animal SOS (522) 8.20-8.30am Animal SOS (522) 8.30-8.40am Animal SOS (522) 8.40-8.50am Animal SOS (522) 8.50-9.00am Animal SOS (522) 9.00-9.10am Animal SOS (522) 9.10-9.20am Animal SOS (522) 9.20-9.30am Animal SOS (522) 9.30-9.40am Animal SOS (522) 9.40-9.50am Animal SOS (522) 9.50-10.00am Animal SOS (522) 10.00-10.10am Animal SOS (522) 10.10-10.20am Animal SOS (522) 10.20-10.30am Animal SOS (522) 10.30-10.40am Animal SOS (522) 10.40-10.50am Animal SOS (522) 10.50-11.00am Animal SOS (522) 11.00-11.10am Animal SOS (522) 11.10-11.20am Animal SOS (522) 11.20-11.30am Animal SOS (522) 11.30-11.40am Animal SOS (522) 11.40-11.50am Animal SOS (522) 11.50-12.00am Animal SOS (522) 12.00-12.10am Animal SOS (522) 12.10-12.20am Animal SOS (522) 12.20-12.30am Animal SOS (522) 12.30-12.40am Animal SOS (522) 12.40-12.50am Animal SOS (522) 12.50-1.00am Animal SOS (522) 1.00-1.10am Animal SOS (522) 1.10-1.20am Animal SOS (522) 1.20-1.30am Animal SOS (522) 1.30-1.40am Animal SOS (522) 1.40-1.50am Animal SOS (522) 1.50-2.00am Animal SOS (522) 2.00-2.10am Animal SOS (522) 2.10-2.20am Animal SOS (522) 2.20-2.30am Animal SOS (522) 2.30-2.40am Animal SOS (522) 2.40-2.50am Animal SOS (522) 2.50-3.00am Animal SOS (522) 3.00-3.10am Animal SOS (522) 3.10-3.20am Animal SOS (522) 3.20-3.30am Animal SOS (522) 3.30-3.40am Animal SOS (522) 3.40-3.50am Animal SOS (522) 3.50-4.00am Animal SOS (522) 4.00-4.10am Animal SOS (522) 4.10-4.20am Animal SOS (522) 4.20-4.30am Animal SOS (522) 4.30-4.40am Animal SOS (522) 4.40-4.50am Animal SOS (522) 4.50-5.00am Animal SOS (522) 5.00-5.10am Animal SOS (522) 5.10-5.20am Animal SOS (522) 5.20-5.30am Animal SOS (522) 5.30-5.40am Animal SOS (522) 5.40-5.50am Animal SOS (522) 5.50-6.00am Animal SOS (522) 6.00-6.10am Animal SOS (522) 6.10-6.20am Animal SOS (522) 6.20-6.30am Animal SOS (522) 6.30-6.40am Animal SOS (522) 6.40-6.50am Animal SOS (522) 6.50-7.00am Animal SOS (522) 7.00-7.10am Animal SOS (522) 7.10-7.20am Animal SOS (522) 7.20-7.30am Animal SOS (522) 7.30-7.40am Animal SOS (522) 7.40-7.50am Animal SOS (522) 7.50-8.00am Animal SOS (522) 8.00-8.10am Animal SOS (522) 8.10-8.20am Animal SOS (522) 8.20-8.30am Animal SOS (522) 8.30-8.40am Animal SOS (522) 8.40-8.50am Animal SOS (522) 8.50-9.00am Animal SOS (522) 9.00-9.10am Animal SOS (522) 9.10-9.20am Animal SOS (522) 9.20-9.30am Animal SOS (522) 9.30-9.40am Animal SOS (522) 9.40-9.50am Animal SOS (522) 9.50-10.00am Animal SOS (522) 10.00-10.10am Animal SOS (522) 10.10-10.20am Animal SOS (522) 10.20-10.30am Animal SOS (522) 10.30-10.40am Animal SOS (522) 10.40-10.50am Animal SOS (522) 10.50-11.00am Animal SOS (522) 11.00-11.10am Animal SOS (522) 11.10-11.20am Animal SOS (522) 11.20-11.30am Animal SOS (522) 11.30-11.40am Animal SOS (522) 11.40-11.50am Animal SOS (522) 11.50-12.00am Animal SOS (522) 12.00-12.10am Animal SOS (522) 12.10-12.20am Animal SOS (522) 12.20-12.30am Animal SOS (522) 12.30-12.40am Animal SOS (522) 12.40-12.50am Animal SOS (522) 12.50-1.00am Animal SOS (522) 1.00-1.10am Animal SOS (522) 1.10-1.20am Animal SOS (522) 1.20-1.30am Animal SOS (522) 1.30-1.40am Animal SOS (522) 1.40-1.50am Animal SOS (522) 1.50-2.00am Animal SOS (522) 2.00-2.10am Animal SOS (522) 2.10-2.20am Animal SOS (522) 2.20-2.30am Animal SOS (522) 2.30-2.40am Animal SOS (522) 2.40-2.50am Animal SOS (522) 2.50-3.00am Animal SOS (522) 3.00-3.10am Animal SOS (522) 3.10-3.20am Animal SOS (522) 3.20-3.30am Animal SOS (522) 3.30-3.40am Animal SOS (522) 3.40-3.50am Animal SOS (522) 3.50-4.00am Animal SOS (522) 4.00-4.10am Animal SOS (522) 4.10-4.20am Animal SOS (522) 4.20-4.30am Animal SOS (522) 4.30-4.40am Animal SOS (522) 4.40-4.50am Animal SOS (522) 4.50-5.00am Animal SOS (522) 5.00-5.10am Animal SOS (522) 5.10-5.20am Animal SOS (522) 5.20-5.30am Animal SOS (522) 5.30-5.40am Animal SOS (522) 5.40-5.50am Animal SOS (522) 5.50-6.00am Animal SOS (522) 6.00-6.10am Animal SOS (522) 6.10-6.20am Animal SOS (522) 6.20-6.30am Animal SOS (522) 6.30-6.40am Animal SOS (522) 6.40-6.50am Animal SOS (522) 6.50-7.00am Animal SOS (522) 7.00-7.10am Animal SOS (522) 7.10-7.20am Animal SOS (522) 7.20-7.30am Animal SOS (522) 7.30-7.40am Animal SOS (522) 7.40-7.50am Animal SOS (522) 7.50-8.00am Animal SOS (522) 8.00-8.10am Animal SOS (522) 8.10-8.20am Animal SOS (522) 8.20-8.30am Animal SOS (522) 8.30-8.40am Animal SOS (522) 8.40-8.50am Animal SOS (522) 8.50-9.00am Animal SOS (522) 9.00-9.10am Animal SOS (522) 9.10-9.20am Animal SOS (522) 9.20-9.30am Animal SOS (522) 9.30-9.40am Animal SOS (522) 9.40-9.50am Animal SOS (522) 9.50-10.00am Animal SOS (522) 10.00-10.10am Animal SOS (522) 10.10-10.20am Animal SOS (522) 10.20-10.30am Animal SOS (522) 10.30-10.40am Animal SOS (522) 1

WAR CRY 49

Roger Bootle
on paying for defence

BUSINESS

LEGACY 50

Tiny Rowland's memory lives on in Zimbabwe

BUSINESS EDITOR Patience Wheatcroft

MONDAY APRIL 12 1999

Telecom Italia seeks rescuer after defence farce

By CARL MORTISHED
INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS EDITOR

TELECOM ITALIA is in search of a white knight following the total collapse of its defence strategy over the weekend.

Italy's biggest takeover battle descended into farce when the former state telephone monopoly failed to round up enough investors to consider its plans to fend off a $65 billion (£40 billion) bid from Olivetti. Speculation was mounting over the weekend that other European telephone utilities, such as BT or Cable & Wireless, might enter the fray with a bid or a strategic alliance to trump Olivetti's €11.50 per share offer, widely viewed as undervaluing the company. BT previously denied it was interested but the sudden reversal in Telecom's fortunes may enduce the British company. SBC Communications, the US company is also mooted as a partner. Only 22 per cent of investors registered their presence at an extraordinary meeting in Turin on Saturday, well short of the 33 per cent needed to table a vote on the defence strategy of Franco Bernabè, Telecom's managing director. Embarrassment at the no-shows was compounded by earlier indications on Friday from Telecom Italia that it had secured the necessary quorum. Sources close to the company were yesterday pointing fingers at the government, which owns 3.5 per cent of Telecom and is widely viewed in the Italian media as supporting the Olivetti camp. "They did not even register their stake," said one source close to the company. Telecom Italia said it would consider the Olivetti bid when the offer document became available, expected in two weeks after it is reviewed by the stock market regulator, Consob. The company also said it "will evaluate any proposals which the market might present and mandate the chief executive officer to carry out any analysis in this regard". Advisers to the company confirmed that Telecom Italia was throwing the door open to interested third-party bidders. One banking source indicated: "The right message to the market is that this is an important telecoms company with attractive assets. A little local difficulty could prompt others to come forward." The government will play a key role in Telecom's future as it retains a golden share. Massimo D'Alema, the Prime Minister, previously hinted that a foreign bidder would not be welcome. Telecom Italia is not ruling out calling a further meeting to consider the third pillar of its strategy, the buyout of the outstanding shares in TIM, its mobile phone associate. However, the failure to secure a quorum on proposals to enfranchise savings shares and a share buy-back make a further meeting unlikely.

Markets get jitters after Compaq blow

By ALASDAIR MURRAY

INTERNATIONAL markets are braced for a nervous start to the week after a surprise profit warning from Compaq, the world's biggest personal computer manufacturer, raised a large question mark over the health of the US technology sector.

In an after-hours trading statement on Friday, Compaq said first-quarter profits were likely to total only $9.4 billion, about half the level Wall Street analysts had been expecting. The news sparked a rapid markdown in technology stocks, a sell-off that is expected to gather speed today.

Although the Dow Jones industrial average recorded solid gains of 3.5 per cent last week, finally establishing itself firmly above the 10,000 level, analysts are concerned that share price rises in the index have been unevenly spread.

A flood of first quarter earnings is due in the next couple of weeks, and further disappointment could end the rally that has driven the Dow more than 10 per cent higher this year.

European computer companies such as Olivetti, Siemens and STMicro could also be caught in the firing line, while European markets have been heavily reliant on the lead given by a buoyant Dow this year.

Compaq shares fell sharply in after-hours trading on Friday, sliding to $26.25 from the official closing price of $30.94. Rival computer hardware manufacturer Dell lost 8 per cent while Intel, the computer chip-maker, slid 3.5 per cent.

Microsoft, the software manufacturer, declined by a more modest 1.5 per cent. However, shares in IBM and Hewlett-Packard, Compaq's two biggest rivals, were not traded on Friday and are expected to suffer heavy losses today.

Compaq blamed the profits warning on an "unfavourable sales mix", with lower sales of high-margin items such as computer servers and increasing competition hitting prices.

Analysts believe the problems stem from an unexpected slowdown in the business sector computer market, which has left Compaq with high stock levels.

Compaq is not the only computer manufacturer to have disappointed in the past few weeks. 3Com slumped 10 per cent last month after giving warning of lower profits, while in February Advanced Micro Devices, which makes clones of Intel devices, also issued a profit warning.

However, not all analysts believe that Compaq's problems are shared by the sector and point out that the shares are already well below the January high of $50 because of concerns about its performance. Hugh Johnson, chief investment officer of First Albany Corp, said: "You've seen solid underperformance from Compaq on many days when IBM, Dell, Cisco and Microsoft have been strong. The initial reaction will be negative, but I think the market will sort out the group."

George Walker in Moscow, where he will run a Western-style lottery alongside his system for betting on British horses

Walker wins Russian lottery

FROM JON ASHWORTH
IN MOSCOW

GEORGE WALKER, the former Brent Walker chairman and one-time champion boxer, has won the licence to set up and run the first Western-style lottery in the former Soviet Union.

TeleTot, offering weekly jackpots of $1.5 million, will go live in Moscow later this year, backed by all-British technology. Ticket numbers will be relayed via satellites to a computer centre in Bristol, using a system which currently allows Russian punters to bet on British horses and greyhounds. Money raised will be ploughed into good causes in and around Moscow.

The deal is a coup for Mr Walker, 70 this week, who has shrugged off his past troubles to make a slow fight back to respectability. Thrown out of Brent Walker by the banks, he was declared bankrupt and pursued by the Serious Fraud Office amid allegations of theft and false accounting. Cleared of all charges, he turned his attention to Russia, first importing cigarettes and then bringing racing via satellite. He has rented a house outside Moscow and spends much of his time here, accompanied by his wife Jean.

Lotteries are not new to Russia, but this will be the first to use an online system. Camelot, which runs the UK lottery, had been interested in the Moscow licence. TeleTot will initially cover greater Moscow, with a catchment of 20 million people. It hopes to have 5,000 lottery terminals in place by the end of the year. Tickets will cost 10 roubles (about 13p).

Punters watch the Grand National live in Moscow using the same technology that will make the lottery possible. Commentary is provided by Russian presenters in a studio in East London. Mr Walker said: "We've got an operation going that's smarter and more sophisticated than the existing one in the UK and far better than the one in America."

Mr Walker is chief executive of Premier Telesports, which hopes to have 1,000 tote betting machines in Moscow by the end of the year. Premier's backers include George Soros, the billionaire Wall Street investor, and Mr Walker hopes to float Premier on Nasdaq within the next two years.

Gaming aside, Mr Walker is eager to participate in the regeneration of Moscow. He has identified a derelict horse-racing track as the potential site for a huge inner-city retail, commercial and residential complex — repeating what he did with Brent Cross in London in 1974.

United criticises Heathrow cutbacks

By ARTHUR LEATHLEY
AVIATION CORRESPONDENT

THE world's biggest airline has issued a blunt warning to ministers not to scale down Heathrow's role as the premier airport for international flight connections.

Executives of United Airlines voiced concern that Whitehall officials are investigating ways of reducing dependence on Heathrow for linking European passengers with the US and the Far East.

United's managers say that UK business interests will be damaged if the airport is made to cut a network serving 200 destinations worldwide.

Jon Moss, United's regulatory affairs director, said that UK airlines would suffer most from any reduction of connecting at Heathrow. He said: "It would be a bad mistake. You would minimise the role that UK carriers play in the global market. The economic impact of putting international passengers through is enormous."

"It is inconceivable that people travelling to Europe from the US would be prepared to fly to the Continent for a short flight back to the UK."

Whitehall officials have been considering shifting traffic to other British airports, particularly Gatwick, Stansted and Luton. They have even been told by ministers to consider the possibility of promoting rival foreign airports, such as Paris, Frankfurt and Amsterdam, if Heathrow becomes dangerously congested.

The government rethink is part of a two-year review of airport capacity in South-East England before a decision, expected in 2001, on whether to build a fifth terminal at Heathrow, which is struggling to cope with 60 million passengers a year.

TIMES TWO CROSSWORD

No 1689

ACROSS

- 1 Angry (slang); covered in condensation (7,2)
- 6 Sprite (3)
- 8 Gradually decrease; a safe (5)
- 9 A C20 composer Lord; sounds like stoves (7)
- 10 Occurred (lit) (6)
- 12 Join board; develop friendship (with) (3,2)
- 13 Dickens's Nell; outlaw John (6)
- 14 Clever; shining (6)
- 17 Constellation; has Belt (5)
- 19 Used tongue on; defeated (6)
- 21 Sporting ground (7)
- 22 Painted cherubs (5)
- 23 See other side (abbr) (1,1,1)
- 24 Auld Reekie (9)

DOWN

- 1 Concessions; soaked bread pieces (4)
- 2 Beg (7)
- 3 Damage; deface (3)
- 4 Take desultory interest (in) (6)
- 5 Old soothing medicine (9)
- 6 The chosen (5)
- 7 Open mesh (stocking) fabric (7)
- 11 The sweetbriar; inebriant (anag) (9)
- 13 Gazes starwards; gives admiration (to) (5,2)
- 15 More important (7)
- 16 Former pupils (esp. US) (6)
- 18 Adult insect stage (5)
- 20 (Eg) telescope bowl; scupper (4)
- 22 The local (3)

SOLUTION TO NO 1688

- ACROSS: 1 Ride 3 Compiler 8 Gilt 9 Glorious
11 Revolution 14 Uproar 15 Philip 17 Chimpanzee
20 Language 21 Haze 22 Westerns 23 Edda
DOWN: 1 Rigorous 2 Delivery 4 Oblate 5 Periodical
6 Loom 7 Risk 10 Bleak House 12 Blizzard 13 Ephemera
16 Imogen 18 Glow 19 Ends

SOLUTION TO EASTER MONDAY TIMES TWO JUMBO

- ACROSS: 1 Simon 4 Paralysis 9 Disorganise
15 Architect 16 Voicing 17 Appellate 18 Grandmother's footsteps 19 Vivid 20 Thimble 22 Tempests 23 Free French 26 Resignation 28 Keeping 29 Frame-up
30 Dorsal 32 Perfidious 34 Treatment 37 Cold-shouldering
39 Achievement 41 Replacement 42 Freedom fighters
43 Breathing 45 Auriferous 47 Quotes 50 Athlete 52 Ageless 53 Pessimistic 55 Dutch treat 57 Poniards
59 Anglian 61 Photo 62 Be all fingers and thumbs
64 Guatemala 65 Chicory 66 Tailoring 67 Shop steward
68 Nestlings 69 Built

- DOWN: 1 Slaughtered 2 Mechanics 3 Naiad 4 Phenomenal 5 Ratchet 6 Livestock 7 Stiff-necked 8 Slip of the tongue 9 Digest 10 Stage fright 11 Riposte 12 All over bar the shouting 13 In advance 14 Amend 21 Beggars can't be choosers 24 Hepatitis 25 First-aid 27 Ice floe 29 Frenetic 31 Relapse 33 Free trader 35 Everest 36 Cohesive 37 Cardboard 38 Informed opinion 40 Hum-bugs 44 Guadalupe 46 Fishing rods 48 Second sight 49 Hit-and-miss 51 Hot potato 53 Portrayal 54 Triumvir 56 Rib cage 58 Spartan 60 Placid 61 Pages 63 H-bomb

Sainsbury to cut 350 jobs at head office

By SAIED SHAH

J SAINSBURY, the supermarket group that has been losing market share to competitors, is to announce the redundancy of 650 managerial staff this week as part of a drastic cost-cutting programme.

Some 350 jobs will go at Sainsbury's London headquarters — a tenth of head-office staff — including ten divisional managers and 70 other senior executives. The headquarters of Savacentre, the group's hypermarket-style stores, will see 300 further job losses.

Sainsbury, which has lost the top food retailing spot to Tesco, is due to make a fourth-quarter trading statement on Friday. The supermarket has disappointed the City with an expensive advertising campaign, "Value to Shout About", featuring John Cleese,

Adriano: under pressure which failed to boost sales after its launch last autumn. Sales at Tesco rose by 4 per cent in the 19 weeks to the end of January, against Sainsbury's poor 1.2 per cent rise. Tesco is expected to emphasise its lead when it issues full-year results tomorrow and announces 10,000 new jobs to keep pace with rapid expansion. Friday's statement by Sainsbury is unlikely to cheer investors after bruising from Asda and Tesco price-cutting.

Under pressure to win back market share, Dino Adriano, Sainsbury's chief executive, has decided to attack costs and bureaucracy and to project a new image, to be unveiled with a new logo and a fresh campaign in early summer.

The recent departures of Rosemary Thorne, Sainsbury's finance director, and David Clapham, director of special business and services, are thought to be part of the new strategy. Analysts said that Sainsbury wants a heavy-weight finance director, especially to handle the City.

Companies, page 48

NPC chief takes to the road

By SAIED SHAH

BOB MACKENZIE is quitting as chief executive of National Parking Corporation, the UK car parks and Green Flag business owned by Cendant, the US consumer services group (Saeed Shah writes).

Mr Mackenzie was behind Cendant's failed £450 million bid for the Royal Automobile Club's motoring and breakdown division, which was to be merged with Green Flag, its own breakdown service provider. The deal was blocked by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission in February.

Cendant bought NPC, which owns 500 NCP car parks and Green Flag, last March for £801 million and followed this up with the RAC bid.

Mr Mackenzie, who is to be replaced by Ken Gaskell, chief operating officer, said he wanted to go on to other businesses that needed restructuring.

Underpaid at £1,000 a day

By SAIED SHAH

PITY the poor non-executive director, who is overworked and underpaid at £1,000 a day, according to a report by KPMG, the accountancy firm.

A KPMG survey discovered that non-executive directors now face greater pressures and more demands on their time than at the time of the last such survey by the firm four years ago.

"The job is no longer attending a meeting once a month," Gerry Acher, senior partner at KPMG's London office, said. "It is not the gravy train it once was."

The survey, of 130 non-executive directors, found that they were paid about £15,000 a year for a FTSE 350 company directorship and about £30,000 for a FTSE 100 firm. The workload amounts to about 26 days a year, including preparation time for meetings.

Mr Acher said that there are new pressures in the job stemming from corporate governance issues and a greater requirement to get immersed in the business.

He said: "It is often a very lonely position and the risks to your reputation are immense. For the level of experience required, and bearing in mind that you have to meet your own office expenses, I believe the pay is inadequate."

It is odd, then, that the survey found that these undervalued stalwarts were not doing a terribly good job, especially those outside the FTSE 100.

Non-executive directors are described in the report as "passive receivers of poor-quality information". It adds that "a significant minority do not follow accepted procedures and three-quarters receive no assessment themselves".

Mr Acher said: "Their knowledge of e-commerce and how it affects their business is often woefully inadequate, even within the FTSE 100. They must stop being passive receptors and seek out the information they need to do their job well."

Are they deserving, then, of a pay rise? Mr Acher said that it is precisely because of these shortcomings that the job needs to be better compensated, in order to attract candidates of superior quality.

At present, he said, many potential candidates prefer to work as consultants, which carries no risk to their reputation and brings pay of £1,200 to £1,700 a day.

Mr Acher recommends a rise of a third in directors' compensation, possibly paid in shares, over the next couple of years.

MAKE IT WELL

MOVE IT FAST

Seven hundred successful businesses MAKE IT in Corby. Two-thirds of its one thousand plus new businesses are involved in the manufacture of everything from textiles to chemicals making Corby the economic powerhouse of the East Midlands. Over one hundred distribution companies MOVE IT from Corby - Nation, Europe and Worldwide - capitalising on Corby's unparalleled location at the Live Centre of England. If you want to make it well and move it fast, you'd do well to make a fast move to Corby. In the past decade alone 1000+ businesses already have! For a full information pack phone Jon Blake on 01536 262571 or return the coupon.

Name _____
Company _____
Address _____
Tel _____

To: Corby Industrial Development Centre,
Grosvenor House, George Street,
Corby, Northants NN17 1TZ.
Tel: 01536 262571 Fax: 01536 401374.
E-mail: jblake@corbyworks.demon.co.uk

At The Live Centre CORBY